EX-OFFICER JAILED AFTER EXTORTION FROM ROSEGRANTS

Joseph LaBonde, Former Justice of Peace Had $225 Marked Bills When Seized by Deputies.

'WELL YOU'VE GOT ME,' HIS COMMENT

He Alleged He Was Eye-Witness to 1930 Murders but Later Changed Story — Formal Charge Filed.

Joseph LaBonde, former St. Louis County Justice of the Peace, was arrested yesterday in possession of $225 in marked money which he had received from Mrs. Theresa Rosegrant, mother of Angelo Rosegrant, now serving a 20-year sentence for kidnaping Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, as part payment of $3000 demanded, under threat of exposing her son as a participant in the murder of two gangsters.

The arrest was made on the sidewalk leading from the Rosegrant home at 3098 Lucas and Hunt road by two deputy sheriffs who had secreted themselves in the house and overheard the conversation which preceded payment of the money.

"Well, you've got me," the deputies quoted LaBonde as saying as he reached in his pocket and handed them the money when they approached.

Trying "To Sell Story."

Drawing on his legal knowledge as a former Justice of the Peace, LaBonde later contended, when questioned at Clayton, that he was not guilty of extortion, asserting that he was trying to "sell Mrs. Rosegrant a story" that a newspaper, which he declined to name, "wished to buy." Prosecuting officials did not agree with his legal interpretation, however, and he was charged with third-degree robbery (extortion) in a warrant calling for preliminary hearing next Wednesday before Justice of the Peace John W. Ward Jr. at Clayton.

Nor did LaBonde's experience as a professional bondsman stand him in any better stead. He spent the night at Clayton jail, from which he had obtained the release of many an offender.

The murders in which LaBonde implicated Rosegrant were the machine-gun assassinations of Lester Barth and Dewey Goebel at Columbia and Macklind avenues Nov. 22, 1930. Although he told Mrs. Rosegrant that he sat in an automobile and witnessed the shooting by her son and the late Tommie Hayes, gangster, LaBonde later told the deputies he was not an eyewitness, but that he did have information about the murder.

At one juncture, after explaining that he needed money to go to Arizona for treatment of tuberculosis, he coughed and remarked, with obvious reference to the strength of the evidence against him, "Well, maybe I'll get in a good hospital."

Demand Made by Phone.

Sheriff A. J. Frank assigned Chief Deputy Arnold J. Willmann and Deputy Sheriff Arthur Lazear to the case last Thursday when Mrs. Rosegrant told of a demand for $5000 made for LaBonde in a telephone conversation that day. In her absence, Mrs. Rosegrant said, her daughter, Mrs. Pauline Biggio, answered the phone, and was told to convey the message to her mother.

Sheriff Frank accompanied Mrs. Rosegrant to a bank where the $225 was obtained, serial numbers of the currency noted and additional identifying marks placed on some bills. LaBonde telephoned that he would be at the Rosegrant home Friday but later made an appointment for 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The deputies took their places on the second floor of the house at 6 o'clock.

"Promptly at 9 o'clock" Chief Deputy Willmann told a Post-Dispatch reporter, "we heard someone at the door. LaBonde entered the living room and began conversation with Mrs. Rosegrant and Mrs. Biggio.

Could Hear Distinctly.

"Lazear and I could hear the conversation distinctly as we stood at the head of the stairs. LaBonde told a newspaper had tried to induce him to give an account of the murder for the last 18 months. He told how he had sat in an automobile while Angelo Rosegrant, the late Tommy Hayes and two other gangsters shot two men to death.

"He said that the newspaper had offered him $5000 for the information, that he was in straitened circumstances and that he needed the money to go to Arizona for treatment for tuberculosis. He said that

4 RESCUE PARTIES CUT INTO JUNGLE TO FIND LOST PLANE

Three Survivors of Venezuelan Crash Make Way Out and Give Location.

By the Associated Press.

TUMEREMO, Venezuela, May 1.—Four rescue parties slashed their ways through almost impenetrable jungle southwest of here yesterday in search of a Venezuelan Government airplane, lost when forced down April 23. Two Americans, both injured, were with the plane, according to three survivors who made their way to El Dorado.

Co-Pilot Mendoza, one of the three, said William Armstrong Perry, writer, of Westport, Conn., had a skull injury; Frederic D. Grab of Chicago, United States legation commercial attache at Caracas, suffered contusions.

The search centered about 25 miles south of El Dorado, a small port on the Cuyuni River. Tumeremo is 125 miles southwest of the mouth of the Orinoco River. El Dorado is 25 miles south of Tumeremo.

Of nine persons aboard the plane when it crashed, one was reported killed and two seriously injured.

Mendoza said the plane made a forced landing . the tree-tops with its fuel gone and the ceiling low. It turned over and fell to the jungle floor, and could not be seen from above despite an intensive search from the air.

LIVING COSTS UP 1.7 PCT. DURING LAST THREE MONTHS

Labor Department Reports Particularly Large Advances in Food and Household Furnishings.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Labor Department said today that living costs increased 1.7 per cent in 32 large cities during the three-month period ended March 15. The figure was an average for the cities. In some of them costs increased more, and in others the rise was less than 1.7 per cent. Los Angeles topped the list with an increase of 3.6 per cent.

Secretary of Labor Perkins pointed out that "particularly large advances were noted in the cost of food and household furnishing goods." The cost of food index, based on 1923-25 prices as average, climbed 2.9 per cent as compared with the index for Dec. 15, 1936.

Food prices in Kansas City jumped more than five per cent.

The general index of the cost of living, the bureau said, was 12.5 per cent above the low point of June, 1933, but still 15.9 per cent below December, 1929.

The cost of household furnishings showed an average increase of 4.9 per cent in the 32 cities since last Dec. 15.

GAR WOOD SUED ON INCOME

U. S. Alleges He and Rex Corporation Owe $100,000.

DETROIT, May 1.—United States District Attorney John C. Lehr instituted a suit today against Gar Wood, Detroit industrialist and speedboat driver, and the Rex Corporation for $100,000 which the Government claims represents income-tax deficiencies from 1927 to 1933.

Also named as defendants are Wood's wife, Merlin M. Wood; Glen Basset and W. A. Duerr, receivers for the Rex Corporation, and the Wood Corporation, a holding company.

LONDON STRIKE TIES UP BUSSES ON 240 ROUTES

25,000 Men Out, 5000 Coaches Idle; 58 Per Cent of City's Traffic Is Affected.

WOMEN FAINT IN SUBWAY JAMS

Shorter Hours, Slower Schedules Demanded; Walkout in Midst of Coronation Activities.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 1.—A strike of 25,000 workers on London's big red busses drove this city to bicycles and subways and taxicabs were jammed today. The Government tried to keep other branches of transportation running. The strike came in the midst of putting final touches to the dress-up for the May 12 coronation of King George VI.

About 5000 busses on 240 routes are involved. The busses carry 58 per cent of London area traffic.

Women in high heel shoes pedaled along the streets. Bicycle dealers did a brisk business despite a $1.50 increase in prices. A bike still could be bought for $30.

Tickets but No Ride.

Many women fainted as thousands of persons jammed into subway stations late tonight, police fought with throngs swelled by the Saturday night theater crowds, as they pressed into the stations at Piccadilly Circus, Oxford Circus and Trafalgar Square.

When the Marble Arch underground station was stormed, gates were closed and police admitted passengers only at intervals.

Thousands still were waiting for transportation home when the last subway trains left the West End, many persons with tickets in their hands were unable to get to the packed coaches.

The Government set up a court of inquiry to begin taking evidence on the strike Monday. The deadlock, however, may not be broken until the end of next week, or later.

Demanding Shorter Hours.

Most of the busmen, who are demanding shorter hours and slower schedules, spent the day doing nothing or jeering street car operators. Some of them marched with Laborites and Communists in a May day demonstration at Hyde Park.

Pickets who took up posts at bus garages soon after the strike was called last midnight were watched by bobbies, but there were no disturbances.

Strikes and agitation spread to outlying districts, but the union did not support demands from these areas for a 4-cents-an-hour salary increase. The Mayor of Kent appealed directly to Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin to end an impasse there.

Representatives of 120,000 provincial busmen were asked last night to join a sympathy walkout, but Ernest Bevin, secretary of the Transport and General Workers' Union, said the present strike applied only to the London area.

Mine Workers Restless.

Complicating England's labor picture further, Mine Workers' Federation delegates decided to call a strike May 22 unless the federation is accorded full recognition in the Nottinghamshire coal fields. Capt. H. F. C. Crookshank, Minister of Mines, conferred with mine owners and union leaders in an effort to effect a compromise.

The London strike was called after the London Transport Board refused to accede to union demands for reducing the eight-hour day to seven and one-half hours and for slower schedules. Busmen said the present schedules were impossible to keep in heavy traffic.

One strikers' handbill said: "It is a claim for human life and health against profits."

The transport board has asserted the shorter work day is an economic impossibility.

NEW NEUTRALITY BILL SIGNED AS OLD LAW EXPIRES

PROCLAMATION LISTS FORBIDDEN ARTICLES

Civil War in Spain Stressed — More Discretionary Powers for President Conveyed by Act.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—President Roosevelt signed the Neutrality Act at sea tonight, a few hours before the temporary law was due to expire. The measure, approved finally by Congress Thursday, was rushed by plane, automobile and boat to the destroyer Moffett, headquarters for the presidential fishing party. The Moffett was anchored off Port Aransas, Tex.

The new law broadens restrictions against trade with nations at war and confers on the President discretionary powers in administering the law.

The State Department announced the signing of the bill and made public two proclamations signed by Mr. Roosevelt.

The first proclaimed the existence of a state of civil war in Spain and listed articles of war which may not be shipped to belligerents. The second related to registration of manufacturers, and shippers of arms and war materials.

Mr. Roosevelt signed the new law, the State Department said, five hours before the temporary act expired at midnight.

Principal Difference.

The new law differs principally from the old in its "cash and carry" provision, limited to two years operation. This inaugurates a new aspect of American neutrality policy, under which the President may limit exportation of war materials to belligerents as well as prohibit outright the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war.

The Secretary of State, acting under authority conferred by the President, announced simultaneously that American vessels engaged in commerce with Spain may carry small arms and ammunition necessary for preservation of discipline aboard. The act barred transportation of all arms.

Under the new law, the President may designate materials or commodities not to be transported to belligerents by American merchant vessels. Americans who sell such goods will be required to relinquish title before shipment.

Purchasers will thus be required to pay cash for goods and ship them in their own or other foreign ships. Present restrictions remain in force against Americans traveling on belligerents' ships.

The list of arms, ammunition, and implements of war in the proclamation had been approved by the National Munitions Control Board and is more extensive than the lists contained in previous proclamations. The President listed several new poisonous gases for the first time in any proclamation issued on the subject. He also included a more comprehensive list of propellants and high explosives.

Enumeration of Arms.

The text of the President's proclamation on enumeration of arms, ammunition, and implements of war, shipment of which is forbidden after June 1, is as follows:

(1) Rifles and carbines using ammunition in excess of caliber .22, and barrels for those weapons; (2) machine guns, automatic or autoloading rifles, and machine pistols using ammunition in excess of caliber .22, and barrels for those weapon; (3) Guns, howitzers, and mortars of all calibers, their mountings and barrels; (4) Ammunition in excess of caliber .22 for the arms enumerated under (1) and (2) above, and cartridge cases or bullets for such ammunition; filled and unfilled projectiles for the arms enumerated under (3) above; (5) Grenades, bombs, torpedoes, mines and depth charges, filled or unfilled, and apparatus for their use or discharge; (6) Tanks, military armored vehicles, and armored trains.

SAN FRANCISCO HOTELS TIED UP BY STRIKES

3500 Walkout at 15 Leading Hostelries; 13 Unions Support Action.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—Activities in 15 of San Francisco's largest hotels were brought virtually to a standstill tonight when 3500 hotel employes, supported by 13 unions, walked out.

The striking employes were members of the clerks, cooks, waiters, bartenders, and waitresses unions. They were joined late today in their demands by unions representing milk wagon drivers, bakery wagon drivers, electricians, upholsterers and garage employes.

The unions said they had the sanction of the San Francisco labor council. They alleged that hotel owners had refused to agree to preferential hiring and a five-day week for clerks.

The 15 hotels involved are the Alexander Hamilton, Bellevue, Cathedral Hotel Apartments, Clift, Sir Francis Drake, El Cortez, Fairmont, Mark Hopkins, Palace, Plaza, Whitcomb, William Taylor, St. Francis, Gaylord and Steward.

Tom Nickala, member of the joint strike board, said radio operators in broadcasting stations in hotels were to quit work in sympathy.

The strike board issued permits to baggage men to remove luggage of departing guests. Wholesale butchers were given permits to remove meats in hotel refrigerators.

The strike board announced that any striker refusing to picket would not be reinstated to his job after the strike ended. Electricians were ordered to pull light and power switches, as they left work, to stop elevators and shut off lights.

Pull out patrols, including one representative from each union, were organized and sent to each of the 15 hotels.

The strike call was issued after a conference with Mayor Angelo Rossi, who urged union representatives and spokesmen for the hotels to continue negotiations for a week.

Union representatives, after charging bad faith by employers in reaching an agreement April 17 which averted a strike scheduled for 5 p. m. that day, went into private session. Later the union heads issued an announcement that the strike had been called.

ORDERS BANK STOCKHOLDERS TO PAY R F C $10,500,000

Court Decree as to Central Republic of Chicago Accepted by Dawes Brothers, Inc.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 1.—Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson signed a 178-page decree today ordering 3000 stockholders of the Central Republic Bank & Trust Co. to pay $10,500,000 to the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. Each stockholder was assessed 100 per cent of his holdings.

Charles Gates Dawes, former Vice-President, who arranged an original $90,000,000 loan from the R F C, already has paid his personal liability under the decree. Dawes Brothers, Inc., large stockholders in the bank, have announced they will pay without appeal.

MOUNTAIN-TOP SANCTUARY SURRENDERED BY REBELS

Spanish Loyalists Take 250 Prisoners and Evacuate 200 Women and Children After Long Siege.

By the Associated Press.

ANDUJAR, Spain, May 1.—The fall of the mountain-top sanctuary of Santa Maria de la Cabeza, besieged by Government forces since the start of the civil war, was announced here tonight by Government sources.

sanctuary, surmounting La (the summit) mountain in province, sheltered 250 Civil Guards and their families for more than nine months.

Government forces, who for months have urged them to surrender, with promises their lives would be spared, opened an intensive attack on the sanctuary at dawn.

A Captain and a Lieeutenant of the defenders surrendered, the Government sources said, and at 4 p. m. this afternoon the remaining guards hoisted a white flag.

Government troops marched in and made prisoners of the entire garrison which, in addition to the Civil Guards, included more than 200 women and many children.

The prisoners were evacuated to Jaen, provincial capital.

Large supplies of arms and ammunition were found in the sanctuary but the garrison had been reduced to straitened circumstances as Government anti-aircraft guns prevented insurgents from dropping food supplies by airplane.

INSURGENT SHELLS KILL 10 MORE IN HEART OF MADRID

Twentieth Day of Sustained Attack Increases Total of Dead to 322.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, May 1.—Insurgent gunners fired almost 100 shells into the heart of Madrid this May day, killing 10 persons and wounding 25. The twentieth consecutive day of artillery attack increased casualties to 322 dead and the total wounded to more than 3000.

The insurgents' big shells landed in central streets where, in past years, huge May day parades were held. But today the workers, especially those in war industries, were at their jobs.

One projectile struck the Central Hotel, causing much damage. For the first time a shell fell at the noon lunch hour, catching Madrilenos unawares and forcing them to seek refuge in buildings and subways.

The defense department at Barcelona announces that six insurgent planes have bombed the town of Caspe, in Zaragoza province, killing four and injuring four.

ITALIAN GENERAL TERUZZI IN SPAIN TO AID REBELS

Sent Into Country by Mussolini After Insurgent Defeat at Guadalajara.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 1.—Absence of Gen. Attilio Teruzzi, former head of the Italian Fascist militia, from the funeral of his sister, Amelia, led today to the disclosure he is in Spain.

Fascist circles disclosed Premier Mussolini sent Teruzzi there following the defeat of Italian troops who were fighting for insurgent Spanish Gen. Francisco Franco at Guadalajara.

Informants said Italian volunteers for Franco had at first been selected too freely and were in need of training. Teruzzi has been praised for his organizing ability since developed the Blackshirt militia.

Another noted personality now reported to be in Spain is Gen. Ettore Bastico, who commanded the Fourth Italian Army Corps in the conquest of Ethiopia.

NO SIGNS OF AIR RAID VISIBLE IN GUERNICA

Rebels Take Correspondents Through Town Basques Reported Fired by Bombs.

By the Associated Press.

GUERNICA, Spain, May 1.—Insurgent officers, seeking to disprove Basque charges that this "sacred city" of the Basques was set afire by incendiary bombs from the air, conducted a special tour of the ruins for foreign correspondents today.

This inspection failed to disclose any of the usual marks of an air bombardment either in the streets or on the walls still standing.

(The Basque Government said Guernica was destroyed by a systematic air bombardment carried out by German-type planes April 26, with more than 800 civilians killed. Insurgent officials asserted Guernica was set afire by its Basque defenders before they retreated under the Insurgent onslaught.)

Insurgent officers profess to be afraid Bilbao may be destroyed by fire set by its own defenders as—according to the Insurgent versions—Eibar and Guernica were destroyed. They assert prisoners have told them that extremists in the Basque ranks have orders from their leaders to burn towns as they are abandoned in the retreat.

MRS. SIMPSON STILL ALONE

Usual Denial That Duke of Windsor Is Expected, Issued.

By the Associated Press.

MONTS, France, May 1.—Wallis Simpson spent May day in the Touraine Woods today—still alone. She took her usual morning walk in the forest near the Chateau de Cande while her spokesman, Herman L. Rogers, issued the usual morning denial that Edward of Windsor was expected soon.

Rogers said the Duke would not come to France from Austria before his brother's coronation, May 12, although Mrs. Simpson's divorce decree is expected to be made final in London Monday.

FRANCO TAKES COMMAND OF DRIVE FOR BILBAO

Fascist Dictator Arrives on Northern Front as British Merchantmen Prepare to Evacuate Children of City.

BLOCKADE MENACE TO MASS MIGRATION

Basques Offer to Free All Hostages to Save Non-Combatants —Attack Slows Up for the Moment.

By the Associated Press.

BILBAO, May 1.—President Juan Aguirre of the Basque Republic tonight offered to ship out all Insurgent hostages held in Basque territory if Generalissimo Francisco Franco would permit evacuation of non-combatants from Bilbao. The offer, it is understood, was communicated to Paris and London.

The Basques, however, are aware that Franco may refuse to agree to evacuation of Bilbao on the ground that it would facilitate defense of the city. Britain's reported plan to convoy evacuation ships outside the three-mile limit, however, has cheered Bilbao.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, French-Spanish Frontier, May 1.—Gen. Francisco Franco has arrived on the northern front to take personal command of his troops now poised about 12 to 16 miles east of Bilbao on the Durango-Guernica line, just as anxious Basques and the captains of British merchantment are working against time odds to evacuate Bilbao's non-combatants beyond the range of Spanish Insurgent bombs and cannon.

Reports say General Emilio Mola has sent an ultimatum to Basque President Aguirre, demanding immediate surrender of Bilbao "to avoid useless sacrifice." Insurgent officers declare they are confident the Basques' "desperate military situation" will force them to surrender.

Children's Safety First.

The nine British merchantmen that have been offered, all of which ran the attempted Insurgent blockade during the past week to relieve beleaguered Bilbao's food crisis, are the Portelet, Hamsterley, Thurston, Marvia, Sheaf Field, Backworth, Blackhill, Thorpehall and Consett. Their masters, announcing the evacuation plan after a conference at Bilbao with R. C. Stevenson, the British Consul, say they hope to be able to remove between 4000 and 5000 children to a refuge around the Bay of Biscay's bend in France.

But a shortage of ships and Franco's refusal to respect foreign refugee vessels running his Bay of Biscay blockade menaces the success of a mass migration. Franco delivered his refusal to provide assurances for refugee ships to British Embassy officials, temporarily domiciled here. Naval circles hope, however, that the sinking yesterday of the insurgent battleship Espana by Government war planes will make his virtual defiance of Great Britain and France ineffective.

In the face of urgent need for speed in removing Bilbao's non-combatants and the scarcity of ships in which to carry them in the rough Bay of Biscay, removal then even of the 150,000 mentioned by French and British officials as their goal seems unlikely. Diplomatic sources say the evacuation of 300,000 of the city's aged, women and children—which is the number Basque President Juan Antonio Aguirre has said should go—is beyond possibility.

Protection of Warships.

Officials in London have disclosed that British warships will protect merchantmen evacuating civilians from Bilbao and that the fleet in the Bay of Biscay—a battleship, a cruiser and five destroyers—has been instructed to stand by them outside the three-mile limit.

French coastal towns along the Bay of Biscay have been instructed to prepare for the arrival any day, possibly tomorrow, of the first of thousands of refugees expected to be removed from Bilbao. They will be resettled temporarily in the interior of France and returned to Spain when peace is restored. No time has been set for the departure of the first vessel from Bilbao, however, but border observers regard the British attitude as a guarantee

COSSACKS IN LINE IN SOVIET CAPITAL MAY DAY PARADE

More Than 1,000,000 Workers Watch Display of Military Strength in March in Moscow.

MINOR OUTBREAKS OCCUR IN FRANCE

Strike Ties Up Transport in Some Cities — Hitler and Mussolini Caricatured in Mexico.

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, May 1.—Five thousand Cossacks, once hated by the Soviets as symbolic of the Czars, paraded in Red Square before Communist party Secretary Joseph Stalin today in the May day demonstration.

The Cossacks received an ovation from more than 1,000,000 workers.

All kinds of mechanized war machines rolled past the reviewing stand near the tomb of Nikolai Lenin.

More than 800 airplanes took part in the demonstration. As a result of last November's accident, when a falling propeller killed five persons in Red Square, planes kept high up.

Beside the platform, 50 anti-aircraft guns pointed skyward.

Defense Commissar Klementi E. Voroshiloff called on the troops for renewed vigilance on the Russian borders, and watchfulness against "Trotskyists." After an official announcement that 11 spies had been captured, Voroshiloff promised the Soviet would be merciless in exterminating its enemies. Ridiculing foreign reports of dissension in the Red army, he said: "Calumnies spread against our army are absurd. Our foreign enemies are becoming more skillful in setting international fires."

Buildings along the main city streets framed huge pictures of Karl Marx, Frederick Engels, Lenin and Stalin. Blood-red bunting streamed from the roofs. Marching men paraded until darkness fell.

Norman Thomas, former Socialist candidate for President of the United States, saw the parade, but not as a guest of the Government.

Minor Disorders in France on May Day Demonstration.

PARIS, May 1.—Minor disorders, quickly put down by police, occurred at the end of the May celebration in Paris. Police broke up a demonstration of 1500 Rightists in the Champs-Elysees and made several arrests. Chairs and glasses were used in a fight in front of a cafe, a French Social Party (extreme Rightist) branch headquarters, in the place Voltaire when marchers of the People's Front started a demonstration. Three arrests were made.

Half a million workers joined in the first May day under Premier Leon Blum of the People's Front.

Singing the "Internationale," giving the clenched fist salute and waving red banners, the workers marched in two columns, each a mile long.

At the Cours de Vincennes, where the parade ended, Leon Jouhaux, secretary-general of the confederation, in a speech, called for "social transformation without violence."

Transportation facilities were tied up in several cities, particularly in Marseilles and Toulon, when workers went on strike for the day. There was no disorder.

Mobile guards and police detachments kept a discreet distance as paraders in Paris shouted "Help Bilbao," the insurgent-besieged Basque capital in Spain. An airplane wrote the word "Bilbao" in smoke.

Hitler and Mussolini Caricatured in Mexican Parade.

MEXICO, D. F., May 1.—Thousands of Mexican workers carrying banners marched today before the presidential palace in a parade that lasted five hours, in celebration of May day. President Lazaro Cardenas and members of his Cabinet stood on the palace balcony, and acknowledged the workers' salutes.

30,000 IN NEW YORK KEEP MAY DAY IN ORDERLY FASHION

Parade to Union Square Where Radio Greeting Is Received From Norman Thomas.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—A crowd of about 30,000 persons who mingled the singing of the "Internationale" with "Marching Through Georgia" and "Plenty of Money and You," paraded today in orderly celebration of May day.

With placards denouncing the Supreme Court, Facism, war and Hitler, and upholding the Spanish loyalists, Tom Mooney, "the Scottsboro boys" and labor organizations, they marched a mile to a Union square reviewing stand.

A radio greeting from Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, in Moscow, was read over the reviewing stand loud speaker, along with a message from Tom Mooney, serving a life term in a California penitentiary.

Statement on War in Spain.

The President's statement on the war in Spain asserted that a "state of civil strife unhappily exists in Spain and that such civil strife is of a magnitude and is being conducted under such conditions that the export of arms, ammunition, or implements of war from the United States to Spain would threaten and endanger the peace of the United States, and I do hereby admonish all citizens of the United States, or any of its possessions, and all persons residing or being within the territory or jurisdiction of the United States, or its possessions, to abstain from every violation of the provisions of the joint resolution above set forth, hereby made effective and applicable to the export of arms, ammunition or implements of war from any place in the United States to Spain or to any other state for transshipment to, or for the use of, Spain."

Power was delegated by Roosevelt to the Secretary of State to exercise any power or authority conferred by the said joint resolution.

Issuance of the proclamation pertaining to Spain automatically brought into force sections of the neutrality act regarding financial transactions, prohibiting American vessels from carrying arms, ammunition and implements of war to Spain, and forbidding American citizens to travel on Spanish vessels.

Under the financial section Americans may not purchase, sell or exchange bonds, securities or other obligations of Spain, of any political subdivision or of any person acting for or on behalf of any faction or asserted government of that country; make any loan or extend any credit to such, unless the President finds such action will serve to protect the commercial or other interests of the United States or its citizens.

INSURGENT PLANE ATTACK ON BRITISH WARSHIP REPORTED

Spanish Agency Says Craft of Italian Make Failed to Hit Destroyer at Bilbao.

PARIS, May 1.—An insurgent airplane attack on the British destroyer Faulknor in the port of Bilbao was reported tonight by Agence Espagne, official Spanish Government news agency.

The agency said three tri-motored airplanes, described as of Italian make, dropped five bombs near the warship, but returned to their base when they failed to score a hit.

It asserted the attack occurred at 6:30 o'clock tonight after the warship arrived to protect the evacuation of women and children from besieged Bilbao.

(In London a spokesman for the British Admiralty said it had received no information on the reported attack on the destroyer Faulknor. He said he did not know whether the Faulknor had steamed within the three-mile limit.)

KEY INDUSTRIES NATIONALIZED

Manchoukuo Takes Control of Manufactories.

HSINKING, Manchoukuo, May 1.—The Government today placed all key industries under state control.

These include the manufacture of munitions, aircraft, automobiles, minerals, wool and cotton industries, flour milling and other operations.

MAY DAY RALLY CALLS FOR END OF OPEN SHOP

Resolution Adopted After Parade of 1000 Including Many on Strike.

At a May day rally on Memorial Plaza yesterday afternoon, members of unions affiliated with the Committee for Industrial Organization, and strikers from several plants, adopted a resoulution asking all labor organizations to "unite their ranks on the basis of industrial unionism, to drive the open shop from St. Louis."

Another resolution, which was adopted, declared the Supreme Court, as now constituted, "a barrier to progressive legislation," and indorsed President Roosevelt's court reorganization proposal.

A parade from Twenty-first street and Washington avenue, the vicinity of the Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co. plant, to the Plaza, preceded the rally in Market street at Thirteenth, in a sector temporarily closed to traffic. There were about 1000 paraders, including strikers of Emerson, Century and Baldor Electric companies and St. Louis Car Co., and automobile, garment and gas house workers.

Norman Smith of the Automobile Workers presided at the meeting at which a truck served as a speakers' stand. Those who addressed the audience of about 2000 were William Sentner, organizer of the electrical workers; John Doherty and Ralph Shaw of the steel workers, and Richard Brazier of the gas house workers.

Sentner, telling of the observance of May day by St. Louis workers on the nearby City Hall grounds in 1886, said: "Labor has come a long way, but it has just begun to fight effectively, to remove the stigma of the open shop, the sweatshop and low wages." He said St. Louis stood thirteenth among American cities in wage standards.

Shaw said the United States Chamber of Commerce, in its demand for revision of the Wagner Labor Relations Act, had declared open war on labor. Other speakers denounced company detectives and spy systems, which were the theme of several inscriptions on the banners carried in the parade and grouped about the speakers. Other banners proclaimed the advantages of CIO membership.

G. L. BERRY IN ROW WITH T V A OVER $1,600,000 CLAIM

Controversy Reported to Have Eliminated Industrial Coordinator as Candidate for U. S. Senate.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 1.—The Tennessean, in a special dispatch from Knoxville, said today that Maj. George L. Berry, Federal industrial co-ordinator, had been "definitely eliminated" from consideration as the possible successor to the late Senator Nathan L. Bachman.

The dispatch said a controversy between Berry and the Tennessee Valley Authority over the value of mineral rights on T V A land resulted in his elimination from the field of candidates for the senatorial post.

The story said the controversy involved "millions of dollars" and added that T V A Director A. E. Morgan had filed under protest the claim of Berry and associates for $1,600,100 for the mineral rights. The claim was said to have been filed with the House Appropriations Committee.

Berry's Statement on Controversy Over Claim.

By the Associated Press.

PRESSMAN'S HOME, Tenn., May 1.—Maj. George L. Berry, Federal industrial co-ordinator, in a statement today defended his claims against the Tennessee Valley Authority for mineral properties in the Norris reservoir area and termed "ridiculous the political effort to develop a "mystery" over the issue.

Berry, also president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, is among those mentioned as a successor to the late United States Senator Nathan Bachman of Tennessee.

A T V A statement, contained in a report of recent House hearings in Washington, said Berry and several associates had filed claims against the Authority for $1,633,000 "for flooding properties, some said to contain marble in the Norris reservoir."

Berry said he and his associates acquired leases in the Norris reservoir in 1932, before election of President Roosevelt and before the T V A was created. He added the property was leased for lead and zinc mining and marble was found in the course of drilling."

He said "the facts are that the Tennessee Valley Authority confiscated my property without compensation or effort to settle the matter."

Berry said he had suggested arbitration of the dispute. "The latest information is that the board will act upon my suggestion within the immediate future," his statement added. "Of course, if this matter is not composed by mediation or arbitration, we shall take the matter to the Federal Court."

T V A officials would not comment.

BOY, 15, CURED AFTER LIFE OF ILLNESS, FALLS TO DEATH

Newark (N. J.) Youth Goes to Ball Game to Celebrate and Is Killed Accidentally.

NEWARK, N. J., May 1.—Sickly all his life and requiring constant medical treatment and nursing, 15-year-old John Matthews wanted to celebrate today when the doctor told him he was completely cured and needed no more medicine.

His aunt, who adopted him when his mother died, suggested a movie. John chose a baseball game.

An hour later he was dead — killed in a 35-foot fall from a school roof where he had climbed to retrieve a lost ball.

Row Over Club Women's Attack on Court Scheme

Oklahoma National Democratic Committeewoman Upbraids Federation and Farley Congratulates Her.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 1.—A political storm arising over opposition of the Council of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to the Roosevelt court plan grew stronger today when Mrs. John Catlett, National Democratic Committeewoman for Oklahoma, charged the council vote of 285 to 66 against the plan was "an insult to Oklahoma Democrats who were called on to use their influence in arranging the program for the council."

She asserted that "when I go back to Washington to try to get projects for Oklahoma they'll say, 'You let the President get slapped in the face down there in Oklahoma.'"

National Democratic Chairman James Farley telephoned his congratulations to Mrs. Catlett on her position. She said he was "highly commendatory."

The federation president, Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, said she knew nothing of Farley's interest and described as silly the charge that the vote was "stacked" against the court proposal.

'I repeat this is a non-partisan organization of which I am honored to be president," she said. "I can do only what the delegate body instructs me to do.

Mrs. Lawson laughed over published reports that "Democratic leaders charged her disloyalty to the party was prompted because she did not get an appointment as Minister to Denmark."

"That's a scream!" she cried. "I've never been a candidate for any political office. I'd rather be president of the Federation than Minister to Denmark any day."

Disclosing that she had been called to Washington for a Democratic conference about matters she cared not to discuss, Mrs. Catlett said: "The court issue never should have been brought up in the council. It was fixed before it ever came to Oklahoma and the Oklahoma delegates could not stop it.

"The Thursday night debate was unfair. Both men, Senator Wheeler and Assistant Attorney-General Joseph B. Keenan were to read their papers. That was the agreement. Keenan had to read his speech because of his position. Senator Wheeler didn't. When Keenan asked for 10 minutes rebuttal Mrs. Lawson refused.

"The majority of those women down here didn't know what it was all about. It is a Congressional question and should not have been brought before the women. It is the hottest thing that has been before the nation."

The resolution against the court plan was adopted after a national mail poll of more than 51,000 clubwomen in 1581 clubs showed 7476 women favored the plan while 44,000 were against it.

evacuation can be started as speedily as ships become available.

Meantime Government and Insurgent reports from the fighting front conflict. Defense officers declare their lines, reorganized and firmly entrenched, have brought the rebel attack to a halt. Insurgent communiques say the Basques have fallen back to their last defense lines and are digging in to stand off an offensive against the Basque capital.

Recapture of Garono Mound, nicknamed "Hill 450," in a counter-attack in the Guernica sector, is reported by the Easques.

12 Miles from Bilbao.

At General Mola's Vitoria headquarters it was asserted the insurgents had reached a point 12 miles from Bilbao in their advance northwestward from Durango. New gains were claimed for the right wing along the Bay of Biscay coast. These forces attacked before dawn, fought their way across the Mundaca River and captured Bermeo, fishing port in Vizcaya Province, and three nearby towns. Insurgent colors are flying tonight from the town halls of Bermeo, Mundaca, Pedernales and Altamira, all between 16 and 20 miles from Bilbao. A Vitoria communique reported 100 deserters had come into the insurgent lines.

A dispatch from Salamanca, Insurgent headquarters, says Franco has warned passenger planes flying between Bilbao and Bayonne, France, they will be considered Government observation craft and be fired upon. He refuses to take responsibility for the safety of passengers.

Whole Populations Reported Quitting "No Man's Land."

LEON, Spain, May 1. — Whole populations, insurgent dispatches reported today, have fled from Asturian villages within a "no man's land" created by Government and insurgent armies between here and Oviedo to the north.

Gen. Francisco Franco's troops in the Cantabrico mountains in the Bay of Biscay region withheld an attack when their observation planes discovered that activities in valley villages below meant that columns of peasants—not Government troops—were on the move.

They are abandoning homes which they feared would be devastated in a crossfire whenever hostilities flared again.

The evacuation was started yesterday with the consent of the insurgent commanders, who said field guns were aimed at Government lines to cover the emigration.

BANDITS RAID POLICE STATION, SEIZE 50 IN MANCHOUKUO

Japanese and Koreans Carried Away; Troops Pursue Marauders, but in Vain.

TOKIO, May 2 (Sunday).—A Domei (Japanese) news agency dispatch from Kainei, Northern Korea, today reported about 50 Japanese, Koreans and Manchoukuoans had been carried off by a bandit force which raided a Manchoukuo police station just north of the Korean border.

The bandits also carried off a considerable quantity of arms, munitions and provisions. Japanese troops and Manchoukuo police pursued the marauders, but without success.

"Queen of Clubs" Dies at 75.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Mrs. Dore Lyon, known a quarter of a century ago as the "Queen of Clubs" because of her extensive club activities, died today. She was 75 years old. She was the founder and first president of the New York City Federation of Women's Clubs. Though reported to have inherited more than a million dollars, Mrs. Lyon in 1910 filed a petition in bankruptcy, listing liabilities of $502,246. She was editor of the Clubwoman's Magazine and president of the company which published it.

HITLER ASSAILS JEWS AND CATHOLICS IN TALK

Tells 50,000 in Berlin, on May Day, Time for Higher Wages Has Not Come.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, May 1.—Adolf Hitler denounced clerical "interference" and the Jews, in the May day celebration here today and told the workers that the time for higher wages has not yet come to Germany. His listeners were 50,000 workers massed in the Lustgarten Square. His allusion to Jews brought uproarious applause, but only moderate cheering followed his appeal to workers and employers to increase production without demanding higher wages or increased prices.

Hitler told the workers: "If anybody tries, through encyclicals, sermons or other religious measures to disturb our community spirit, we will simply withdraw the clergyman's license from such. It will not do for certain circles to criticise our morals when they have the greatest reason to be concerned about morals in their own ranks. People may grieve that youth can no longer be separated according to confessions, but those times are definitely past."

A wall 45 feet high covered with Swastika banners on both sides flanked Lustgarten Square. Trumpets heralded Hitler's arrival on the center road to the speaker's rostrum, lined by Blackshirt Schutz Staffel bodyguards.

Many women and men fainted while waiting under the blazing sun.

Earlier at Olympic Stadium, Hitler told 180,000 cheering boys and girls that "Those who think they can bring disunion into our youth are mistaken."

His words, carried by radio to an estimated 7,000,000 other members of the Hitler Youth movement, were interpreted as a reference to Nazi differences with the Catholic church over the education of German youths.

Between the speeches, Hitler and his party went to the Duetsches Opernaus where Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels distributed the Reich's prizes for the best film and the best book of the year. The film prize went to Emil Jannings for the movie, "The Ruler." The book award was given to Friedrich Bethge, assistant director of the Frankfort Municipal Theater, for "March of the Veterans."

Later, Grand Jury Say He 'Began Game of P and Take' That W Chiefly Take.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 1. — special grand jury investigating th sale of 3700 forged notes totalin more than $400,000 to the Morri Plan Co. of St. Joseph, which no is under reorganization in Unite States District Court, returned 4 indictments today against Willia F. Walpole, head of 13 drug an electrical appliance companies, wh began discounting notes with the Morris Plan Co. about four years ago.

Thirty-one of the indictments charge forgery and utterance of notes and one charges obtaining of money by false pretenses.

Lack of Inquiry Censured.

"By this process," the grand jury said, "the Morris Plan Co. was gutted and hundreds of thousands of dollars were illegally and criminally diverted into the hands of W. F. Walpole and his General Drug & Appliance Co."

The report added "that the officers actively operating the Morris Plan Co. had been negligent goes without saying. They have been negligent in a high and inexcusable degree. The slightest investigation would have exposed the spurious character of many of the Walpole notes."

The grand jury made its report to Circuit Judge Ferd F. Frankenhoff who ordered the investigation Tuesday at the request of Prosecuting Attorney Maurice Hoffman. Assets of the Morris Plan Co. totaled $1,800,000.

Established Confidence.

The grand jury said its investigation showed Walpole's account "in perfect shape" the first year of his dealings with the Morris Plan Co.

"With cash payments made," the grand jury's report said, "the confidence of the active officers of the Morris Plan Co. in W. F. Walpole grew and the time came when his name on an obligation as guarantor was accepted without question.

"Several years ago W. F. Walpole began to include forged notes bearing fictitious names among the genuine ones, and with the passing of the months the ratio between forged and genuine notes was changed by degrees until at last there were three or four times as many forged notes as there were genuine ones. . . .

"By making payments on the forged notes, while selling new forged notes in greater volume, the evidence elicited by the grand jury shows that W. F. Walpole entered into an elaborate game of put and take. But the taking exceeded the putting by hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Limit on Indictments.

"Literally hundreds of crimes were committed and we return numerous indictments against the person responsible.

"Despite the extraordinary number, they represent only a small fraction of the indictments against this man that are justified by the evidence. We refrain from clogging and choking the dockets of our honorable court."

Walpole opened a drug store in South St. Joseph about five years ago. He also became a manufacturer of proprietary remedies. About a year ago he opened the second largest drug store in the city. His interests grew until he operated ten drug and three appliance companies.

George C. Toel is president of the Morris Plan Co. Directors of the company include several leading business and professional men.

Argentine Bond Issue.

By the Associated Press.

BUENOS AIRES, May 1.—Argentina's Treasury today announced plans to issue 100,000,000 pesos (about $30,000,000) of internal 4 per cent bonds described as "a foreign debt repatriation loan." The issue is part of a foreign debt reduction program through which Argentina's dollar debt has been reduced from $236,000,000 to $128,000,000.

FIVE DEATHS LAID TO STORMS IN LOUISIANA AND MISSISSIPPI

Heavy Rain, Hail and Lightning Cause Widespread Crop and Property Damage.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, May 1. — Five deaths were attributed today to storms last night in coastal and Central Louisiana and Mississippi and widespread crop and property damage was caused by four and five-inch rains, hail and lightning.

Three Negroes were killed in the northern part of Pointe Coupee Parish, La. Houses were demolished. The Parish Red Cross Chapter requested aid.

Several buildings were unroofed in Gulfport and a number of small craft in Mississippi sound were sunk or beached by the wind. A brick smokestack fell through the roof of King's Daughters Hospital at Gulfport.

John Dalton, 33 years old, was struck by lightning and killed in New Orleans. In Gulfport, Miss., Mrs. Lottie Ryan died from exhaustion after she, her husband and nine children fled from their house which was unroofed in the storm.

RECEPTION FOR GARESCHE WHEN HE RETIRES AT MADISON

Quits After 32 Years as President of Board; Presented With Auto.

After 32 years as president of the Madison Village Board of Trustees, Ferdinand A. Garesche left office last night. Ceremonies in his honor, attended by 200 persons, were held at Firemen's Hall in Madison. A sedan was presented to him by officials of Madison County and friends, and the volunteer fire department gave him a sterling silver tea service.

Garesche, who was known as "mayor" of the village, did not run for re-election because of ill health. His successor, Robert Dron, was inducted into office, along with the new board of trustees. Garesche was the Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor of Illinois in 1924, but was defeated.

SHERIFF WHO BARRICADED OFFICE HOLDS HIS JOB

Elza Evans of Shawnee, Ok., Wins Contest With Man Named to Succeed Him.

By the Associated Press.

SHAWNEE, Ok., May 1.—Pottawatomie County's contest over the Sheriff's office apparently was settled today—with Elza Evans, who refused to be ousted, the victor.

County Commissioners canceled the $10,000 surety bond posted by Rufus Lyon, appointed as Evans' successor. Lyon said he contemplated no further action. Lyon was appointed after a grand jury declared Evans' appointment illegal.

Evans barricaded himself in his office and refused to budge when Lyon was appointed.

THOMAS DIXON, ONCE NOTED AUTHOR, NOW COURT CLERK

"Needed the Job," Says Ex-Pastor Whose Novel Was Basis of "Birth of Nation."

By the Associated Press.

RALEIGH, N. C., May 1.—Thomas Dixon, 73-year-old author, lecturer and former preacher, who has made and lost two fortunes, became clerk of the Eastern North Carolina district of the Federal Court today.

The author of "The Clansman," the novel on which D. W. Griffith based the moving picture "The Birth of a Nation," took the oath of office shortly after Judge Q. M. Meekings announced his appointment. Dixon, whose work includes 22 novels, nine plays and six motion pictures, said he "needed the job" and that the salary would give him a "backlog of security."

U. S. to Sell 28 Steel Cargo Vessels.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The Maritime Commission asked for bids today on 28 obsolete steel cargo vessels in its laid-up fleet, specifying the ships must be scrapped. The bids will be opened May 27. The ships range from 1500 to 10,000 tons. Seventeen are at Norfolk, Va.; seven at New Orleans, La., and four at Staten Island, N. Y.

EX-OFFICER JAILED AFTER EXTORTION FROM ROSEGRANTS

he would rather obtain the money from Mrs. Rosegrant and suppress the information.

"His voice came to us clearly as he tearfully related his need for money.

"'Grandmother Rosegrant,' he said, 'I hate to do this but I just have to have the money.'

"There, there, don't cry about it,' we heard Mrs. Rosegrant say above LaBonde's sobs.

Finally Agrees to $3000.

"'I've been to a priest and made my confession,' LaBonde went on. He to me to come to and talk to you and explain the situation. If I gave the story to the newspaper I would have to come back from Arizona to testify and I would have to be here to see Mr. Miller (Circuit Attorney Franklin Miller.)

"Mrs. Rosegrant said they could not pay $5000 and LaBonde asked if they could raise $4000. Finally, he agreed to $3000. Mrs. Rosegrant said she had only $225 in the house and that she would give him that as part payment. He said he supposed that would do to tide him over and that he would return for the balance next Wednesday.

"We waited until he got out on the sidewalk before we came downstairs and took him into custody."

Operates Last Round-Up.

LaBonde, whose legs have been paralyzed for years as the result of an automobile accident, requiring his use of crutches, was appointed a Justice of the Peace for Central Township by the County Court Dec. 1, 1932, for a term expiring in November, 1934. He again was appointed then for a four-year term but the following year Central Township was divided and he no longer held office although a legal question as to the term of his appointment was raised.

In recent months, LaBonde has operated "The Last Round-Up" tavern at 6300 Easton avenue. A charge of operating a gambling device, made after a slot machine was seized there, is pending in Circuit Judge Peter T. Barrett's court.

LaBonde gave his age as 46 and said he lived at 6507 Corbitt avenue, University City.

VILLA DUCHESNE IS FIRST IN STUDENTS HORSE SHOW

Western Military Academy Second; Betty Lou Noell Highest Individual Scorer.

Villa Duchesne won first place in the Maryville College Horse Show for preparatory students, which ended last night at the Missouri Stables arena, with a total of 116 points. Western Military Academy was second, with 80 points, and City House of the Academy of the Sacred Heart took third with a score of 74.

Highest individual scorer was Betty Lou Noell of Villa Duchesne, who earned 36 points during the three-day show. Cadet Goldman of Western Military Academy had a score of 28 for second place.

Death for Colorado Kidnapers.

DENVER, Colo., May 1.—Gov. Teller Ammons signed a measure today providing death for kidnapers who harm their victims.

'MAYBE I'LL FIND PEACE,' ACTRESS SAID IN SUICIDE NOTE

Contents of Helen Mont's Message Made Public by Husband to Stop Rumors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1. — Helen Mont, 25-year-old actress who died a week ago in her apartment—as guests, responding to a prankster's invitation to a cocktail party, crowded the lobby below—took her own life in search of "peace," her farewell note disclosed today.

Her Turkish-born husband of a month, James Mont, an interior decorator, made public the suicide letter today to stop, he said, rumors about its content.

"There comes a time in everyone's life when everything seems so futile . . . I haven't slept for days . . . maybe I'll find peace," said the message he released. It was scrawled in pencil on seven sheets of paper.

Mrs. Mont, who as Helen Kim appeared on Broadway six years ago in the leading role of the play "Roar China," was found dead in her apartment, a gas tube in her mouth. Her husband was at work in his studio.

BILL FOR 72 HOURS BETWEEN LICENSE AND WEDDING SIGNED

Gov. Lehman Approves Act 'to Protect' Men Who Propose at Night Clubs.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 1.— Governor Lehman today signed the so-called "72-Hour" bill of Republican Assemblywoman Jane Todd, Westchester county, that requires the elapse of such a period between issuance of a marriage license and performance of the wedding ceremony.

Miss Todd admitted in discussion of the proposal in the Assembly that it was designed primarily as a measure of "self-protection" for the men who do their proposing across the tables of New York City's night clubs.

Under terms of the bill, a Supreme Court justice can authorize a waiver of the 72-hour wait where either party is in danger of immediate death or if "other emergency" exists. Where the woman is under 14 years of age, a similar waiver can be granted by a Children's Court judge in the county where the woman resides.

HUDSON MOTOR CAR SIGNS WAGE PACT WITH UNION

Agreement Supplementing Strike Settlement Covers Wages and Hours.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 1.—The Hudson Motor Car Co. and the United Automobile Workers of America tonight signed an agreement supplementing their strike settlement of April 8, which ended a month's tie-up.

The agreement provides for minimum hourly rates of 75 cents for men and 65 cents for women; time and a half for more than eight hours a day or 40 hours a week; a five cents an hour premium for night work; procedure for handling grievances, and seniority rights based in general on length of service.

It also specified that the work week "may" be reduced before seasonal layoffs of regular employes.

NO MORE MONEY NOW FOR RIVERFRONT PLAN

Dickmann Says Washington Is Uncertain About Allotting Additional Funds.

Mayor Dickmann, who returned yesterday from Washington, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that Government officials were uncertain of the availability of Federal funds for the proposed riverfront Jefferson Memorial beyond the $6,750,000 already allotted. The city has added to this allotment, $2,250,000 from sale of bonds, making a total of $9,000,000.

A suit in the District of Columbia courts for an injunction has restrained the Government from acquiring the 37 blocks in the proposed memorial area. Government plans are to develop this through the National Park Service, for the preservation of historic sites in that area.

The Mayor said Department of Justice officials informed him they could do nothing toward acquiring the property until the injunction suit is ended. The applicants, who were denied an injunction in the lower courts on the technical ground that the City of St. Louis was a necessary party but had not been made a party to the suit, have until May 6 to file an application for a Supreme Court review of the decision of the District Court of Appeals. Decision on the question of review is likely to be delayed until autumn.

Cost of full development of the riverfront memorial according to proposed plans wa sestimated at $30,000,000, and Mayor Dickmann was interested in the prospects of getting additional Federal funds to be used with the city's bond issue funds, which under the terms of the authorization can be used only in the ratio of $1 to $3 of Federal funds. The work can proceed only in case of ultimate defeat of the applicants for the injunction.

The recent economy moves in Congress have raised doubts as to future appropriations for the memorial if money now available should be spent in starting it. The Mayor said, however, that he expected the National Park Service to gradually complete the work out of its regular, annual appropriations. He did not see Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who has supervision over the National Park Service.

Only Four Taverns for Effingham.

By the Associated Press.

EFFINGHAM, Ill., May 1.—A new city ordinance permits only four taverns to operate within the city limits. The city council has named the four that may remain open. Successful proprietors are Henry Imming, Jack Jansen, Adolph Rutlinger and William Broengsmeyer. The remaining tavern owners must stop business at once, under provisions of the ordinance.

POPE LEAVES VATICAN FOR HIS SUMMER VILLA

Arrives at Castel Gandolfo, Tired but in Good Spirits After Auto Trip.

By the Associated Press.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, May 1.—Pope Pius XI, tired but in good spirits, came to his villa here tonight to celebrate his eightieth birthday May 31 and spend the rest of the spring and summer. He was driven from the Vatican in an automobile, attended by five other cars, in less than an hour. He gave his blessing from the villa balcony to the usual throng of retainers and villagers.

This is the earliest the Pope has gone into summer residence. The move was made at the insistence of Dr. Aminta Milani, who accompanied him. The physician, concerned over the Pope's recurrent periods of fatigue, also pleaded with him to conserve his strength.

"We know the cure and we will begin it immediately after we get to Castel Gandolfo," the Pope promised the doctor.

Pope Pius apparently considered himself to be stronger than he was when he came to Castel Gandolfo last year. "Last year, if we had told the doctor how we felt," he said, "he would have made us go to bed."

FORMER W P A PLAY LEADER GETS DEATH FOR MURDER

C. E. Hines Stamped Woman to Death in Cincinnati; Insanity Defense Fails.

CINCINNATI, O., May 1.—Charles E. Hines, 25-year-old former Works Progress Administration play leader, was convicted by a jury tonight of the murder of Mrs. Edith Caudill Hirl. The jury did not recommend mercy, making sentence to the electric chair mandatory.

The jury of seven men and five women deliberated two hours.

Hines surrendered in Evansville, Ind., three weeks after Mrs. Hirl's body was found in a Cincinnati park March 2. She had been stamped to death.

A defense of insanity at the time the crime was committed was countered with testimony by State alienists that Hines is sane.

KILLS WIFE AND HIRED MAN

Colorado Farmer Then Tries Vainly Four Times to End Life.

By the Associated Press.

WIGGINS, Colo., May 1.—E. O. Schieck, 42-year-old farmer, killed his estranged wife and a hired man, Ben Faurot, 28, of Wauneka, Ok., with an ax today on a farm near here.

Schieck then went into the farm house, stabbed himself with a butcher knife, struck himself on the head with an ax, drank a bottle of rubbing alcohol and shot himself above the heart with a small rifle. Physicians said he probably would live.

HURLS CHILD OFF 100-FOOT BRIDGE, THEN ENDS HER LIFE

Mother Killed in Leap at Pasadena, Cal., but Girl, 3, Is Said to Have Chance to Live.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Cal., May 1. — A young mother threw her 3-year-old daughter off 100-foot high Colorado street bridge today, then plunged over, killing herself. The child struck a pepper tree and landed in loose earth. Hospital attendants say she may recover. The mother left a note in a small bundle of clothes on the bridge identifying herself as Mrs. Myrtle Ward of Los Angeles and her baby as Louise.

Several persons witnessed the tragedy.

Trucks Crash; Two Burn to Death.

By the Associated Press.

McPHERSON, Kan., May 1.—Two men were burned to death in a motor truck collision at the McPherson city limits today. The victims were Dale Carson, 28 years old, and David Russell Nickel, 27, both of Coffeyville. Gasoline ignited after a freight truck and a gasoline transport collided on U. S. Highway 81.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO; DRIVER FAILS TO STOP

W. J. Kellar, 78, Hit in Front of Home; Witness Says Second Car Ran Over Him.

William J. Kellar, 78 years old, 4400 Wabash avenue, was killed last night when he was struck by an automobile while crossing South Vandeventer avenue in the 1300 block. The driver did not stop.

A witness told police a second automobile drove over Kellar's body after he had been knocked down by the first car. The driver of the second machine also failed to stop, police were told.

Kellar, who suffered internal injuries and fractures of the left leg and hip, died an hour after he had been taken to City Hospital by Glenn Bay, a chauffeur, 4209 Hunt avenue, the witness to the accident.

Bay said he was visiting in the house where Kellar resided when he heard a thud in the street. Looking out, he saw an automobile driving away from the place where Kellar lay and the second machine passing over him, he reported. The first car was bumping as though it had also run over the body, he added.

Pedestrian, 87, Hit by Car, Suffers Skull Injury.

William Meinel, 87 years old, 3105 St. Vincent avenue, suffered a skull injury last night when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the street at Compton and Park avenues. He was taken to City Hospital. The driver was E. D. Ferguson, 2152 Nebraska avenue.

Unidentified Man, About 70, Killed Crossing Street.

An unidentified man, about 70 years old, was killed by an automobile at 10 o'clock last night as he attempted to cross North Grand boulevard north of Bailey avenue.

The driver of the car, George F. Selleman, 5211 Conde avenue, told police he was driving north and the man, crossing from east to west, walked into the path of the machine.

The victim of the accident was 5 feet, 8 inches tall, weighed about 160 pounds and had gray hair and mustache. He was wearing a brown topcoat, dark trousers, light gray coat and vest and two shirts.

Boy and Driver Hurt When Car Runs Into Madison Tavern.

Harold LeMaster, 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack LeMaster, 2449 Illinois avenue, Granite City, suffered skull and internal injuries and fractured right arm last night when an automobile in which he was riding crashed into a brick building at Tenth and State streets, Madison.

The driver of the car, Joseph Bloodworth, 2237 Ohio avenue, Granite city, told police he was blinded by the lights of another machine while making a turn from State street into Tenth and misjudged the distance, striking the building. He suffered minor head injuries. The building, occupied by a tavern, was only slightly damaged.

Inspectors Assert Evidence Against G. M. Lindsay and D. R. Alexander Is Only a 'Drop in Bucket.'

ARKANSAS FIELD FOR "GRADUATES"

Prices Ranged From $500 to $2500—Higher Scale for Those Asking for Foreign "Credentials."

Evidence that 14 residents of Missouri and five other states, including two St. Louisans, paid a total of $13,950 to George M. Lindsay of Kansas City and Date R. Alexander, former secretary of the defunct Kansas City College of Medicine and Surgery, for faked medical diplomas and licenses was introduced in the first week of their mail fraud trial in United States District Court.

Postal inspectors said this was but "a drop in the bucket," compared with what their investigation, begun in 1934, indicated was the actual total. The trial, in which Lindsay, Alexander and three co-defendants are charged with using the mails in a conspiracy to defraud, will be resumed tomorrow afternoon before Judge Charles B. Davis and a jury.

On trial with Lindsay and Alexander, now operator of a gasoline filling station in a small Missouri town, are George M. Lindsay Jr., stepson of the man accused as the ringleader; William T. Gallagher, Wellston optometrist, whose chance arrest led to the investigation; "Prince Ali Yehia" Debeh, who, the Government charges, posed as an Egyptian Prince and became an "arthritis specialist" after he himself paid $2500 to the elder Lindsay for a fraudulent diploma and license.

Two Sentences Deferred.

Two other defendants have pleaded guilty and testified against the five on trial. They are Mrs. Myrtle Long, former secretary of the Iowa licensing board, who testified the elderly Lindsay paid $250 to her in 1932 for a license for his stepson, and Arthur E. Krebs of Chicago, formerly of St. Louis, who quoted Lindsay as having boasted he could obtain licenses in "nearly every state in the Union." Their sentences were deferred.

Another defendant, John E. Hamilton of Fort Worth, Tex., has appealed from a ruling of the Court ordering him brought here for trial.

The ninth defendant, Dr. Claude E. Laws, former secretary of the Arkansas Electric Medical Board of Examiners, was not placed on trial with the others because of illness.

Dr. Laws, the Government contends, was an important figure in the alleged conspiracy as the one to whom Lindsay turned for issuance of Arkansas medical licenses to chiropractors and others who had financial means to become physicians or surgeons, but neither the patience nor the patients.

Evidence has been introduced in support of the Government's contention that Lindsay's plan was to enable his customers to practice medicine in Arkansas or, through reciprocity, in other states.

Arkansas licenses were obtained through Dr. Laws, the Government asserts, after the applicants had been supplied with faked diplomas from three defunct Kansas City medical schools, names of which were used by Lindsay and Alexander.

Witnesses have testified that the Lindsays solicited customers intensively and got in touch with some of them through the Educational Aid Society of Kansas City, of which the elder Lindsay was said to be general field secretary.

Seeking to show that licensing of persons without adequate medical training might prove dangerous to the public, Government attorneys have introduced testimony of a bank clerk who said that soon after he bought an Arkansas license from the elder Lindsay for $500 he opened an office in Wynn, Ark., and practiced medicine for five months, delivering "more than a dozen" babies and performing minor operations.

Two Tell of Paying $1500.

At yesterday's session Martin L. Brockmeier, a chiropractor, 4902 St. Louis avenue, testified he paid $1500 to Alexander in 1930 for a medical diploma and an Arkansas license. Similar testimony was given by Leonard L. Gramm of Milwaukee, Wis., who said he, too, paid $1500 to Alexander.

In preceding sessions, 12 witnesses from Missouri, Illinois, North Dakota, Pennsylvania and New Jersey testified they paid a total of $10,950 to Lindsay for diplomas and licenses. They had not been examined by the Arkansas Licensing Board, they said, nor had they been graduated from any medical school.

The prices they said they paid ranged from $500 to $2500. Even higher prices were asked for diplomas from foreign universities, according to testimony of a Chinese chiropractor, who said the younger Lindsay offered to sell him a diploma from the University of Dublin, Ireland, for $10,000. He said he refused the offer.

Postofficer Inspector A. F. Burt testified yesterday that Debeh, when he was arrested in 1935, said he had bought a diploma and license from the senior Lindsay for $2500.

Burt quoted Debeh as having said also that he paid $3000 to Ransom B. Drew of Kansas City to obtain a Missouri medical license through reciprocity. He did not say that Debeh told him he obtained the Missouri license or that Ransom kept the money.

Italy Sets Two Seaplane Marks.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, May 1.—Italy claimed two seaplane speed records tonight for Capt. Mario Stoppani and four officers. They flew 1000 kilometers (621 miles) with a payload of 5000 kilograms (11,023 pounds) at an average speed of 157.43 miles an hour. Over double the course, with the same payload, they averaged 155.257 miles an hour. Their craft was described as a tri-motored military machine with variable-pitch propellers.

YOUTHFUL CAST TO OPEN METROPOLITAN SPRING OPERA

Most of Principals in "Faust," to Be Presented Tomorrow Night, Are Young Singers.

NEW YORK, May 1.—"Faust," is the opera chosen to open on Monday night the second Metropolitan opera spring season—and the first spring season under the direction of Lee Pattison.

With one or two exceptions, the principals will be youthful. Leon Rothier, who will be Mephistopheles, is from the older generation. Valentina is Donald Dickson, from the Juilliard School. Hilda Burke is Marguerite. Sydney Rayner, Lucielle Browning, also from Juilliard, and a young Australian baritone, Robert Nicholson, complete the list. It is probably the youngest cast that ever sang the opera at the Metropolitan, Pattison says.

Rose Bampton is to make her American operatic debut as a soprano next Friday as Leonora in "Il Trovatore." May 12, Walter Damrosch's latest opera will be given. It is based on Nathan Hale's "A Man Without a Country."

At least one opera a week will be given in English.

New Citizenship Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, Mich., May 1.—United States District Judge Arthur J. Tuttle upheld today a 1929 Federal statute giving alien sailors on merchant vessels under United States registry the right to become citizens after three years of continuous service. The ruling, said by attorneys to be the first under the 1929 act, will affect several thousand seamen. The decision was in the case of Albert E. Bone of Wyandotte, a native of England.

TEACHERS POLLED ON REPEAL OF ANTI-UNION RULE

Secret Vote Taken; Results to Be Announced at School Board Hearing Tomorrow Night.

A secret poll of the 2700 principals, teachers and permanent substitutes of the public schools has been taken by a committee, representing the various pedagogic organizations, to determine sentiment for or against repeal of the dead-letter rule of the Board of Education prohibiting Instruction Department employes from belonging to labor unions.

The results, which have not been announced, will be presented to the board's instruction committee at a public hearing tomorrow night on repeal of the rule.

Repeal has been sought for more than two years by the Teachers' Union of St. Louis and St. Louis County, local branch of the American Federation of Teachers, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor. This union has been supported in its effort by many other St. Louis unions and by teachers' and other labor organizations in various cities.

Reason for Secret Vote.

Some board of Education members have said in the past that a principal reason for not repealing the rule, which has never been actively enforced, was the objection of many teachers that they did not wish to be bothered by the question of union affiliation. The poll was decided on for exact information as to the attitude of the teaching corps.

Heads of the various professional organizations of the public school teachers constituted the committee in charge of the poll, which, it was said at the Board of Education, was undertaken of the teachers' own volition. These groups included the large Grade Teachers' Association, the High School Teachers' Association, the principals' organizations, the various units of the Negro corps and the St. Louis district of the Missouri State Teachers' Association.

The committee inquired whether Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling had any objection to the poll before issuing the ballots. He had none.

The ballots, distributed at the various schools Friday, quoted the pertinent portion of the board's rule and added the proposition, as follows: "If you favor the retention of this rule, vote 'Yes' by scratching 'No.' If you do not favor the retention of this rule, vote 'No' by scratching 'Yes.'"

Each teacher and principal was directed to place her or his ballot, after marking, in a plain, sealed envelope, without identifying symbols or names, and the principals collected the envelopes, turning them in to the committee at the Board of Education office yesterday. Unused ballots were returned. It was announced that the ballots would be counted tomorrow.

Administrative officers, supervisors and clerks of the instruction department, numbering about 300, did not receive ballots.

Gerling's Opinion of Sentiment.

Superintendent Gerling, in response to inquiry by a Post-Dispatch reporter, said that in his opinion few teachers desired to belong to the teachers' union and that none belonged to it now. He recalled, however, that a few teachers of vocational subjects have been members of craft unions.

The teachers' union, headed by Dr. Paul W. Preisler, an instructor in biochemistry in Washington University Medical School and chairman of the Socialist City Committee, has declined to reveal its membership because of the Board of Education rule. It is open to teachers in private schools and St. Louis County public schools.

Members of the teachers' union have been instructed by the union "not to indicate their interest in the union issue among teachers in St. Louis schools," George E. Duemler, attorney for the union, announced last night. Asked whether this was an instruction to refrain from voting in the poll, Duemler said the order could be interpreted that way, but members were free to follow the instruction or not, as they saw fit.

Dr. Francis C. Sullivan, president of the Board of Education, said, when told of the poll, that he had received no indication recently of the teachers' attitude toward the rule and had no idea whether any members of the corps belonged to the union. He declared the rule had been violated within a month after its adoption in 1920, in the employment of a craft union member as a teacher.

Soon after the agitation for repeal of the rule began the board suggested that advocates of repeal might test the legality of the regulation in court. If the vote of the teaching corps should prove to be strongly in favor of retaining the rule, it is unlikely the board will repeal it.

Apparently the National Labor Act, guaranteeing the right of employes to organize, would have no bearing on this matter, as the act does not apply to employes of political subdivisions. The board may ask its attorney for an opinion on the point.

4600 ARE IDLE IN EIGHT C I O STRIKES IN CITY

Organizational Drive Being Carried on Chiefly in Electrical, Garment and Steel Products Plants.

SEVERAL COMPLAINTS FILED WITH N L R B

Century Co. Employes to Vote This Week— Firm Pledges Recognition If Union Wins.

A survey of the St. Louis strike zone shows about 4600 persons idle in eight strikes resulting from the organizational efforts of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In several instances charges of unfair labor practices have been fild with the National Labor Relations Board against employers by C I O unions, while in others employers have sought protection for their property and personnel through Circuit Court injunction suits. The Labor Board has been instrumental in arranging negotiations, which may be expected to result in settlements of strikes, and the parties in other serious labor disputes have been brought together through Labor Board mediation.

One Strike in 56th Day.

Six of the eight St. Louis strikes are as follows:

Emerson Electric Manufacturing Co., in its fifty-sixth day, 2000 idle.

Century Electric Co., 21 days, 1450 employes, some of whom are working under protection of an injunction.

St. Louis Car Co., 34 days, 870 employes.

Mesker Bros. Iron Co., 33 days, 150 shop workers.

National Underwear Corporation, three months, 139 machine operators.

Baldor Electric Co., five days, 200 employes.

Garment Union One of Sponsors.

Strikes at the Emerson, Century and Baldor companies are being conducted by the United Electrical & Radio Workers of America, those at the St. Louis Car Co. and Mesker Bros. by the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel & Tin Workers, while the National Underwear Corporation strike, which was started by unorganized employes, is being directed and financed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union.

In addition, the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union declared strikes at the Solomon Dress Co. on March 24 and at the Lang-Kohn Manufacturing Co. on March 30. The Solomon Dress strike is in connection with the union's drive to organize the cotton garment industry in this area, while the demonstration at Lang-Kohn is in protest against company unionism and the alleged use of labor spies. The Solomon firm has 80 employes and Lang-Kohn 150. Both firms have continued to operate, Lang-Kohn under the protection of a temporary injunction.

Century Co. Election Called.

Century Electric Co. employes will indicate this week by ballot whether they want the United Electrical & Radio Workers of America to represent them in collective bargaining. David Shaw, regional attorney for the National Labor Relations Board, announced yesterday that the company had agreed to recognize the union if a majority of the employes selected the organization as their representative. Shaw said the election would be held before Thursday and he believed it would result in an early settlement of the strike. It will be the first plant vote conducted by the present Labor Board in St. Louis.

A stipulation covering the election provides for dismissal of charges of unfair labor practices, filed against the company by the union. Four employes, who contended they were dismissed for union activity, will be returned to their jobs when the strike is ended.

William Senter, C I O organizer, predicted a union victory in the vote. At a meeting yesterday Sentner urged the strikers to "get out the vote," but to carefully observe all rules. Prior to the calling of the strike by the union on April 12, an employes' representation group announced that a large majority of Century workers had voted against outside representation. The election will include employes of the Century foundry.

R. N. Hill, plant manager, said the company believed that the election was the "quickest and fairest" method of determining the proper bargaining agency and getting its plants back to normal production.

Third St. Louis Car Co. Offer.

St. Louis Car Co. strikers will meet at 2 p. m. tomorrow at 3414A Union boulevard to pass on a third company wage offer. The company preeviously had offered union recognition for its union members, a 40-hour week and a wage increase of 5 cents an hour. In rejecting the proposal the strikers voted to press their demands for full union recognition and wage increases of 10 to 12 cents an hour.

The Emerson strikers' committee expects to resume negotiations tomorrow to obtain a better wage offer than that tendered last week, which was facetiously termed by Sentner as "too, too generous" and was rejected by the committee. The strikers are demanding recognition of their union as sole collective bargaining agency, a 10-cent hourly wage increase and a 50-cent hourly minimum wage.

Federal Judge George H. Moore indicated yesterday that he would hand down a decision tomorrow on the pleas of the Kresge Co. and the McCrory Stores Corporation for a preliminary injunction against the Clerks', Waitresses' and Cooks' unions to stop picketing of stores at 522 Washington avenue and 425 North Sixth street.

Counsel for both sides appeared before Judge Moore yesterday, and Wayne Ely, attorney for the companies, renewed the application for a preliminary injunction until the case can be heard on its merits. Ely argued that the defendants have damaged the stores through statements which the firms have declared untrue, and the unions have not made specific denials of the company averments. Paul Dillon and Claude O. Pearcy, representing the unions, contended the trouble was strictly a labor dispute, and challenged the right of the Court to issue an injunction. Ely said there was no quarrel between the companies and the employes.

BELL CUTS LONG DISTANCE INTERSTATE TELEPHONE RATES

Reduction Apply In Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas and Part of Illinois.

A reduction of rates for interstate long distance telephone calls handled exclusively over the lines of the Southwestern Belle Telephone Co., was announced yesterday, to be effective June 1.

The revised schedule, to be filed with the Federal Communications Commission at Washington, will set rates between various points, in interstate traffic and more than 42 miles apart, which company officials estimated would produce $460,000 a year less revenue than present rates on like volume.

The Southwestern Bell territory, in which the new rates will apply, includes the states of Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, and part of Illinois. This is the ninth reduction in long distance rates since 1926.

BURKE SAYS BROWDER IS COURT PLAN AUTHOR

Senator Quotes Communist's Speech in Campaign Urging Increase in Tribunal.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Senator Burke (Dem.), Nebraska, said today that the Roosevelt Court scheme was "first heard of" in a speech by Earl Browder, presidential candidate of the Communist party.

The Senator asserted that Browder, speaking at Baltimore toward the close of last year's campaign, suggested that the court be increased to 20, so that the 11 new members would constitute a clear majority."

Burke's statement was made in an open letter to Edgar Howard, publisher of the Columbus (Neb.) Daily Telegram, which published an editorial criticising Burke's position against the court bill. Burke also took occasion to answer similar criticism by Dan V. Stephens, Fremont (Neb.) banker.

Referring to the Browder speech, Burke said, "There was a man who did not hesitate to frankly state his purpose."

"If you heard him," he added, "you no doubt uttered a prayer of thankfulness that no such immoral and un-American idea was entertained by the candidate of our party, or by any candidate who had a chance of being elected.

"My critics, let me say to you, that you heard no such suggestion from our party leaders of high or low degree, nor from our President until that fatal February, 1937, when he laid the plan before a stupefied Congress and a startled country.

"How then in the face of this record does anyone dare to say that my previous declarations of faith in our leader require me now to abandon the convictions of a lifetime and support a proposition which has been denounced by every reputable spokesman of our party!

"Must I go Communistic with Browder and join those who would strike down the safeguard of our independent judiciary because some misguided and fanatical court haters have misled our President into the espousal of such a plan?"

Bishop Philip M. Rhinelander of the Episcopal Church has issued a statement saying "it is very significant that the strongest and best reasoned opposition to the President's plan for the Supreme Court comes from men and women of liberal opinions."

Their opposition, he said, was based upon "their love of liberalism." They "hold the plan to be antil-liberal," he continued, adding: "That is the most convincing argument that can be made against it."

AMY MOLLISON TO FLY PLANE TO U. S. FOR AIR RACE TO PARIS

English Woman Wants to "Get Here Quickest Way" for $75,000 Competition in August.

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 1.—Mrs. Amy Johnson Mollison, famous English aviatrix, announced today she would fly from Paris to New York in July "to get my plane here the quickest way so that I may compete in the New York-Paris air race in August.

The derby is for a prize of $75,000 offered by the French Government to the pilot taking the least time in a flight from New York to Paris during August, in connection with the tenth anniversary of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's memorable flight over the same route. Other prizes total $73,000.

Mrs. Mollison said a French Goeland, low-winged cabin monoplane, being constructed in Paris for "a friend," would be loaned to her for the flights.

Pilots H. T. Merrill, James J. Mattern and one using the psuedonym Ben Hill have filed entry. All three have flown the Atlantic.

Senator Sheppard (Dem.) Texas, said today the Commerce Department is reconsidering its opposition to the race in the light of the French Government's revised regulations, requiring entrants to fly multi-motored planes.

JURY TAMPERING CHARGE TAKEN UP BY TREASURY

Agent Investigating Charges Against Accused Chicago Alcohol Unit Officials.

CHICAGO, May 1.—O. Norman Forrest of Washington, attorney for the United States Treasury Department, began today an independent investigation of charges of alleged jury tampering against E. C. Yellowly, district supervisor of the Alcohol Tax Unit, and one of his aids.

Forrest, who conferred today with District Attorney Michael Igoe, said he would represent Yellowley and L. Z. Baker, senior inspector in charge of alcohol permits, when the two men appear before Judge James H. Wilkerson to show cause why they should not be cited for contempt.

The citations are based on an affidavit accusing them of conferring privately with the foreman of the April Federal grand jury in a hotel the day before Judge Wilkerson discharged the grand jury.

Forrest obtained a postponement of the contempt hearing from May 10 to June 1.

Tribute to Genghis Khan in Peiping

PEIPING, May 1.—Peiping's Mongol colony bowed before a portrait of Genghis Khan today in ceremonies celebrating his supposed birthday anniversary and the thirteenth century foundation of the Mongol dynasty that conquered China and much of Asia. Mongol leaders pleaded impassively for punitive wars to regain lost territories.

OIL COMPANY OFFICER REBUKED BY COURT

Philip Siteman Reprimanded After Brother-in-Law Is Fined for False Testimony.

Philip Siteman, vice-president of the Site Oil Co., was sternly reprimanded by Circuit Judge Max G. Baron yesterday, after Siteman's brother-in-law was fined $25 for testifying falsely as to his qualifications to sign an appeal bond for the company in a civil suit.

"Perjury has become accepted around some courts as a mere violation of social etiquette," Judge Baron said in his lecture to Siteman.

The oil company officer was summoned to court after Nathan Newman, 5845 Maffitt avenue, admitted he was the firm's straw man and was only the nominal titleholder of property listed in his name. He also withdrew a statement that he was owner of a filling station, later admitting he was only manager.

Judge Baron first ordered him to jail, but changed the penalty to a fine, and summoned Siteman, who denied he had expected or instructed Newman to deceive the Court.

"This man, Newman, was a tool in your hands," Judge Baron said. "I'm sorry to make him suffer instead of you or your corporation. You expected him to perjure himself to help your company. He is not the real culprit."

"I've helped many a young man," Siteman replied.

Rewards for Missouri Murderer.

MARSHALL, Mo., May 1.—Rewards totaling $380 have been offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer or murderers of Miss Nellie Price, whose weighted body was found in the Missouri River near Malta Bend last Tuesday. The Saline County Court has offered $200, the Marshall Chamber of Commerce $100, and individuals $80.

Destitute Jews Appeal in Vain.

WARSAW, Poland, May 1.—Seventy Jewish exiles from Germany, hungry and without funds, gathered today at offices of the Jewish Relief Committee for German Emigrants, which has exhausted its funds. The refugees appealed to the Joint Distribution Committee, but were told American funds were distributed exclusively among poor Polish Jews.

11,481 LAWSUITS PENDING BEFORE CIRCUIT COURT

Damage Cases Preponderate; First Count Ever Made Covers Only Assignment Division.

The first complete count ever made of lawsuits in the assignment division of Circuit Court has been completed. There are 11,481 such cases awaiting trial. The record was made public yesterday by Circuit Clerk H. Sam Priest, under whose direction the count was made.

Included in the cases are 4784 damage suits, 2540 garnishment proceedings, 1598 appeals from Justice of the Peace courts, 424 mechanic liens, 301 suits on insurance policies, 69 will contests, 102 debt actions, 227 appeals from the Probate Court and 71 breach of contract cases.

In addition there are 110 other suits, involving contracts, 73 suits on special tax bills, 32 on redemption of realty sold at foreclosure and 24 suits involving leases.

No count was made of the number of cases pending in the two equity courts and in the Court of Domestic Relations, where divorce actions are heard.

Dillinger Doctor Held Again.

By the Associated Press.

LEAVENWORTH, Kan., May 1.—Dr. Wilhelm Loeser, completing a three-year term for a face-lifting operation on John Dillinger when the now-dead gangster was a fugitive from justice, was arrested on an embezzlement charge at the gates of the Federal prison annex here today by two deputy sheriffs from Chicago.

G. B. BRYANT LOSES PENAL BOARD POST

Gov. Stark Announces He Has Not Decided on Successor.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 1.—Gov. Stark announced today that he would not reappoint George B. Bryant of Marshall as State Parole Commissioner and member of the State Penal Board, but said he had not decided on Bryant's successor.

It has been understood in political circles here that Bryant would not be retained in a probable shakeup of the State Penal Board, but the Governor heretofore has declined to discuss his plans in that connection. He would not comment today on whether he would reappoint the other two board members, Stephen B. Hunter of Cape Girardeau, who is director of penal institutions, and Paul V. Renz of Platte City, Farm Commissioner.

Bryant Under Investigation.

Bryant was under fire several months ago in an investigation by Attorney-General Roy McKittrick into alleged irregularities in withdrawals of subsistence supplies from the penitentiary and intermediate reformatory commissaries by penal officials and employes, for their own use.

McKittrick charged Bryant had drawn such supplies for his own use and had used two convicts as servants at his private residence, without legal authority.

The Attorney-General's inquiry also was directed against the management of the intermediate reformatory at Algoa by Guy W. McLain, superintendent, and requisitioning of subsistence supplies for the institution by McLain for his own use. Gov Stark recently appointed Grover Cleveland Clevenger, farmer and former electrical engineer of Ray County, as superintendent at Algoa. Clevenger assumed his duties as superintendent today.

Bryant, a Democrat, was appointed to the Penal Board, with the position of Parole Commissioner, by former Gov. Park in 1933. Director Hunter, a Democrat, and Renz, a Republican, also were appointed by Park.

Parole Bill Pending.

Gov. Stark said he probably would delay the appointment of a successor to Bryant until the Legislature determined what it would do with a pending bill proposing revision of the existing parole system in the State penal institutions, and more adequate provision for supervision of persons paroled from the institutions.

This bill, pending in the House, would create a separate board of three members, to make investigations, hear parole applications and make recommendations to the Governor as to paroles and pardons, and supervise paroled persons.

The Penal Board has supervision of the penitentiary here, the intermediate reformatory at Algoa, the boys' reformatory at Boonville, the industrial home for white girls at Chillicothe, and the industrial home for Negro girls at Tipton.

STATE INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS BOARDS URGED BY MURPHY

Michigan Governor Tells Women's Peace League of Need in Labor Disputes.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan advocated tonight the establishment in each state of a board of industrial relations with broad powers to deal with labor disputes.

Speaking before the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, he said: "Industrial disturbances created by labor disputes affect the public interest and call for some measure of governmental intervention and controll."

Each board, he said, should deal not only with industrial disputes, but should make investigations of conditions and practices "that are inimical to the interests of the public and to employers and employes."

He said the use of force to settle labor troubles is "foredoomed to failure" and declared that "violence, at its best, is distinguished by its singular aptitude for breeding more violence."

The attainment of industrial peace, he said, "rests upon tolerance and reasonableness."

BURLESQUE HOUSES FIGHT ORDER TO CLOSE

Two Reopen in New York Under Court Sanction—12 Remain Dark.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—After the License Commissioner refused today to renew the licenses of 14 burlesque theaters, which featured "strip-tease" performances, two reopened under court order. The other 12 closed their doors.

Supreme Court Justice Edgar J. Lauer, at his home, signed a stay of the closing order as to the Eltinge and Gaiety Theaters, pending a hearing Monday before Supreme Court Justice Jonh F. Carew.

The Gaiety is a Broadway house controlled by the Minskys' Jim Corporation and the Eltinge is in the heart of Times Square.

At the two theaters ticket sellers took their places and by 9:15 p. m. barkers appeared in front of the marquees announcing "the show is on."

A two-day hearing in which Protestant, Catholic and Jewish leaders denounced burlesque as a menace to morals preceded the decision of License Commissioner Paul Moss to withhold the permits, which expired at midnight last night.

Mayor LaGuardia commented: "This is the beginning of the end of incorporated filth."

In a statement, Moss specified the old Eltinge Theater, but declared that what he said about this theater was applicable to the other 13.

"Coarse and vulgar" were descriptive adjectives Moss used, but he made no direct reference to the strip-tease, a major point in many of the complaints.

He said he had given the utmose consideration to the fact that the theaters employ between 600 and 700 persons, but that the welfare of the public was plainly imperiled by "the type of performance, the language used, and the display of nudity."

CHILD KILLED, 16, WOUNDED IN ATTACK ON JEWS IN WARSAW

Bomb Thrown Into May Day Procession, Then Attackers Open Fire With Pistols.

WARSAW, Poland, May 1.—A child was killed and five men were wounded by a bomb thrown into a May Day procession of Jewish Socialists. The attackers then opened fire with revolvers, wounding 10 Jews.

Bombs exploded at several places in the city, including in the street outside the headquarters of Col. Adam Koc, who recently worked out a national movement on Fascist lines. There were no casualties.

TIMES SQUARE MONUMENT

Memorial to Father Duffy to Be Dedicated Today.

NEW YORK, May 1.—A memorial to Father Francis Patrick Duffy, chapain of the Sixty-ninth Regiment and "Parish Priest of Broadway," will be dedicated in Times Square tomorrow.

The memorial, a statue of Father Duffy by his sculptor friend, Charles Keck, portrays the priest in the full field uniform in which he won the Distinguished Service Cross and Croix de Guerre for his service in battle with "The Fighting Irish." The statue stands only a step from the theaters whose actresses and actors he counseled for years and only a short way from his old Church of the Holy Cross at Forty-second street and Ninth avenue.

MISSOURI U. MUSIC AWARDS

Normandy Girl Violinist, 10, Rated Excellent.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 1.—Madlyn Haupt, 10-year-old violinist of Normandy, Mo., was rated excellent in the annual interscholastic music contests which closed at the University of Missouri last night.

Springfield and Joplin led Class A with eight excellent ratings each. Leota Kizer, Cape Girardeau, won honor rank 2 in soprano and Dorothy L. Haman, Cape Girardeau, honor rank 2 in piano.

DOG OBEYS, LEAPS INTO SPACE

Master Inadvertently Gives Signal; Animal Falls 35 Feet.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 1.—When Kenneth Koehler holds his arm horizontally, it is a signal for his well-trained German police dog to jump over it. Koehler inadvertently held his arm that way yesterday. The dog did not know he was merely leaning against a bridge railing.

The dog jumped. It cleared the bridge rail and plunged to railroad tracks 35 feet below. The dog was not badly hurt.

Hundreds Seek Missing Child.

By the Associated Press.

TAMAQUAY, Pa., May 1.—Hundreds of miners and Boy Scouts and other volunteers tramped through the hills surrounding this colliery and railroad town today peering into coal holes and beating through underbrush in a search for 2-year-old Jerome Coonan, missing since Thursday night. The searchers called the boy's name repeatedly. Mining men said they believed the child fell into one of the many holes on the mountains. Most of the holes are hidden by weeds and bushes. The child was last seen leaving the backyard of his grandparents' home.

TWO SURVIVORS TELL OF SALEM BUS TRAGEDY

Driver and Passenger Testify at Inquest in March 24 Accident That Killed 21.

By the Associated Press.

SALEM, Ill., May 1.—The two survivors of the bus accident near here on March 24 told Coroner S. D. Carrigan today how their 21 companions met death when the bus caught fire.

Dick Thomas of Chicago, the driver, said the accident was due to the blowing out of a tire as the vehicle, carrying members of a professional roller skating troupe, was traveling about 45 miles an hour near Salem.

"I tried to regain control of the car but I couldn't," Thomas said. "It swerved back and forth, then left the road and crashed into a concrete abutment."

Thomas and Don Flanery of Kansas City, Kan., the other survivor, climbed out the door. They said the bus did not upset, but burst into flames immediately, trapping all inside.

Thomas said the machine's four gasoline tanks in the rear, apparently ignited. Seventeen perished in the bus, four others died of burns later.

Thomas testified the tire which blew out had been driven only 1800 miles and had been bought new in Miami, Fla.

Flanery collaborated Thomas' testimony.

The inquest was continued until Tuesday, when several other persons will testify. Thomas and Flanery asked to be allowed to testify early so they could return home. They left a St. Louis hospital today.

St. Charles Increases School Tax.

A proposition to increase the St. Charles school tax from 95 to 99 cents on the $100 assessed valuation carried by a vote of 735 to 123 in a referendum election yesterday. The increase was asked to pay for heating equipment. Only one-eighth of the 6500 registered voters went to the polls.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT

A Coroner's jury returned a verdict of accident yesterday in the death of Leonard Bohaneck, 20-year-old machine operator, 4946 Ashby avenue, of a bullet wound in the abdomen suffered April 18 when he was shot by Ernest Rooke, a tavern proprietor, who was firing at another man.

Persons who were in the tavern, at 6414 North Broadway, at the time of the shooting testified that Rooke fired at a customer who threatened the tavern owner with a knife after being ordered to leave because of disorderly conduct. None of the witnesses knew the man, they said. On advice of his counsel, Rooke did not testify.

WOMAN, ILL, TRANSFERRED FROM SHIP TO SHIP AT SEA

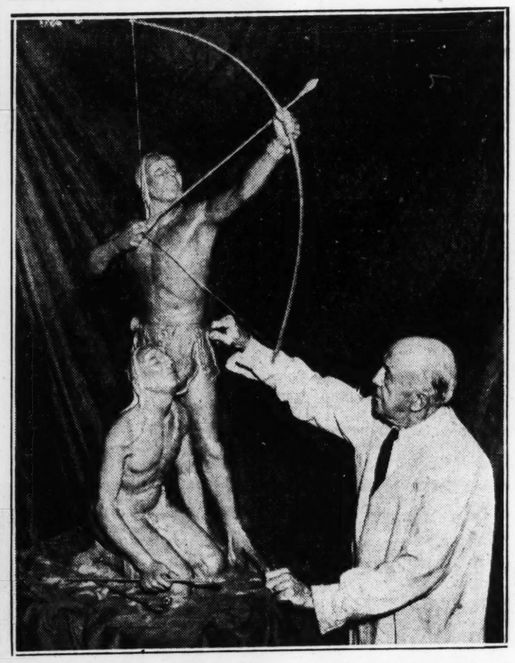
Vessel Goes 80 Miles Off Course to Aid Carin Michaelis, Danish Novelist.

BOSTON, May 1.—Miss Carin Michaelis, 65 years old, Danish novelist, who was taken ill while on the way from New York to Denmark aboard the steamer Svaenholm and was transferred to the steamer Scanmail several hundred miles at sea, arrived here today greatly improved in health. She was met at the dock by her nephew, Kenno B. Dahlerup of Quincy. She said she would return to New York.

The Scanmail was on the way to Boston from Copenhagen when the Svaneholm reported by wireless that Miss Michaelis required immediate hospital treatment. The Scanmail sped 80 miles off its course.

Capt. Albert V. Spaulding of the Scanmail ordered 100 barrels of oil dumped overboard to calm the rough waters. A lifeboat was put out and Miss Michaels was lowered into it in a stretcher. The ship physician treated her for a rapidly spreading face infection, from which she had virtually recovered when the vessel docked.

Design for Mound Builders Memorial



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

CHARLES A. BEATY, ST. LOUIS sculptor, and a plaster model of the $15,000 monument he designed.

BRONZE MONUMENT DESIGN FOR CITY READY

To Be Erected at Grand and Washington When Art Commission Approves.

A bronze monument to the mound builders, designed by Charles A. Beaty, St. Louis sculptor, will be presented to the city by a group of 20 citizens for installation in a memorial fountain at Grand and Washington boulevards as soon as the City Art Commission approves the design, the sculptor said to a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday.

Beaty did not disclose the names of the persons who have subscribed to a fund of $15,000 to pay for the monument. Tentative plans announced by Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst provide that the city construct the basin for the fountain, make water and lighting connections, and maintain the memorial, which would be placed in the small triangular park at the intersection. The cost to the city would be small, Darst told reporters.

Inspection by the Art Commission as been delayed because it is being reorganized under a new city ordinance which increased its membership. Mayor Dickmann has indicated he will make several new appointments to the commission next week so that it can begin to function again.

In Beaty's design bronze figures of two Indians, slightly larger than life size, surmount a nine-foot granite column. One of the Indians is standing, shooting an arrow into the air, and the other is kneeling beside a fire. The mound builders used flaming arrows for signaling at night. A kind of bronze which reflects light well will be used for the tips of the arrows, Beaty said.

The column on which the figures rest would be placed in the center of the concrete fountain basin, which would be about 30 feet in diameter, according to the sculptor's plan. The water jets would be placed about 18 inches below the top of the column.

Several of the subscribers to the monument fund have urged that the fountain be named in honor of the late David R. Francis, Beaty said.

A plaster model of the figures, half the size planned for the monument, is on exhibit at the Healy art gallery, 4526 Olive street.

SLOT MACHINE TIME AGAIN IN NORMANDY

Devices Return After Confiscation Order, Provide Pastime for Deputy Constables.

Three of the force's finest, in their uniforms of blue, their chests crossed by neat Sam Brown belts from which swing their trusty revolvers, took strategic positions in the bar room below the office of Constable Jim Hogan of Normandy Township, their superior, intent on a fourth uniformed deputy who was closely examining a device behind the bar.

The fourth deputy, his eyes lighted with excitement, reached into his pocket and carefully poked something at the contraption. He seized a projecting portion and gave it a vicious jerk. Four pairs of eyes watched expectantly. There was a bang, a rattle and a whir—then silence.

"Hell," said the deputy behind the bar, "let's go get speeders."

A Post-Dispatch reporter, whose attention had been attracted by the tense scene, looked over the bar and saw a slot machine.

Jerry Hogan, proprietor of the tavern and brother of Constable Hogan, said he had no idea how the machine got there. Neither did Justice of the Peace Frank Malone who quaffed a glass of beer. Nor did any of the uniformed preservers of the peace and dignity of the State, county and Normandy Township.

One deputy said it was beyond his powers of comprehension (or words to that effect) to understand why people should complain about the machine since it was "hidden from public view."

The machine in Hogan's saloon at Woodson road and Midland avenue, was like scores of others which suddenly made their appearance in Normandy Township last week, two weeks after they had disappeared quite as suddenly when Sheriff A. J. Frank ordered his deputies to confiscate all machines and arrest proprietors of places in which they were found.

HEADS PUBLIC HEALTH SOCIETY

Dr. E. H. Schorer, Kansas City, Elected at Springfield, Mo.
By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 1.—Dr. Edwin H. Schorer, Kansas City Health Commissioner, succeeded yesterday to the presidency of the Missouri Public Health Association. The convention named Dr. M. P. Moon, Missouri University professor, to take the president's office a year from now.

Other officers elected are Emilie G. Robson, St. Louis, first vice-president; Dr. Charles A. George, Springfield, second vice-president; L. E. Ordelheide, Clayton, treasurer. Dr. O. F. Bradford, Columbia, and Dr. Lynn M. Garner, Springfield, retiring president, were named to the board of directors.

Italian-Albanian Accord.

TIRANA, Albania, May 1.—King Zog and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister, concluded conversations here today with a communique that they were "determined to develop existing relations in harmony with the Italian-Yugoslavian Treaty"—recently concluded trade agreement. Italian-Albanian relations have long been cordial.

Cotton Shippers Elect St. Louisan.

TRANSFER OF TWO POWER FRANCHISES AUTHORIZED

Public Service Commission Approves Acquisition by Arkansas-Missouri Corporation.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 1.—Transfer of properties, rights and franchises of the Arkansas-Missouri Power Co. to the Arkansas-Missouri Power Corporation and acquisition by the latter corporation of capital stock of the East Missouri Power Co. were authorized by the State Public Service Commission Friday.

The commission's order authorizes the transfers pursuant to a modified plan of reorganization approved in the District Court of the United States, Northern District of Illinois, Eastern Division, and approved by the Missouri commission Jan. 14, 1937.

The Arkansas-Missouri Power Co., an Arkansas corporation, serves eight counties in Northeastern Arkansas and nine counties in Central and South Central Missouri. The East Missouri company, with headquarters at Louisiana, Mo., serves 37 communities adjacent to St. Louis.

NEW SUPPORT IN CONGRESS FOR ECONOMY EFFORT

Woodrum of House Asks 32 Independent Agencies to Reconsider Appropriation Needs for 1938.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Representative Woodrum (Dem.), Virginia asked heads of 32 independent agencies of the Government today to "resurvey and reconsider your appropriation needs for 1938" with a view to helping the House Appropriations Committee make "at least a 10 per cent reduction."

Woodrum, who is chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee which handled the $900,000,000 independent offices money bill, sent out the request by letter.

He said that at the first meeting of the full appropriations committee he would suggest that chairmen of other subcommittees in charge of big supply bills make similar economy moves.

"Not Going to Pass Buck."

Reduction of appropriations, Woodrum argued, is a legislative function.

"And so far as I am concerned," he added, "I am not going to pass the buck to the President or any departmental head. I believe through the method that I have suggested that we can cut down the expenditures for the departments to an absolute minimum. If then they have not been reduced enough, it is the duty of Congress to decide what, if any, governmental activities or functions it will suspend."

Representative Rayburn (Dem.), Texas, came out for a plan under which 15 per cent of appropriations for the next fiscal year would be impounded, as proposed by Representative Cannon (Dem.), Missouri. The President would be given discretion to withhold all impounded funds or release them as he saw fit.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, renewed his indorsement of a suggestion by Senator Byrnes (Dem.), South Carolina, for a blanket 10 per cent cut in all appropriations.

Argument of Rayburn.

Rayburn said the impounding plan would enable the President to make reductions where they would do the most good and the least harm. Speaking, he said, as an average member of Congress, Rayburn asserted he did not know enough about operations of Government establishments to be able to vote intelligently for a 10 per cent horizontal reduction. Such a cut, he said, might stop necessary Government activities.

Robinson, in contrast, said in a statement the Cannon plan would impose "an imposible task on the executive," invite competition among various Federal departments, and probably result in "very small savings." With reference to the Woodrum proposal, Robinson said the Congressional Appropriations Committees already had made cuts in estimates and it was doubtful whether a resurvey "would yield substantial results."

Senator Gerry (Dem.), Rhode Island, also backing the Byrnes 10 per cent plan, made a reservation that every item should not be trimmed automatically by that percentage. A member of the Senate Finance Committee, he recommended, too, that taxes be increased, if necessary, to balance the budget.

Borah and King Give Views.

Two Far Western Senators—Republican William E. Borah of Idaho and Democrat William E. King of Utah—joined tonight in asserting the presidential and congressional economy proposals are unsatisfactory.

Borah said he was "not deeply interested" in either a proposal by Senate leaders for a flat 10 per cent cut on all appropriations or a suggestion by President Roosevelt that 15 per cent of the appropriations be impounded for possible use later.

King said he opposed both plans, but of the two, preferred the 10 per cent cut. He warned against increased expenditures, as did Borah, who said the trend of Congreess was shown by the $90,000,000,000 in appropriation bills now before it.

A. F. L.-C I O CONTROVERSY IS TAKEN UP IN TENNESSEE

90 Unions Affiliated with Lewis to Be Denied Representation at Federation Meeting.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 1.—The struggle between the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization over unionization of workers shifted to Tennessee today.

President R. S. McCann of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, announced that 90 C I O unions affiliated with the State body would be denied representation at the Federation meeting opening Monday at Jackson.

McCann was directed by President William Green of the A. F. of L. to deny the 90 C I O locals, most of them United Mine Workers groups in East Tennessee, and hosiery and textile organizations, recognition at Jackson.

Rockefeller's Grandson Marries.

By the Associated Press.

MIAMI, Fla., May 1.—Miss Dorothy Jean Ryan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Ryan of Miami, and Spelman Prentice, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Parmalee Prentice of New York and grandson of John D. Rockefeller Sr., were married today.

GIRL SHOT IN HIP AFTER SHE PASSES BOYS WITH RIFLES

One of Chaperones Says Youths Fled When Rita Holst, 11, Was Wounded.

Rita Holst, 11 years old, 4728 Genevieve avenue, was struck in the right hip by a .22-caliber bullet apparently fired by a boy whom she passed on a hike at Natural Bridge road and Vista place, St. Louis County, yesterday afternoon. She was taken to Dr. Tiernon's Hospital, in Pine Lawn, for X-ray examination.

Miss Millie Petrov, 5958 Plymouth avenue, one of four young women chaperoning 11 younger girls on the hike, told officers that the group passed four boys, two of whom had rifles. A girl asked the boys if the rifles were "real," and received the reply, "you bet, we use them to scare people away."

After the boys had walked on a short distance the Holst girl felt the bullet strike her. Miss Petrov said no report was heard, but the boys ran away.

STUDEBAKER SALES CLIMB AS AMERICA CHECKS UP ON THIS CHALLENGE

ACTUAL PHOTOGRAPH

Sold on payment terms that challenge the lowest in town

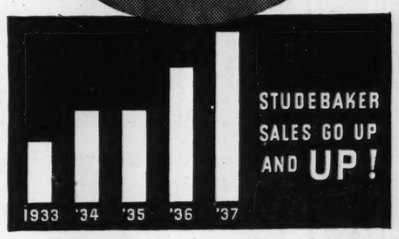

Chart above shows Studebaker sales by years up to May first. Look how 1937 Studebaker sales are soaring above even record-breaking 1936! You buy a popular favorite when you buy a Studebaker!

Ahead

OF ALL 9 OTHER SIXES IN VALUE!

OBSERVERS are chalking up victory after victory for Studebaker in the war for public preference that the six cylinder cars are waging this Spring.

Undaunted by the name or reputation of any other six, the smart, impressive Studebaker Dictator is forging to the front on sheer merit.

Sixes that cost more, as well as sixes that cost the same or less, fail to stand up against the Dictator under the spotlight of comparison. And the public as well as Studebaker is benefiting by the triumph.

Built with care and soundness that are not duplicated in any other six, the low-priced beautifully contoured Dictator has the world's strongest, safest, quietest steel body with a paint finish twelve coats deep. Its exceptionally spacious interior is richly styled by Helen Dryden. Its big trunks are by far more capacious than those of any other six.

It's the world's first six to offer the automatic hill holder plus feather-touch hydraulic brakes . . . the world's first six to offer the dual economy of the Fram oil cleaner and gas-saving automatic overdrive . . . the world's only six with non-slam doors that close tightly at a touch. See it and drive it and you'll understand why this great 1937 Studebaker Dictator is challenging all nine other sixes unreservedly!

H. H. ROGERS' WIDOW WEDS WALTER HOVING

Bride and Fifth Avenue Department Store Head Sail for Bermuda.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Mrs. Pauline V. Rogers, widow of Col. H. H. Rogers, and Walter Hoving, head of Lord & Taylor's, a Fifth avenue department store, sailed for Bermuda today following a secret marriage yesterday.

The ceremony was performed in Mrs. Rogers' apartment, with only members of their families present, and was not announced until after they had sailed. It was Mrs. Rogers' third marriage, and Hoving's second.

Also on the same steamship bound for Hamilton were Mrs. Rogers' son, Bradley Dresser, and his bride, Marion Snowden, who were married last Tuesday in Nevada.

A New York court ruled against Mrs. Rogers recently in her long legal fight for a widow's share of Col. Rogers' oil fortune instead of the annual income for which she signed a waiver at the time of their marriage.

Hoving was vice-president and a director of Montgomery Ward & Co. before entering Lord & Taylor's, and prior to that time was associated with the Associated Dry Goods Corporation and R. H. Macy & Co. His first marriage, to the former Mary Osgood Field, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Pearsall Field, was dissolved by a Reno divorce.

SECRETARY ICKES RESENTS ATTACK BY EX-GOV. PINCHOT

Calls Pennsylvanian's Denunciation of Him as "Power Seeker" Merely Political.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Secretary of the Interior Ickes charged today that former Gov. Gifford Pinchot of Pennsylvania was actuated by political motives in referring to Ickes as an "ambitious power seeker" and an enemy of conservation.

Ickes said Pinchot's attack, made before the Izaak Walton League in Chicago Friday, "was in questionable taste."

"It was a political speech before a non-political organization," Ickes said. "Mr. Pinchot is at his best when the other side isn't given a chance to present his case."

Pinchot was quoted as saying President Roosevelt and Ickes would be given too much power under the Brownlow administrative reorganization plan. The Brownlow plan provides for the transfer of the biological survey, the forest service and soil conservation program from the Department of Agriculture to the Interior Department.

"I wonder," said Ickes, "if there is any connection between Mr. Pinchot's political tirade and the current report that he proposes to run for Governor of Pennsylvania again in 1940."

$3000 SHORT OF FUND GOAL

Solicitation for Goodwill Industries Will Continue.

Donations totaling $22,000 have been received in the spring financial campaign of Goodwill Industries for a $25,000 expansion fund, it was announced yesterday. Although the campaign officially ended Friday, it will continue solicitations in an effort to reach the quota.

Wade Goodloe is general chairman of the campaign, Clarence Webster head of the men's division, and Mrs. T. Edward Rassier, chairman of the women's division.

ROOSEVELT DELAYS CRUISE TO SIGN NEUTRALITY BILL

Presidential Headquarters Transferred from New Orleans to Hotel at Galveston, Tex.

By the Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Tex., May 1.—President Roosevelt, after fishing in the gulf waters today unuder ideal weather conditions, delayed his 10-day vacation cruise by waiting here to sign the neutrality measure.

Presidential Secretary Marvin H. McIntyre, with a small staff, transferred White House headquarters to the Galvez Hotel here after an overnight train run from New Orleans, where the President embarked on the destroyer Moffett Thursday.

Communication between the ship and shore was maintained by radio and telephone through the destroyer Schenck off Galveston and a local Coast Guard station.

It was reported tarpon were running along a wide stretch of Texas coast.

SUN NOT SO HOT, BY 1500 DEGREES, AS ONCE SUPPOSED

Its Temperature About 4500 Instead of 6000, Experimenters Tell Physical Society.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—The American Physical Society received new evidence today that the surface of the sun is 1500 degrees cooler than the temperature estimated in the past.

Dr. Robert B. King of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and Dr. Arthur S. King of Mount Wilson Observatory announced that recent experiments with an electric furnace and comparison of the results with observations of the sun had determined that its temperature is only about 4500 degrees instead of 6000.

Dr. King said that he had first heated iron and titanium to very high temperatures and then measured the light they gave off with a spectroscope, an instrument which breaks light up into its constituent colors or wave-lengths. As seen through the spectroscope, each element has characteristic lines like the fingerprints of a human being, no two being alike.

After determining the intensity of the lines from iron and titanium at various temperatures, the experimenters used the resulting figures as a thermometer to check the intensity of the lines of the same elements coming from the sun.

SUSPENDED SENTENCE ON MAIL THEFT CHARGE

Charles A. Vosburgh, 17, Enters No Contest Plea, Accused of Taking Check.

Charles A. Vosburgh, 17-year-old son of a former president of the St. Louis Medical Society, received a suspended sentence for mail theft when he entered a plea of no contest before Federal Judge Charles V. Davis yesterday.

With a youthful companion he was charged in an indictment with having taken a letter containing a check for $12.50 from a mail box near the Vosburgh home at 55 Fair Oaks, Ladue. Vosburgh, in the custody of the United States Marshal, was placed in City Jail with Kenneth Elmer, 17, who was sentenced to 18 months in a Federal reformatory on pleading guilty to the charge.

"I knew your father well," Judge Davis said when young Vosburgh's attorney finished a plea for leniency. "He testified in my court many times. I recall his services for a crippled, bed-ridden mail carrier and his efforts in getting a relief bill for him through Congress. I acted as a messenger between them.

"Your father was a wonderful man. He set a good example for you and you yet may be able to follow in his footsteps."

Elmer, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Elmer, 5551 Enright avenue, was a student at McKinley High School. The youths needed money to buy gasoline for an automobile Vosburgh drove, the court was informed, and took the check, forged an indorsement, and cashed it at a filling station last Sept. 2.

Auto Puts St. Charles in Dark.

Electric lights in the St. Charles business district were off for about 45 minutes last night during the height of Saturday night shopping, when an automobile ran into a light pole, grounding several wires. Service was resumed at 9:18.

JAPAN'S CABINET TO STAY, IN SPITE OF HOSTILE DIET

Premier Hayashi Determined to Remain Although Opposition Has Won Majority of Seats.

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, May 1.—Late returns lent further strength tonight to the sweeping victory of anti-Government parties in yesterday's election. Premier Senjuro Hayashi prepared to call a special Cabinet session to chart Japan's future political course.

Figures from nearly 75 per cent of all electoral districts showed the opposition parties, Minseito and Seiyukai, had captured a decisive majority of the 466 seats in the House of Representatives.

The Minseito party elected candidates to 132 seats; the Seiyukai, 121; Social Massers, 32; Independent, 18, the Showakai, or Government party, 14; Tohokai, 8; Kokumin Domei, 6, and miscellaneous factions, 4.

The strength of the more radical parties was thought by many persons to be the most significant outcome. Proletarian groups more than doubled their Diet membership.

Premier Hayashi's Government has declared it will retain power in spite of a hostile Diet.

Some observers predicted political parties might be doomed to extinction unless the Government found a compromise system for working with the new parliament. Army leaders, Hayashi's pricipal supporters, have urged political parties be outlawed, charging them with interference with national defense and Government functions.

Hayashi spent two and a half hours in the imperial palace conferring with Emperor Hirohito. Some observers said the Premier might have offered to resign, but he gave no public hint of a change in his previously asserted stand.

Hayashi has said he was determined to convene a special session of the Diet in August; then, if the opposition refused to collaborate with the Government, to petition the Emperor to dissolve it again and hold new elections.

The current elections resulted from dissolution of the parliament after an impasse in which members of parliament accused the army of Fascist ambitions.

100 CHARITABLE AGENCIES ASK FOR C. OF C. SANCTION

Have Made Application for Approved Rating, Secretary of Bureau Announces.

More than 100 charitable agencies have applied for the approved rating of the Charities Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, Scott R. DeKins, secretary, has announced.

To be approved a charity must be incorporated, perform satisfactory work commensurate with the money spent, fill a need not already well-filled, raise money properly, have its books audited annually, belong to the Community Council and register cases with the Social Service Exchange.

Charities which pay high commissions to solicitors, give expensive entertainments or use professional promoters are not approved. No attempt is made by the charities bureau to pass on the work of churches, fraternities, educational agencies, trade unions or strictly patriotic organizations.

Coronation Day Will Test Endurance of Peeresses

Early Rising, Heavy Clothing, Long Fatiguing Waits; Many Will Take Cold 'Hot Dogs' Along.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, May 1.—Britain's peeresses will spend probably the hardest day of their lives when George VI is crowned King of England in Westminster Abbey, May 12.

They will have ringside seats at one of Europe's most brilliant pageants, but what they will pay in discomfort, hunger, strain and fatigue will make Coronation day for them a hard one.

First, they will have to get up about the time many of them are accustomed to go to bed. Since all the 8000 spectators at the ceremony must be in their seats long before the King and Queen arrive after 10, the first contingent is scheduled to reach the historic old Abbey about 7 a. m.

As they need to allow an hour to get through the crowded streets and another hour and a half for morning tea, make-up and dressing in the most intricate costumes they have ever worn, the peeresses will have to get up about 4:30 or 3:30.

Dressing is going to be a complicated business that morning. Make-up must be put on by electric light to appear in daylight and coiffures adjusted to fit both tiara and coronet.

Heavy Robes and Regalia.

Next the peeresses will have to don robes and regalia weighing from 10 to 12 pounds—and wear them all day long. A silver or gold brocade evening gown, a crimson velvet kirtle bordered with ermine, a long ermine-trimmed court train topped by a short ermine cape in the back, jeweled tiara, necklace and bracelets (worn over long white kid gloves) will make up their costumes. Their coronets will be swung over their wrists by an elastic band, ready to be donned when the Queen is crowned.

Then out in the "cold gray dawn" they will go for that long ride to the Abbey. Once there, their real troubles will begin. The gray Gothic Abbey—no hothouse at any time—will be "stone cold" at that hour of the morning. Officials dare not heat it much, lest it become overpoweringly warm when filled with the incoming crowds.

Cold feet and hands and cramped muscles will be the peeresses' lot, for each one has been assigned a covered chair giving her just 19 inches of space in which to sit. Dressmakers' vociferous protests that some peeresses "measure more than 19 inches across the hips" have fallen on deaf ears. Every noblewoman and her heavy velvet robes must be wedged into that space—regardless.

Six to Seven Hours in Seat.

Furthermore, she will have to sit there from six to seven hours covering a lengthy wait before the King and Queen appear and the duration of the long coronation ceremony. She can do very little moving about lest she evoke her neighbor's wrath.

Hunger is another problem. A breakfast and luncheon buffet will be installed in the Abbey. But most of the peeresses — knowing that there can well be "a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip"—are giving a thought to their own refreshment during those long hours.

In some of their coronets—those red velvet, gold-studded, ermine-trimmed caps swinging from their arms—will be cold "hot dogs." Others seated in the gallery of nobles will have sandwiches in their coronets and some will carry picnic boxes packed with bitter chocolate, almonds and thirst-quenching acid drops.

Last, but not least, a few are considering taking little electric radiators equipped with their own batteries to warm cold feet.

When the ceremonies are over, the peers and peeresses must wait in the Abbey until the royal entourage has left. Then at last, they may return home—if they can get there—to recuperate.

DR. CARL WEDEL, DENTIST, OBTAINS QUICK DIVORCE

Petition Filed in the Morning and Hearing Is Ended by Noon.

Dr. Carl J. Wedel, a dentist, in the Lister Building, obtained a quick divorce yesterday from Mrs. Rose M. Wedel, in Circuit Judge David J. Murphy's Court of Domestic Relations. He alleged general indignities. Mrs. Wedel submitted general denial, but did not contest the suit.

His petition was filed in the morning and sent to Judge Murphy's court. The hearing was ended by noon.

The dentist testified they separated in April, 1936, the sixth or seventh time since their marriage 10 years before. She nagged and found fault with him, he said, although he worked long hours and frequently returned home tired.

Often she left in his automobile "for 10 minutes," he said, and came back four or five hours later. He found she was playing bridge during the absences. Not infrequently when he came home late in the evening, she was gone and failed to return until 5 o'clock the next morning, he added. He was unacquainted with the persons she told him she was with.

His attorney told Judge Murphy that a property settlement had been reached out of court with Mrs. Wedel. She lives at the Mayflower apartments; he gave his address as the Gatesworth Hotel.

Clean False Teeth New, Magic Way

No Brushing—Yet Polished Like New in 5 to 15 Minutes!

Dental science has now found the ideal way to clean plates and removable bridges. All you do is place them in a small glass of water and add a little Polident powder. You can actually see the stains, tartar and foul deposits dissolve right before your eyes. And this Polident is absolutely harmless. It's made by the famous Wernet Laboratories and is approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and other leading authorities.

In a few minutes your plate is sweet and clean—purified and sterilized. The teeth lose that dead, false look—they appear live and natural. Polident costs only 30 cents at any drug store for a long-lasting supply.

Not a single person has ever been injured by the use of Canute Water in over 23 years. This exceptional record is your guarantee that it is perfectly safe to use.

Easy to Use

Because of its safety, cleanliness and dependability, you can use Canute Water alone, in the privacy of your own room. No previous experience is necessary. Simply wet your hair with it and allow to dry.

The time of day or the state of the weather makes no difference when using Canute Water. Apply it at your convenience. And since it does not alter the texture of your hair, you may curl, wave or set it — or get a permanent — as usual.

Speedy Action

It requires between one and three applications to re-color hair to its proper shade. The treatment can be completed in a single day.

And when your hair has once been re-colored, a single treatment, given ONLY ONCE A MONTH, is sufficient to keep it that way. No more attention is necessary.

Never Fails

No matter what caused your hair to become gray, Canute Water will positively overcome it. There are no exceptions.

Even if you have used some other hair coloring, it will be a revelation to you to see what Canute Water can do for your hair.

Amazing Results

Canute Water is neither sticky nor greasy. It leaves your hair clean and natural to the touch. There's not even a suggestion of "dye". Neither is it just a hair "darkener". Canute Water imparts a color similar to nature's very own.

Lasting Color

Even your most intimate friends will be unable to distinguish the re-colored hair from your natural. And the new color remains in your hair, permanent against sun, air, salt-water and shampooing.

So, if you are still young — if you still care what others think—and if you are not quite ready to be classed with the "old folks" get a bottle now. It will solve your problem so completely that you, yourself, will be astonished.

They inspected the Post-Dispatch Building yesterday morning.

20 TRUCKS USED IN CLEAN-UP

Paint-up, Plant-up, Fix-up Campaign Reported Successful.

The 1937 clean-up, paint-up, plant-up, fix-up campaign, which ended yesterday, was the most successful ever conducted here, Dr. Francis C. Sullivan, chairman, reported.

Numerous calls requesting removal of rubbish were referred to the city Street Department. About 20 trucks were used in that work. A canvass of more than 400 downtown business properties as well as similar work in residential sections was made. During the campaign, 41 speeches were delivered before schools, business and civic groups.

KNICKERBOC DRIVES IN R THAT BEAT OLD TEAMMA

By J. Roy Stockto

Rogers Hornsby's Brown tered base hits at Spor Park with reckless abando great futility for seven innin terday afternoon, but with staring them in the face brilliant, three-hit pitching b Elon Hogsett. they finally fou way to efficiency and run p tion and nosed out the Cle Indians, 3 to 2.

Base hits were 10 cents a and the Brownies had a worth in the seven frames, bu one run to show for all the wielding, while the Indians, t to a double by Solters and a by Pytlak in the second a home run by Sammy Hale i sixth, seemed weil on their w a 2-to-1 triumph.

Then suddenly the tide of th tle turned. With one out in eighth, Dennie Galehouse, th dian pitcher, lost control and ny Jim Bottomley drew the Br ies' first pass ofthe afternoon

Hornsby sent in the more Harry Davis to run for Botto but it seemed to be wasted stra when Hemsley quickly forced D at second.

Mazzera and Knickerbocke

Hornsby is not one to though, until he has gone thro all the motions and so he calle Mel Mazzera, a left-handed h swinging pinch hitter, to bat Hogsett. And Mazzera, more or of a bust in the spring training son, delivered in the crisis. punched a double to left and He ley pulled up at third. The tomers had seen so many Brow batters stranded on the bases t even this great opportunity di excite them unduly, but when Knickerbocker slashed a groun down first base way and H Trosky said, "How do you d Glad to have seen you. Good by permitting the ball to go mern on its way between his pro Hemsley and Mazzera raced ov the plate and there was a perfe good victory to cheer Don Barn Bill De Witt and the Ladies' da crowd including no doubt, many the 900 stockholders.

Hornsby still had the task finding a pitcher to protect th one-run margin through the nin inning, but he found one witho any trouble. Jack Knott, the fin looking right-handed gentlema who ought to be a whale of a pitch er, went to the hill and struck ou the dangerous and ambitious Juli Solters and when Davis misse Knickerbocker's throw on Hale grounder, the fleet-footed Roll Hemsley backed up the play, re trieved the ball and threw to Horns by to retire Hale, who tried fo second on the error. Then Bruc Campbell, another former Brownie flied to Vosmik, another former In dian, and the ball game was over

Until that eighth-inning rally the Browns seemed to be trying t prove that base hits in large num bers could be very unimportant For instance, there were four sin gles in the first inning, but only one run. A double play account ed for the scarcity of runs. Knick erbocker opened the inning with a single, but West's hot liner went straight into Galehouse's hands an Knickerbocker was doubled off first. POMPOON, FAVORITE FOR THE DERBY, RUNS FIFTH IN THE WOOD MEMORIAL

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

The Kentucky Derby dope received a severe jolt at Jamaica track, New York, yesterday when Melodist, a 15-to-1 shot won the Wood Memorial. Pompoon, odds-on choice to win the Churchill Downs classic, finished fifth, and is indicated in the photograph by the arrow. Melodist is shown here crossing the finish line with Sir Damion second and Jewel Dorsett third. The picture was made from the infield.

MELODIST, 15-1 SHOT, WINNER AT JAMAICA

Owner Louchheim to Ship Pompoon to Churchill at Once, Despite Defeat in First Long Test.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—An entirely new complexion was thrown on the Kentucky Derby today when the great Pompoon, favorite to win America's most famous horse race next Saturday, failed for the first time this year as Melodist from the Wheatley Stable won the Wood Memorial at Jamaica.

Asked to carry his vaunted speed over a distance for the first time this year, the son of Pompey not only failed to exhibit that speed but wound up fifth, six lengths back of Melodist, a 15 to 1 shot, in the mile and 70-yard dress rehearsal for the Derby. Marshall Field's Sir Damion trailed Melodist by a length with third going to J. W. Brown's Jewell Dorsett, a non-Derby eligible, and fourth to W. A. Carter's Clodion.

Pompoon had no excuse. He was the 3 to 5 choice of the record crowd of 25,000 but not once did he justify the odds after breaking in second place. Harry Richards tried his best to keep the J. H. Louchheim colt within striking distance but Pompoon dropped back steadily until he was in sixth place. He managed to move up a notch before the finish but failed to show the stretch drive that featured his victory in the Paumonoa Handicap 10 days ago.

Off for Downs Today.

Despite Pompoon's defeat, Louchheim announced after the race that the colt would be shipped to Churchill Downs tomorrow. "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, himself surprised at the fine showing made by Melodist, reserved final decision on the winner until after conferring with the colt's owners, Mrs. H. C. Phipps and Ogden Mills, tomorrow. Sir Damion also probably will make the trip, although no word was forthcoming immediately from Trainer George Odom.

Like Gallant Fox, Omaha and Granville, which Fitzsimmons sent on from the Wood to the Derby, Melodist displayed a powerful stretch drive that indicated the veteran trainer would have another strong contender for the Blue Grass classic. The son of Royal Minstrel-Vexing was slow to get under way but once he got his long legs working, he fairly ate up the ground.

Winner of only one of his nine starts as a juvenile and victorious in one of his two previous 1937 starts, Melodist broke from the barrier in sixth place. He dropped back to eighth with apparently no chance of winning the purse of $19,150 as Nick Wall sent Sir Damion into a half-length advantage over Clodion.

Melodist Eighth at Half.

At the half mile post, Melodist still was eighth, six lengths back while Sir Damion and Clodion were staging a duel out in front with Mrs. Payne Whitney's Chicolorado struggling to hold third place over Jewell Dorsett.

Midway of the turn leading into the home stretch, Johnny Longden had Melodist flying past horses until he was in fourth place. He kept on traveling and a sixteenth of a mile later was in second place, less than a length back of Sir Damion.

The Wheatley horse caught his speedy rival passing the eighth pole. They raced head to head for a few strides. Then Melodist

U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM REACHES SECOND ROUND

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 1.—The United States' Davis Cup team swept into the second round of international tennis competition today with a one-sided doubles victory over Japan.

Lanky Donald Budge, first ranking player of the country, and stocky Gene Mako, national doubles champions, teamed to blast the Japanese duo of Jiro Yamagishi and Fumiteru Nakano off the courts 6—0, 6—1, 6—4.

The victory gave the series,

Cardinals Sign a 14-Year Lease on Sportsman's Park

THE Cardinals have signed a new lease with the Dodier Realty Co., renting Sportsman's Park for the National League Club's games for the next 14 years, Sam Breadon, president of the Cardinals, announced yesterday. The old lease had four more years to run, but the new lease covers that period and an additional 10 years, at the same terms as the old one.

Breadon was given the authority to negotiate for a new contract at a director's meeting held last Thursday.

The Cardinals have been playing in Sportsman's Park since June, 1920.

X-RAY SHOWS PAUL DEAN HAS SHOULDER INJURY

Paul Dean, Cardinal pitcher who was forced to retire last season due to an arm injury and who has been ineffective this year, is suffering from a shoulder injury, X-ray examination revealed yesterday.

The examination, which took place at the Edward Mallinckrodt Institute of Radiology in Barnes Hospital, revealed the joint and bone of Dean's right shoulder blade have been injured.

Either Dean was struck by an object or a piece of bone was pulled out of the shoulder joint, radiologists reported. There is no clear fracture, however,

Dean received a complete X-ray examination of his head, neck and both shoulders. A new machine for taking cross-section pictures of the human body at any selected depth, known as a laminagraph, was used. The machine, exhibited to members of the American College of Physicians at their recent convention, is the first of its kind to be built in the United States.

Dean's trouble is definitely not mental, examining physicians said. His condition is more serious than merely a sore muscle or a disinclination to pitch, they added.

They expressed the opinion that prospects for repairing the disorder are good.

Breadon Makes No Comment.

President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals last night refused to comment on Paul Dean's case. Breadon said he had no report from the doctors concerning Paul's injury and therefore had no statement to make.

Cards Make 6 Errors Behind Weak Pitching, Lose to Cubs, 11 to 4

By W. J. McGoogan.
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 1.—The Cardinals suffered their second defeat of the season today, losing to the Cubs at Wrigley Field by a score of 11 to 4 when their pitching failed and their play in the field was very loose, the Redbirds being charged with six errors.

Charley Grimm's men found four Cardinal pitchers for 13 safeties while the Redbirds got nine off Charley Root and Clay Bryant, young right-hander, who went in as relief pitcher and held the Cardinals to five hits and one run in eight innings to get credit for the victory.

It was just one of those days when the Cardinals couldn't do anything right. Their pitching being weak gave them plenty of opportunities to do things wrong in the field and they took full advantage of the situation, throwing the ball around like a lot of schoolboys.

Silas Johnson, Bill McGee, Nathan Andrews and Mike Ryba were the victims of the Cubs' attack and their own ragged support. Johnson again failed as a starter and was removed in the second inning after he had yielded four hits and four runs. He was charged with the defeat.

Bryan't wildness, he issued nine bases on balls, gave the Redbirds plenty of chances to score, but the hit in the pinch was always lacking.

Demaree and Marty led the Cubs' drive with three safeties each while Terry Moore, Medwick, Mize and Ogrodowski picked up two apiece. Pepper Martin got the other St. Louis safety.

The Cubs went right after the Redbirds in the first inning. Leo Durocher starting them off by kicking Galan's roller. It was one of two errors with which Durocher was charged, a very unusual thing for the Cardinal's sparkling shortstop. Hits by Collins and Demaree gave the Cubs two runs in the inning.

In the second, the Redbirds fought back in true Gas House Gang style. Medwick singled and doubles by Mize and Pepper Martin, sent in two runs and Root to the showers. An error by Hack on Ogro-

Tigers Sell Pitcher.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 1.—The Detroit baseball club announced today the outright sale of Bob Logan, left-handed pitcher, to the Indianapolis club of the American Association. The Tigers obtained Logan from Indianapolis last winter.

WAR ADMIRAL NOW CHOICE FOR DERBY

Pompoon went up to 6 to 1; Brooklyn was rated at 10 to 1; War Admiral was cut to 5 to 2; Reaping Reward rated at 4 to 1 in James J. Carroll's Kentucky Derby book last night, after Pompoon's defeat in the Wood Memorial. Melodist was slashed from 100 down to 20, and Sir Damion was cut from 40 down to 20. No Sir is now 15 to 1.

Another Build-up Collapses.

WITH the "divers" all deleted from the program, Jack Torrance's heavyweight fight buildup ended on the ring floor at the Hippodrome in New York, last week. A fourth rater flattened Torrance in less than two rounds.

Torrance, a slow-going behemoth, at home only in his original specialty of shot-putting, had a "record" of four knockouts in the four professional fights of his new career.

He would have added a fifth, show into New York and still be permitted to operate is a sufficiently strong support of Jack Dempsey's contention that the game needs a Czar, or at least a national governing authority.

The fact that those concerned in the affair could take a tainted system of controlling or cleaning up the fight game is possible.

Melodist perfectly ridden. He was a bit slow to get away, but was kept clear of all interference, began to make up ground in run down back stretch, was taken to the outside entering stretch, caught leader at furlong pole and won going away. Sir Damion showed marked improvement, was sent to the front with a rush, displayed keen speed and held on gamely. Jewell Dorsett was on the inside all the way, got through entering stretch and finished fast. Clodion, fractious at the post, finally got away, showed speed for seven furlongs, then curled up. Pompoon ran a bad race. He got away well, but could not keep up going into first turn. Boy kept him from interference, began to move on him in run down back stretch, but colt failed to respond and finished away back. Merry Maker away in a tangle, worked his way up and closed gamely. Chicolorado had no mishap. Flying Scot never a factor. Rudie used badly.

ST. LOUIS U. TRACK TEAM DEFEATED BY WESTERN ILL. TEACHERS

"RED" MALLOY OF BILLIKENS RUNS HALF MILE IN GOOD TIME

Athletes From Macomb Win Nine Firsts to Six for Home Team in Meet at Maplewood.

By Reno Hahn

A brilliant half-mile run by Charles "Red" Malloy, was the redeeming feature of St. Louis University's track teams defeat by the Western Illinois State Teachers of Macomb, 78—53, yesterday, at Maplewood High School's field.

Malloy ran the 880 yards in two minutes, eight-tenths second. The red-headed middle distance star set a blazing pace in the first quarter-mile, running it in 56 seconds He was unable to match it in the second quarter, but finished gamely. His time was probably the best ever made by an athlete of this district.

Malloy is only a sophomore, and should be able to run the half-mile in well under two minutes, particularly if he has some competition which was lacking yesterday.

The Billikens, lacking capable athletes in the field events, hurdles, and long distance runs, were outclassed by the teachers, who won nine firsts to six for St. Louis U.

dowski's roller permitted Pepper Martin to score.

But in their half the Cubs counted two more to take the lead again and after that they were never headed. They got two hits and a walk in the frame and were helped along by Frenchy Bordagaray who made a two-base wild throw after fielding a bunt.

When Collins got his second hit of the game, a double to right, Johnson was removed and Bill McGee went in. There were two out at the time and he retired the next batter for the final out.

However, a single and a double gave the Cubs another in the third and McGee was removed for a pinch batter, Padgett, in the fourth.

Andrews was the third Cardinal pitcher and he went along swimmingly for three innings during which time the Cubs' attack subsided to one lone safety, a double by O'Dea in the fifth which did no damage.

Then Andrews went the way of all the Redbird pitching flesh of the afternoon. He started the seventh by walking Herman and before he retired the side Demaree's double, together with singles by Hack and Marty, had given the Cubs three more runs and a lead of 8 to 3.

Siebert batted for Andrews in the eighth, so Mike Ryba took up the burden in the Cubs' half. Bryant greeted him with a double, after which he hit a batter, two more singles and an error by Ogrodowski gave the Cubs their final three runs.

After the second inning, the Cardinals could do nothing with Bryant, although he gave them a chance by filling the bases with three walks in the third, which came to naught when Pepper Martin flied to Marty for the final out.

Ogrodowski singled in the fourth and went to third on Hack's error, one of his two of the day. Ogie got no farther when Padgett fouled to Hack and Terry Moore flied to Galan.

In the fifth Stuart Martin got the second of three walks he received during the contest and after Bordagaray forced him, Medwick singled to left. Hack threw out Mize and Pepper Martin.

Andrews and Terry Moore walked after two were out in the sixth only to have Stuart Martin ground to Herman.

Mize singled in the seventh with two out and Pepper Martin fanned.

Siebert's walk, following Ogrodowski's single with one out in the eighth set the stage for the only double play of the game, Terry Moore hitting into it.

Stuart Martin and Bordagaray walked to start the ninth and two infield outs permitted Stuart to score a very useless tally before Pepper Martin struck out to end the game.

ILLINOIS WESLEYAN'S GOLF TEAM IS ALMOST BLANKED BY BEARS

The Washington University golf team almost shut out the Illinois Wesleyan quartet in an 18-hole match at the Normandie Golf Club yesterday. The score was 17 to 1. Ben Hildebrand of the Wesleyan took a half point from George Stamm when he tied the last nine with the Bears' No. 3 man. The other half point was scored in the foursome matches when Hildebrand and Freeze tied the first nine with Stamm and Tommy Young.

Capt. Black led the field for the day while he was beating Morgan Evans, Wesleyan captain, 5 and 4. Black had a medal score of 77. Tommy Young took three points from Freeze, and Jack Lich took three points from No. 4 man Snapp of the visitors. Black and Lich teamed together and took all three points from Evans and Snapp.

RED BIRD NOTES

CHICAGO, May 1.

Bob Weiland, elongated lefthander who made such a great debut with the Cardinals when he defeated the Pittsburgh Pirates, is scheduled to pitch the final here tomorrow. He is expected to be opposed by Bill Lee.

The Cardinals leave here Sunday night for Boston to open their first Eastern swing of the season against the Bees Tuesday. From Boston they go to New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and return to St. Louis May 18.

The attendance today was 9686.

Ken O'Dea, the Cubs' catcher, was hit on the right hand by a foul tip from Medwick's bat in the first inning and required several minutes for repairs. He returned to play and when Bordagaray, who was on first base at the time, tried to steal second, O'Dea threw him out, the ball bouncing behind the pitcher's box straight to Herman.

A damaging injury to O'Dea would be almost the proverbial last straw for the Cubs with their list of injuries now including Curt Davas, Larry French, Tex Carleton, Hartnett and Garbark, their third string catcher.

Due probably to O'Dea's injury the Cardinals took liberties with his arm but three of them were out stealing in three innings. O'Dea was hit again by a foul tip from Medwick's bat in the third. This time on the left hand. Stuart Martin was on first at the time and he stole second, the first of four Cardinals who attempted the feat, to succeed. O'Dea's throw to Herman was high.

Bryant walked Stuart Martin, Medwick and Mize, filling the bases in the third, but with two out and the call, 3 and 2, Pepper Martin flied to Marty.

Pepper Martin struck out to end the seventh inning with Mize perched on first base. Pepper was so peeved that he hammered his bat on the ground until he broke the handle off it.

Perry Defeats Vines 27th Time In 55 Matches

By the Associated Press.

NORFOLK, Va., May 1. — Fred Perry of England defeated Ellsworth Vines of California, at Virginia Beach today, 2—6, 6—4, 11—9. The deciding set was one of the longest and hardest fought of the Perry-Vines tour, cutting the Californian's lead in matches to 28-27.

Perry and Vines whipped George Lott of Chicago and Bruce Barnes of Texas in doubles, 6—2, 6—4.

Lott defeated Barnes in singles, 6—2, 6—1.

CAMELS OF ST. LOUIS LEAD FIVE-WOMAN TEAMS AT ROCHESTER

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 1.—The Camels of St. Louis led the five-woman teams in the women's International Bowling Congress tonight with a total of 2582.

L. Grellner and A. Lebreque, both of St. Louis, were second and third with 600 and 598, respectively, in the singles. M. Frank of Chicago led in the singles with a 627 score.

EAST ST. LOUIS AGAIN WINS MEET TITLE

East St. Louis High School successfully defended its championship in the seventh annual Southwestern Conference relay carnival held yesterday afternoon at Granite City. The Flyers scored 63 points in the 15 events.

Belleville was second with 35 points, while Collinsville had 25; Wood River, 20; Granite City, 19; East St. Louis, 18; Alton, 16, and Madison, Ill.

In winning the relay carnival East St. Louis won five first places, 440 junior and senior 880-yard, first medley and shuttle relay events.

Records were established in the junior and senior relays, mile relay, shuttle relay and 120-yard high hurdle events. Roger Holcomb of Wood River negotiated the 120-yard high hurdle race in 16.1 seconds, one-tenth of a second better than the mark set by Claude Beeler of Granite City in 1935. In the junior 880-yard relay, the East St. Louis team of Rule, Kendall, Cohen and Shepherd ran the half-mile in one minute 38.5 seconds, beating the old mark of one minute 41.6 seconds made by Collinsville in 1936.

The senior 880-yard relay event found the East St. Louis team of Nicholson, Lillis, Duhadway and Kuykendall, setting a mark of one minute 33.6 seconds, beating the record set by another East St. Louis squad back in 1933.

Julius, Schell, Groh and Merker composed the winning Belleville team that established a new record in the mile relay of 3 minutes 40.2 seconds. Granite City held this mark with a time of 3 minutes 41 seconds, made in 1934.

The longest race on the program, the distance medley relay, was won by Belleville (Seib, McQuillan, Reister and Rodemeyer). The race was composed of a mile run, 220-yard and 440-yard dashes and the anchor man then running another mile.

The results:

DISTANCE MEDLEY RELAY—Won by Belleville (Seib, McQuillan, Reister and Rodemeyer); Madison, second, and Wood River, third. Time, 11m. 24.2s. Distance—Mile, 220, 440, mile.

U. S. DAVIS CUP TEAM ADVANCES TO SECOND ROUND

three matches out of five, to the Americans. Two singles events tomorrow will be a mere formality.

The series was virtually clinched yesterday when Budge regained some of his fireball tactics to defeat Nakano 6—1, 6—1, 6—0, in the opening singles.

Frankie Parker, second national ranking star, followed with a surprise decision over Yamagishi, Japanese singles and doubles champion, 6—3, 2—6, 8—6, 6—1.

As a result of the victory, the United States moved into the North American zone final and will face Australia, conqueror of Mexico today, at Forest Hills, N. Y., May 29, 30 and 31.

Australia defeated America last year in the zone finals.

In tomorrow's singles, Parker will meet Nakano and Budge will wind up the series against Yamagishi.

An exhibition mixed doubles match, after the Davis Cup play, saw Helen Wills Moody, former world champion, and Joe Hunt of Los Angeles defeat Margaret Osborne of San Francisco and Henry Culley of Santa Barbara, 6—3, 6—3.

Australia Also Advances.

By the Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, May 1.—Australia's experienced doubles team of Jack Crawford and Adrian Quist put a quick end to Mexico's faint Davis Cup hopes today by scoring a straight-set victory, 6-2, 6-3, 6-3, over the Mexican team of Alfonso Unda and Daniel Hernandez.

The triumph was the third straight for Australia, which sent Quist and Vivian McGrath out to win the opening singles clashes yesterday, and clinched the visitors' place in the American zone final.

The series will be concluded tomorrow with the final singles matches, which will have no bearing upon the series outcome. McGrath will play Esteban M. Reyes and Quist will meet Ricardo Tapia.

The Australians will leave for New York tomorrow night.

MISSOURI MILITARY WINS CLASS B TRACK TITLE AT COLUMBIA

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 1. — Supremacy in the medley relay enabled the Missouri Military Academy to annex the Class B championship at the State interscholastic track and field meet here today.

The Cadets added the outdoor title to their indoor crown, won early last month, after winning the last event on the program and shunting Charleston, defending champions, into a tie with Louisiana for second place, each with 18 points.

Malden won the Class C championship in another race in which the finish was jammed by six schools pressing close for honors. The winners collected 14 points, completely outclassing the Missouri School for the Deaf, defending champion, which finished far down in the pack with five.

A pair of State interscholastic records were among the four Class B records that tumbled during the afternoon, and both of these were smashed by Bland Roberts of Louisiana.

The Passing Show.

THE famous "It" girl Clara Bow
On Friday nearly stole the show
From Frisch's Gashouse Gang;
She posed to have her picture snapped,
But when J. Mize a homer slapped
The welkin really rang.

The Cincinnati Roughhouse Gang,
We thought would open with a bang,
That could be heard for miles.
But they will have to make more noise,
Or, change their name to "Rover Boys"—
Regards to Warren Giles.

Our good old Browns are home again
And in our midst they will remain
The first two weeks of May.
Although they're down we'd like to bet
They'll be in first division yet—
In fact they're on their way.

We Want a Homer!

That the female of the species is more exacting in her demands than the male is evidenced by her attitude toward the home run problem. The Knothole boys for example only "want a homer" from the top flight sluggers. Not so the knothole girls. They demand a four-ply swat even from the bat boy.

But a jolly time was had by all and the only criticism we heard of the Cardinals' guest star was "can you imagine a redheaded woman wearing a pink hat?"

Pitcher Charles "Red" Ruffing who became automatically suspended May 1, would like to be traded. We don't know whether the Browns could use "Red" or not, but they could find a place for somebody like him in pitching ability.

A ball player is no older than his legs and a guy with 41 legs on his birthday cake is no spring chicken. But as long as Rogers Hornsby can make it to the plate under his own power he will be no bargain for any pitcher.

Next!

See where Will Terry had joined Charley Grimm on the non-playing managers list. Which about narrows the waiting list down to Frankie Frisch.

Frankie while not exactly tugging at the leash and rarin' to go is standing by with that readiness-to-serve spirit that has ever characterized the Fordham Flash.

In the meanwhile, French Bordagaray, an outfielder by trade, is filling somebody's shoes, he doesn't know whose, at third quite acceptably.

Frenchy may not be a Pie Traynor or a Jimmy Collins at the hot corner but he has a good sense of direction and can toss the ball in close proximity to the spot where Johnny Mize hangs out.

Add Hunches.

And there is the guy who is going to bet on Pompoon to win the Derby because he thinks a Pompoon is something you wear on your hat.

And there is the other guy who says he wouldn't bet on one of Bradley's horses because all their names begins with "B" and he might get stung.

But don't forget that many of Bradley's "B's" are honeys.

University City Wins Triangular Track Carnival

CLEVELAND IS WINNER OVER BLEWETT, GAINS LEAGUE LEAD

Augie Gross' fourth consecutive victory, a two-hit masterpiece in the nightcap of the City High League baseball tripleheader yesterday, advanced Cleveland one stride closer to the league championship. The Carondeleters defeated Blewett, 4-1, at the Public Schools Stadium to take a half-game lead over the idle Beaumont Blue Jackets.

McKinley and Soldan, both defeated for the third time, were still without victories this season. The Goldbugs dropped a thrilling extra-inning battle to Central, 3-2, and the West Enders succumbed to Roosevelt, 9-4.

No Hits Until Fifth.

In 28 innings on the mound Gross has allowed only 16 hits and seven runs. The slim left-hander held Blewett hitless yesterday until the fifth, when Oliver Pickel singled off the glove of secondbaseman Jack Jarvis, who made a diving try for the ball.

McKinley rallied to score once in each the sixth and seventh inning, after Central had counted twice in the fifth, in the first afternoon game, which required only one hour and 50 minutes to complete. The Goldbugs contributed to the speed of the encounter by turning in a perfect defensive performance.

The Roosevelt-Soldan game was close for five innings, but the Rough Riders pushed across seven runs in the following frame to coast to victory, although the West Enders reciprocated with a four-run rally in the seventh inning.

Wacker Stars.

Roosevelt's starting pitcher was Emil Wacker, an overhand right-hander who, making his first league appearance, extended his string of scoreless innings to 13, still a jinx number, before being scored upon.

EANEY WINS BUT BILLIKEN TEAM LOSES TENNIS MEET, 4 TO 1

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., May 1.—Springfield Teachers defeated St. Louis University, 4—1, in a dual tennis meet today here, but in doubles so their No. 1 player, Louis Harp, lost his first match in three sets on the Springfield court. Harp was beaten by Frank Kaney, 6—2, 6—1.

Bill Sharp defeated Corney McDonald, 6—4, 6—0. Gerald Perry met Larry Mullen, 12—10, 6—1, and Clifford Pierce downed Bill Bates, 6—1, 6—2.

Perry and Pierce defeated Bates and McDonald, 6—0, 6—1, in the only doubles match completed. The Harp brothers, undefeated this season, had lost the first set, 6—2, to Kaney and Mullen, and were all square, 13-all, when rain halted the match.

HALLAHAN BOWS TO FOUR-HIT PITCHING BY 'RED' LUCAS

Danny MacFayden Singles to Drive in Run That Helps Bees to Defeat Giants, 3 to 2.

By the Associated Press.

CINCINNATI, May 1.—The Pittsburgh Pirates found the range in the sixth inning and bunched hits off Bill Hallahan to come from behind and defeat the Cincinnati Reds, 3 to 1.

A crowd of 4846 saw Red Lucas, veteran nemesis of the Reds in years past, allow them but four safeties, including two in the first, when they made their only score.

Lloyd "Whitey" Moore replaced Hallahan in the ninth after Handley tripled to open the frame. Moore walked two men, loading the bases, and then struck out three.

It was the Reds' eighth defeat against a lone victory for the season.

Lamaster Wins His Third Game.

BROOKLYN, May 1.—Lefty Lamaster, who is rapidly taking rank as the National League's rookie pitching find of the season, hung up his third victory today as he hurled the Phillies to a 4 to 2 victory over the Dodgers.

Although wild, giving seven bases on balls, the little southpaw handcuffed the Dodgers with five hits and fanned seven as he outpitched Fred Frankhouse and Tom Baker all the way. A crowd of 9602 turned out.

Leo Norris led the Phils' seven-hit attack with two singles and a double. Two of the three Brooklyn errors contributed to the Phils' scoring. Both of the misplays came in the fourth, when the Phils counted twice, a walk and a single by Norris helping along in the scoring.

Bees Capture Third in Row.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 1.—The Bees bunched five hits and all their runs off Clyde Castleman in a second-inning uprising today to nose out the New York Giants, 3 to 2, as they opened their first long "at-home" stay of the season.

A crowd of 10,000 turned out for the game, with Danny MacFayden, coming back fro mthree straight defeats, holding the National League champions to six hits and keeping them scoreless until the fifth.

The victory was Boston's third straight, coming on top of two decisions over the Phillies.

Solters Shows Us His Dust

Julius Solters, traded to Cleveland by the Browns last winter, has been giving Rogers Hornsby's team plenty of trouble in early games. In the second inning yesterday he doubled and scored on Pytlak's single. "Lemons" kicks a lot of dust into Catcher Rollie Hemsley's face as he slides across the plate.

then singled in order, but the safeties produced only one run.

There were three more hits in the second, but with the bases filled and two out, Vosmik flied to Campbell. There were two more safeties in the third, making a total of nine, with only one run to show. But it all worked out all right in the end and it was dandy batting practice and the Browns won and the 900 stockholders ought to be very happy, for if the Browns win a lot more like that one, and continue to bash the ball that way, the crowds will be larger and the stockholders more prosperous.

Brownie Notes.

Julio Bonetti probably will face the Indians this afternoon in the second game of the series. Mel Harder or Willis Hudlin will pitch for the visitors.

Clift made a fine stop of Solters' hard smash in the fourth inning, but followed with a fine throw far over Bottomley's head and Solters reached third. Hogsett pitched out of the inning, however.

The Browns' home-coming game attracted a Ladies' day crowd of 2661 cash customers, 991 women and 2292 boys and girls.

Manager O'Neill of the Indians, said Bob Feller's important right arm was improving but that he would not pitch during the series.

Bottomley doubled to right-center to start the sixth inning, and moved to third on Hemsley's infield out, but Hogsett tapped to Galehouse and Knickerbocker flied to Campbell.

Vosmik hit the left field wall with a double with one out in the seventh, but Bell flied to Trosky and Hornsby bounced gently to Hughes.

Johnnie Allen, Cleveland pitcher who was scheduled to work today, was taken to St. Johns Hospital yesterday for an examination. Allen had a pain in his side and it was thought that it might be an appendicitis case.

Triple Play Helps Junior Billikens Defeat Western

St. Louis University High School defeated Western Military Academy in baseball at Alton yesterday afternoon, 7 to 2.

Bergin, junior Billiken hurler, struck out 12 Cadets and allowed only 4 hits.

A triple play pulled him out of a bad hole in the seventh, however. With runners on third and first and none out, Stivers, Western Military Academy batter lined to Bergin, who pegged to Lucas at third, who in turn threw to Kruckemeyer at first, retiring the two runners.

BEARS' TENNIS TEAM WINS FROM PRINCIPIA, 6 MATCHES TO NONE

The Washington University tennis team defeated the Principia College players, 6 to 0, in a dual match on the Principia courts at Elsah, Ill., yesterday afternoon. Herbert Markwort, No. 1 singles player overcame a 4 to 1 lead to win the first set of his match against Walter Pearson, Oklahoma junior star, and he took the second, 6-2.

Harry Greensfelder won a close match from Leonard Watson, 6-4, 6-4, while Don Lorenz was forced to a three-set match with Curtis Foster, No. 3 singles player on the Principia team. The score was 6-4, 1-6, 6-2. John Stiegler of the Bears won from Dick French, 6-1, 6-2 in the fourth singles match.

Morris Garden and Julius Offstein, co-captains, returned to the Bears' team after missing several matches and won from French and Palmer of Principia 6-1, 6-2. In the second doubles match, Markwort and Greensfelder defeated Watson and Pearson, 6-0, 7-5.

Goose Goslin Is Felled by Pitched Ball

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, May 1.

GOOSE GOSLIN, left fielder for the Detroit Tigers, was felled by a ball pitched by Italo Chelini in the seventh inning of today's game with the Chicago White Sox. The extent of Goslin's injury was not determined immediately. Pete Fox replaced him in the Detroit lineup.

Goslin was the first batter to face Chelini, who had replaced Clint Brown on the White Sox mound with the Tigers leading, 11 to 4.

The veteran fielder slumped to the ground in the batter's box and had to be helped from the field.

AMES, Ia., May 1.—The Missouri track team fought out a close battle to whip Iowa State College in a Big Six dual meet here today by one-third of a point. The score was 65 2-3 to 65 1-3.

The winning margin came as the result of a tie in the high jump for second and third places.

THEVENOW GOES TO BOSTON, URBANSKI TO MINORS VIA NEW YORK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, May 1.—In a straight player trade, the New York Giants sent Tommy Thevenow, veteran infielder, to the Boston Bees for Billy Urbanski, shortstop, it was announced here tonight.

Urbanski was notified by Manager Bill Terry of the Giants to report to Jersey City of the International League, a Giant farm. He is expected to replace Manager Travis Jackson, who was injured Friday.

It was also announced by President Bob Quinn of the Bees that oJhnny Babich, right-handed pitcher was sent to Jersey City on option, subject to 24-hour recall. Babich came to the Bees from Brooklyn two years ago but came up with a sore arm last season.

Tigers Wallop White Sox, 11-4.

DETROIT, May 1.—The Detroit Tigers batted veteran Ted Lyons out of the box with a six-run outburst in the third inning today and went on to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 11 to 4.

Tommy Bridges went the route for Detroit and won his first start of the season.

BEARS DEFEAT BILLIKEN NINE BY 6-2 SCORE

Bob Gerst, Washington U.'s sophomore pitching star, again proved the nemesis of St. Louis U.'s baseball team, limiting the Billikens to three scattered singles while his teammates hammered out 13 hits to win, 6 to 2, yesterday afternoon at Forest Park. It was Washington's second successive victory over St. Louis in three.

Yesterday's defeat was the fourth in five games for the Billikens since Gerst and his Washington U. teammates ended the Billikens seven-game victory streak April 22. T he tow-headed righthander confined the Billikens to three hits in that game, also. St. Louis then went into a three-game slump that ended Friday when the Bills defeated Eden, 11 to 5.

Though Gerst pitched one-hit ball until the seventh, 10 walks gave the Billikens several scoring opportunities which were nipped by good pitching and some exceptionally fine fielding. Free passes ultimately gave the Billikens their two runs in the ninth. With two out, Debrecht and Veith drew passes, Drone was hit by a pitched ball, and Carl Totsch got the Billikens third safety, driving in two runs.

The Bears scored what proved to be necessary margin for victory in the first three innings, getting seven hits and four runs off Al Dudenhoeffer, starting St. Louis hurler, who moved to right field in the next inning. Mel McGonnigle, who went from third to the mound, allowed six safeties that included a triple and a double.

PRINCIPIA COLLEGE TIES BLACKBURN IN DUAL TRACK MEET

The Principia College and Blackburn College track teams battled to a 65½ to 65½ tie score in their dual meet on the Principia field yesterday afternoon. On his final try, Pierson of Principia took second in the shot put to save his team from defeat. The relay was then the only remaining event on the program and Coach Don Laughlin's runners won it to tie the score.

George Cooper, Principia track captain, broke his own record in the mile run making the distance in 4 minutes 37.1 seconds. The previous mark was 4 minutes 39.5 seconds. Cooper also won the 880 yard run and was ahead in the two mile race but let Kiles, his teammate take first place near the finish line.

The summary:

he still entertains an idea of carrying on, some kindly person should steer him off the rocks. Big, slow, heavy fighters cannot go places, if there is any competition worth the name.

They co-ordinate too slowly to meet a fast and fierce attack. The only fighters whom they might whip are men of their own type—too slow to think or act quickly.

Let's hope that Torrance's former job as a Baton Rouge policeman is still open to him. He'll make more at it than he will by fighting, if we have him gauged correctly.

The Derby Shaping Up.

ONE week before the Kentucky Derby field of 1937 parades to the post the race has narrowed down to a place where fewer than 20 starters are likely to face the barrier for the mile and one-quar

ANEROID WINS BALTIMORE SPRING HANDICAP AT PIMLICO

MANFUSO RACER BREAKS RECORD FOR EVENT AND EARNS $4680

Wise Prince, Second, Trails by Three Lengths—Daily Double Pay-Off Is $1693 for $2.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., May 1.—Aneroid, J. A. Manfuso's fast sprinter, accounted for his fourth successive victory today by winning the Baltimore Spring Handicap, main event of a racing program at Pimlico which furnished Maryland's third largest daily double pay-off.

After leading practically all the way, the four year old son of the Porter-Outburst, carrying top weight of 117 pounds, whipped Felix Spatola's Wise Prince by three lengths. He covered the six furlongs in 1.11 4-5, one fifth quicker than the record set by Wise Prince in the first running of the stake in 1935.

Weston Is Third.

A. C. Compton's Weston was third, trailed a head by his stablemate, Clingendaal, a three year old. Only one other three year old—Honey Cloud, which finished eighth in the field of nine—was in the test for thoroughbreds of this age and upward.

Because of his sterling performance in Maryland last fall and this spring, bettors in the crowd of 25,000 made Aneroid the favorite in the betting. Although nine started in the race, the winner paid only $5.20 for $2 to win, $3.50 to place and $2.70 to show.

His prize money amounted to $4680 net.

The daily double pay-off was $1693 for $2, exceeded in Maryland only by pay-offs of $2026 and $1907 at Bowie in 1935. Fourteen persons were the lucky holders of tickets on the winning combination—W. M. Elder's Enamor in the first race and Mrs. H. M. Pearson's Tiempo, in the third.

Enamor, a three year old filly, set a mutuel pay-off record for Maryland this season in her own right. She rewarded her scattered backers at the rate of $201.10 for $2 tickets to win. Tiempo was seven to one.

Rehearsal Is Winner.

Nine two year olds tested their speed in the four and a half furlong Pimlico nursery and Mrs. R. H. Heighe's Maryland-bred filly, Rehearsal, was first to the finish, beating Bomar Stable's Benjam by three fourths of a length to win $2500 net in prize money. J. P. Jones' Yomer was third, and E. K. Bryson's Bunny Baby, fourth.

The two-mile steeplechase, a daily attraction at the 15-day Pimlico meeting, went to Thomas Hitchcock's El Dorador by eight lengths over Drill Master. Greek Idol was third.

St. Francis tripped over Rhadamanthus, which fell at the ninth jump, and also fell but was remounted and ridden in to collect fourth money. Bell Man went down at the fifth jump.

CASE ACE IN DERBY TUNEUP, AN EASY VICTOR AT CHURCHILL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 1.—Churchill Downs, old Kentucky home of the Derby, opened its freshly painted gates today for the meeting of which the sixty-third renewal of the country's most famous three-year-old race is to be the feature, a week hence.

There was present the largest opening day crowd that has turned up at Churchill Downs in at least a dozen years; there was a step-up in the mutuel play of 15 or 20 per cent over last year's opener, and there was a remarkable string of successes by the Milky Way Farm, Trainer Bob McGarvey sending no less than three winners to the post.

Unruly at the Post.

Two of them were two-year-olds, and the other, most sensational performer of the lot, was Case Ace, one of the possible Derby starters. In a seven-furlong race, pitted against a somewhat nondescript field, Case Ace first threw its rider, Jackey Al Robertson, and breezed about a mile up and down the back stretch before being brought back to the post.

Then, when its unruly tactics caused Starter Billy Hamilton to place it on the outside, Case Ace actually broke from right beside the white-painted fence that is the track's boundary. It didn't take Case Ace long to get out in front of the pack, even though he did come from over there by the barns along the back stretch.

He never relinquished the lead, even though turning into the stretch he went wide again. All things considered, Case Ace ran very nearly two miles, in getting through with winning a seven-furlong race.

His success under the Milky Way banner called attention to the fact that there are two supposedly better ones—Reaping Reward and Military—over there in the barn getting themselves ready for the big $50,000 race a week from today.

Mars Shield Disappoints.

The feature race of the day, the Clark Handicap, $10,000 added, went to the favorite, Count Morse, of the Calumet Farm stable. Sir Jim James was second and Giant Killer, third, getting in there just ahead of Grand Manitou, the imported horse started by the movie director, Raoul Walsh. Count Morse took the lead at the first turn, passing Paradisical, and was never headed thereafter.

Perhaps another story was overlooked in this race. The Milky Way farm had a starter in it and did not win. The failure was Mars Shield, the filly that won the Texas Derby.

But by that time the Milky Way farm had done enough for one day, with next Saturday and the Kentucky Derby coming up and Reaping Reward and Military awaiting it.

51 CARS LISTED AS ENTRIES IN SPEEDWAY RACE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 1.—Entries for this year's 500-mile motor speedway race hit 51 tonight as the time for mailing entry blanks expired.

All blanks postmarked up to midnight tonight will be accepted, so a complete list will not be available until next week.

The number of entries indicated a bitter fight for places in the starting lineup on May 31 as only the 33 cars making the fastest time in qualifying trials, held the week before the race, will be allowed to start.

T. E. (Pop) Myers, general manager of the Speedway, said virtually every major racing car in the country has been accounted for in entries received thus far but that he expects a few more to arrive in the mail Monday.

One of the cars entered today was the one which Louis Meyer of Huntington Park, Cal., drove to victory last year. Meyer already has signed to drive another speedster, entered by Mike Boyle of Chicago, and the driver of his own car has not yet been named. He has been trying to find a buyer for it.

Another entry received today was that of an eight-cylinder Maserati to be driven by the veteran Babe Stapp. The car is owned by Henry Topping Jr., New York sportsman.

That car and an Alfa Romeo, to be driven by Rex Mays, are the first foreign built jobs to be entered in the Indianapolis race in several years.

Mauri Rose, last year's AAA driving champion, was nominated today to drive a car entered by Lou Moore another veteran of the roaring road.

pulled away, finishing out the distance in 1:42 4-5, four-fifths of a second slower than the stake record hung up by Pompoon's sire in winning the race in 1926.

Although giving way to Melodist, Sir Damion had no trouble beating Jewell Dorsett two lengths for runner-up honors. Clodion was another length back while finishing two lengths in front of Pompoon.

Then came Merry Maker, Gurkha, Chicolorado, Flying Scot and Rudie. All except Jewell Dorsett, Flying Scot and Rudie are eligible for the Derby.

Anglers Mark Time.

FISHING activities throughout Missouri are rather quiet at present due to the fact that catfish have not yet started biting in any great numbers and the bass season is closed. Some of the game fish are spawning although the majority will be late this season, due to the rather cool weather according to E. C. Lowell of Camdenton, who keeps a close eye on Lake of the Ozarks activities.

Lowell also adds that from the reservations that are being made at various lake resorts it will be necessary to make plans early if planning on a fishing trip over May 30, when the bass season opens. This warning might be heeded not only by the lake fishermen but by any anglers who are planning trips into the State Parks at that time.

The Fish, Netters Netted.

No question but what the law enforcers of the lake are on their toes. . . . Charles Fleetwood, State Warden at Bagnell Dam this week reports the arrest of two Iowans for trammel netting out of Saline Creek, a tributary to the Osage River below the big dam, near Tuscumbia. The Warden confiscated a 70-foot illegal net and fines of $25.45 were meted out to each defendant. . . . Last week three residents of Miller County who have cabins on the Upper Glaize arm of the lake were arrested for trapping and selling game fish. . . . one, who pleaded guilty, was given six months in jail by Justice Gail Kidwell, and the other two culprits, pleading "not guilty" were bound over to the Circuit Court for trial. . . the Boonville jail is now holding three men who were recently given sentences for illegal gigging on Indian Creek, also a Lake tributary.

Bell the Cat.

Missouri laws make it illegal to take or possess non-game wild birds, their nests or eggs. However, such laws are strictly man-made and do not apply to the birds' worst natural enemies namely, the cat and crow.

Song birds who build homes in the more populated districts have much to fear from tabby, who can find any and all nests within a long distance from home.

One protection is to bell the cat, this protects the older birds but is useless in case of the young. Another is to first locate the tree in which a nest is built and place a piece of tin entirely around this tree. The tin must be placed higher than the cat can jump and must be wider than the length of the cat's body.

The crow is the outstanding enemy of the game bird who nests on the ground in the open spaces. Spring is the worst time for such birds since the young crows are fed almost entirely on the eggs of other birds which the black parents will go to great measures to procure.

The Hawk Gets His Dues.

And now come protectors of the hawks and owls, two of the feathered family that have been greatly misjudged, but which have proved to be very beneficial to farmers and hunters. Dr. R. J. Terry and Luther Ely Smith (St. Louis) have prepared a bill for introduction to the present Missouri Legislature designed to place all hawks and owls on the protected list and repeal the bounty law now on the statutes.

Recent biological investigation has shown conclusively that hawks and owls, for the most part, are very beneficial to agriculture. The only ones in Missouri which kill any large number of birds of any kind are the great horned owl and the Cooper's, Sharpshinned and Goshawk. These three hawks are all called "Blue Hawks."

The Goshawk is so rare it is practically negligible. The investigation was made by way of stomach analyses, which proved the birds were each worth about $20 a year as destroyers of rodents and other pests. Tests were made and reported on by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Comeback of the Dove.

The recently published "A Survey of the Resident Game and Furbearers of Missouri," which was compiled by professors of the University of Missouri, states that while many game birds have steadily decreased, the mourning dove has increased in Missouri.

"The recent dry years have done little to reduce the dove crop in Missouri, for doves are admirably adapted to withstand drouth. They nest in a variety of places, from bare fields to heavy woods, and from the ground to a considerable height. Second, they have a high breeding potential, with several broods a year. Third, the method of regurgitation used by the parents in feeding the young brings water from a considerable distance and renders comparatively harmless a situation that would be fatal to the precocial young of quail or prairie chickens."

The annual kill amounts to approximately 100,000, most of which are shot within 50 miles of either Kansas City or St. Louis, with the next largest numbers in counties near Cape Girardeau, St. Joseph and Springfield.

Outdoor Notes.

Announcements were received during the past week of the birth of twins to Mr. and Mrs. Bruin of Meramec State Park, who have spent the winter in hibernation in one of the many caverns. For seven years the Bruins have made their residence inside the park and this is the second set of twins . . . the first pair failed to survive. . . .

Sportsmen in the United States and Alaska paid nearly $10,000,000 for hunting licenses and Federal migratory bird hunting stamps in 1935, the latest year for which such figures are available, says the U. S. Biological Survey. Pennsylvania led the states on hunting licenses . . . Minnesota headed the duck stamp parade . . . The "More Game Birds in America," a Foundation, announces a new member state—Missouri—which will actively participate in the restoration of wild ducks by subscribing to funds for the preservation and restoration of the most important breeding grounds in Canada . . . only the hunters and sportsmen are called upon to contribute and apparently are doing a great job of it . . . Missouri is one of the states which has greatly profited by Federal funds for co-operative research in wildlife management . . . studies of the wild turkey and the white-tailed deer were made in this state . . . It seems that to be an outstanding athlete in other fields you should take up trap-shooting . . . James Braddock has added it to his training diet as has Harry Gumbert of the New York Giants, Max Schmeling, pugilist, and Walter Peacock of the Illinois Racing Commission . . . For those of you who fear everything that crawls, "Wildlife Research and Management Leaflet BS-70" has been prepared and will be given you gratis by merely addressing the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. . . . after studying the contents picnics and high grass will not hold such terrors since less than 15 per cent of all snakes are considered dangerous. . . .

TROLLEY LEAGUE OPENS 35TH CAMPAIGN TODAY

The Missouri Illinois Trolley League will begin its thirty-fifth baseball campaign with three games, two in Missouri and one in Illinois, this afternoon.

Since the close of 1936 the league underwent several changes, having added two Missouri towns, St. Charles and Maryland Heights, to the roster, succeeding Belleville and Carlyle, Ill.

Edgemont, Vandalia, Hufschmidts of East St. Louis and Alpen Braus of Madison, members of the circuit last year, are the other members.

The Shaughnessy system will be used to determine the championship.

At St. Charles, the Browns, back after an elapse of 15 years to the Trolley organization, will be hosts to the Alpen Braus, while Maryland Heights, under the leadership of Walter Mueller, former Pirate outfielder, will play the Hufschmidts. Vandalia's squad, headed by Manager Guffey, will evade Edgemont Park to battle the Edgemont A. C.

Hill Climb Today.

Four main events are scheduled today for the Ozark Motorcycle Club's hill climb this afternoon at Hilgert's Hill, five miles south of Fenton. The first event will start at 2 o'clock.

YALE CREW WINS BLACKWELL CUP FOR FIRST TIME IN THREE YEARS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Yale ruled the murky, rubbish-littered waters of the Harlem River today, rowing to victory in three out of four races in the twelfth annual Blackwell Cup Regatta before a small crowd of 5000 spectators who lined the river's wall.

Trimmed by Columbia in an exciting finish in the lightweight event, the Little Boys Blue took to their shells and won the freshman, jayvee and varsity races in succession from their old Blackwell Cup rivals, Pennsylvania and Columbia.

The victory in the varsity was Yale's first in three years and also the first defeat for Pennsylvania in as many. Pennsylvania started off first in the varsity, faded before Yale's sweep and finished third behind Columbia.

Stroked by Louis Johnson, of Morristown, N. J., whose ineligibility blighted the Big Blue hopes last year, the Yales won almost as they pleased in the varsity test over a mile and three-quarters. Rating off Penn's dazzling pace, the Eli oarsmen increased their beat to pass Penn at the Washington Bridge, a mile out, and take a length lead. A quarter-mile farther out they led Penn by a length and a quarter and then gave it that "last 10" to win by two lengths in the time of 8:04 3-5. Columbia, finishing fast with a 40 beat to nip Penn near the finish, was timed in 8:11, with Penn five lengths back in the time of 8:12 1-5.

Harvard Gains a Leg on the Rowe Trophy.

By the Associated Press.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 1.—Harvard's powerful Varsity crew today captured the feature race of the Rowe Memorial Cup Regatta on the Charles River, sweeping across the finish line four and a half lengths ahead of the Rutgers oarsmen. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology crew trailed Rutgers by two lengths.

Harvard's time for the race-rowed over the Henley distance, one and 5-16 miles—was 7.20 3-5; Rutgers, 7.46, and M. I. T. 7.50.

The Varsity victory gave Harvard crews a clean sweep of the Regatta and the first leg on the Rowe Cup, named in honor of Dr. Allan Wintor Rowe, father of M. I. T. racing.

Navy Victor in Triangular Regatta.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, N. J., May 1. — Navy's powerful varsity crew won in a triangular regatta on Lake Carnegie today, defeating Princeton and Syracuse over the mile and three-quarters course. The Varsity triumph gave the Midshipmen a clean sweep for the two main events as the Jayvee eights had finished in the same order.

The Midshipmen, closing fast in the last 300 yards to beat off a Princeton challenge, were timed in 9:24 3-5. Princeton finished a length behind the undefeated Navy varsity while Syracuse, making its first start of the year, was two lengths behind the Tigers.

TIGERS, IN NEAR RIOT, DEFEAT IOWA STATE, 11-2

By the Associated Press.

AMES, Ia., May 1.—The Missouri Tigers overwhelmed the Iowa State baseball team 11 to 2 here today in the second game of a two-day series.

An altercation over an allegedly dropped fly in the fifth inning precipitated a near riot from the Missouri team, culminating in Coach Joe Truskowski's granting the disputed decision to the Tigers so they would come back on the field and play ball.

OLIN TO TAKE FIRST WORKOUT HERE TODAY

The entire cast for Tuesday night's 40-round boxing card at the Auditorium will be in town and probably in training late today, Matchmaker Larry Atkins of the Fred W. Stockham American Legion Post announced last night.

The arrival last night of Bob Olin, former world's champion, left only three of the eight fighters still missing. They were scheduled to appear today. Olin will go through his first workout this afternoon at the Business Men's Gym and may be joined there by Emilio Martinez, the Mexican light-heavyweight; Jack Robinson, Chicago heavyweight, and Kid Irish, Alton featherweight, if they arrive in time.

Martinez comes here bearing the only defeat plastered on the record of World Champion John Henry Lewis since the Phoenix Negro won his title from Olin here 18 months ago.

Martinez will fight the champion in a 10-round non-title bout that headlines the Legion Post card Tuesday night.

Lewis rounded out a rigorous training session at the Pine Street Y. M. C. A. yesterday with a tough assignment against Junior Munsell, Pepper Martin's Indian heavyweight. Munsell, a southpaw, will take on Robinson in the third 10-rounder on the card.

Olin will take on Leonard Bostick, St. Louis Negro slugger, in the semiwindup. This will be Olin's first appearance here since his dramatic battle with Lewis in November, 1935, when he lost the title in a sensational 15-round struggle.

The curtain-raiser will be between Irish and Merle Thompson.

Another Park Opens.

The St. Louis Softball Association announces the opening of the park at Ohio and Shenandoah avenues, tomorrow. In the opening girls' game the Judge Sestric team, 1936 park champions, will meet the C. B. C. team at 7:30 p. m. In the men's game Freddie Geldmacher, who pitched the Slacks to the 1936 national championship, will pitch for the Kutis team against the Reiters.

Outstanding, you'll agree!
Just as a certain perfection of face and figure makes one girl outstanding, so does a certain perfection of selection and manufacture make one cigar outstanding.
Van Dyck 32's, because of their fine selected tobaccos—their fragrant, cool-smoking qualities—are unusual cigars; are in such high favor that men bought over 140 million of them last year.
You'll take to Van Dyck 32's from your very first puff. They've a way with them. They make friends easily and they keep their friends long! Nothing could be easier than to know Van Dyck. A nickel makes the happy introduction.

Pontiac Executives Here for Session With Dealers, Salesmen

More than 100 Pontiac dealers, sales managers and new and used car salesmen from St. Louis and neighboring cities attended an all-day business conference Friday at the Coronado Hotel.

The meeting was one of a series of 103 similar gatherings being held throughout the country in a 60-day interval to acquaint the retail organization with the latest developments in merchandising procedure.

Speakers at the sessions included Allon Wright, regional manager, Chicago; W. P. Winslow, St. Louis zone manager; B. A. Lyman, district manager, St. Louis; C. W. Richards, branch manager for General Motors Acceptance Corporation, and W. R. Donaldson, representative of the factory's sales promotion department at Pontiac, Mich.

New motion pictures, one featuring a coast-to-coast economy run in new 1937 Pontiac cars, new slide films with and without sound equipment, charts and oral instruction were used to give the field organization up-to-the-minute information on the car and on factory policy, as well as in sales instruction.

This series of meetings, largest ever held by Pontiac, is designed to bring the science of sales to the same high level as the engineering and style advances of the 1937 car.

Hudson, Terraplane Convertible Models For 1937 Announced

Hudson and Terraplane convertible models for 1937, cloth topped automobiles which can be used as open cars with the tops folded back and the sky as the roof, or as closed models with the convertible top in place, are being announced.

They include six convertible car models, two Hudson eights, two six-cylinder Hudsons and two in the Terraplane line.

One type is the convertible coupe, a three-passenger, one-seater, and the other is a convertible brougham, a new comer in the Hudson-built lines of cars. This is a six-passenger, two-door model.

The folding top, when down, fits into a concealed compartment in the rear of the seats to prevent interruption of the flowing air stream lines of the new Hudson and Terraplane open air cars. Upholstery in all models is hand-buffed leather and it is available in several different colors.

A new type of front seat, pivoted at the left end and swinging forward in an arc to provide plenty of entrance and exit room for rear passengers, is used in the brougham models.

All of the open models have Hudson's new selective automatic shift.

Afternoon Airplane Schedule to New York Inaugurated by TWA

Effective yesterday, T W A is augmenting its service from St. Louis with an afternoon departure for New York, leaving St. Louis-Lambert airport at 3:25 p. m. and arriving New York at 10:47 p. m., Eastern standard time. New DC-2 Douglas luxury skyliners are standard for this flight. With the inauguration of this schedule, T W A has six de luxe schedules through St. Louis daily. Inauguration of the summer Sky Chief schedules will give an additional flight within the next few weeks.

T W A has speeded up all schedules in both directions, making them faster than ever before and giving earlier arrival, both east and westbound, in New York and California.

The new flight, which will be known as schedule No. 14, will serve Indianapolis, Dayton, Columbus, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Washington on its eastbound itinerary.

T W A also has inaugurated an additional return schedule from New York, departing at 4 p. m. and arriving in St. Louis at 9:43 p. m.

Rhoads Brothers Lease Shell Station On Lindell Boulevard

A firm just formed by O. L. Rhoads and M. B. Rhoads, will be known as Rhoads Brothers. O. L. Rhoads is president and M. B. Rhoads, vice-president and secretary-treasurer.

O. L. RHOADS.

The firm has leased the Shell station at Vandeventer and Lindell boulevard, which covers more than 15,000 square feet.

It will handle Shell gasoline, Goodyear tires and Prestolite batteries. A new, improved wash rack will be installed and the station will be open for 24-hour service.

O. L. Rhoads has been selling tires for the past 22 years and is well known in St. Louis. He started in business in 1917 under the name of Leader Tire Co. In 1920, he operated the Standard Tire Co. From 1930 on, he was associated with a large tire company in St. Louis.

M. B. RHOADS.

M. B. Rhoads, who has been in the electrical business for the past 25 years, is president of the Standard Electric Co., 3874 Washington boulevard. He will continue in the business.

New Convertible Model

For U. S. Forestry Work

Six Reo trucks of 2-3-ton capacity, just delivered to the U. S. Forest Service at Willow Springs, Mo., by the Steiner Automobile Co., the St. Louis Reo distributor. The trucks will be used on work in the National Forest Reserve in Missouri and Arkansas.

New Coupe in Nash Lines of All-Purpose Type Introduced Here

A new Nash model, the all-purpose coupe, is being shown in St. Louis. The new body style is available in all three Nash series, the Nash Ambassador Eight, the Nash Ambassador Six and the Nash LaFayette—"400."

It has two auxiliary seats directly behind the regular coupe seat, giving seating room for five persons. The spare tire is carried in the rear deck.

When not in use, the extra seats fold up flush against the back of the coupe body, providing a large luggage space within the body, in addition to the compartment in the rear deck.

The car gives five-passenger capacity with the advantage of having the emergency seating space inside the body to protect passengers from the weather.

Oldsmobile Worker Oldest in Industry At Age of 90 Years

The oldest employe in the oldest unit of the automobile industry is celebrating his 90th birthday. He is Michael James Murray, whose last 19 years have been spent in the service of Oldsmobile, in the second of the only two jobs he has ever held. The first job involved what would represent a complete career for the ordinary man—45 years in the employ of the Michigan Central Railroad.

Plane Fares Reduced By American Airlines

Fare reductions ranging upward from $3.45 between St. Louis and New York, and $10 between St. Louis and California, and affecting directly or indirectly every route of American Airlines, Inc., became effective yesterday, according to W. R. Stevens, district sales manager for the St. Louis area.

Stevens said a scale of charges for sleeper plane accommodations on Flagship Skysleepers now operating on the Southern Transcontinental route, also would take effect on that date. This will be $4 for the eight-hour sleeper run between Dallas and Los Angeles as used by St. Louisans on American's overnight schedule to the West Coast.

American Airlines, Inc., will continue its uninterrupted policy of serving meals, without charge, to all passengers aloft during meal hours on all routes.

"During the past year," Stevens said, "American Airlines has introduced into service on major routes a fleet of 25 giant Douglas Flagships, eight Skysleepers and 17 Club planes, supplementing its fleet of 15 14-passenger Douglasses and 14 Stinson tri-motored transports."

United Air Lines To Speed Up Flights From Coast-to-Coast

United Air Lines will put into effect May 10 a tenth anniversary coast-to-coast schedule of 15 hours and 23 minutes, twice as fast as the service of 32 hours which it inaugurated over the same route in 1927, and an hour and a half faster than the present schedule.

The schedule to go into effect May 10 will be started with new super de luxe "Mainliners" from Los Angeles and San Francisco to New York, with stops at Salt Lake City, Cheyenne and Chicago. Time from New York to California will become 17 hours and 39 minutes. The difference in time of the east and westbound flights is due to prevailing winds.

Planes flying the record schedule will be fueled in the Middle West by Standard Oil of Indiana, which has a contract to deliver 13,000,000 gallons of highest quality aviation gasoline to United Air Lines.

Faster airplane service also will be offered from Seattle, Tacoma, Portland and Spokane to Eastern cities, from Los Angeles and San Francisco to Chicago and from Chicago to New York.

At the same time service is speeded up, United Air Lines will reduce basic fares for coast-to-coast trips in certain large planes.

Meeting for Dealers Set for Friday Night By Tidewater Oil Co.

A meeting for dealers of the St. Louis metropolitan area will be held by the Tidewater Associated Oil Co., refiner and manufacturer of Tydol gasoline and Veedol motor oil, Friday night in Italian Fraternal Hall, Delmar boulevard at Vandeventer. Several hundred dealers are expected to attend from this city, towns as far south as Flat River and Cape Girardeau and the entire East Side, including Alton, Edwardsville and Belleville.

R. V. May, Chicago department manager, will be the principal speaker. The program will cover the company's new plans for spring and summer advertising and merchandising.

The meeting will be in charge of L. R. Wilkinson, district representative for the territory west of the Mississippi River, and C. G. Atkins, district representative east of the river. Wholesalers for the company in this territory are the Piaza Motor Fuel Co., Alton; the Federal Oil Co., Granite City; the Nuzol Gasoline Co., University City, and the Industrial Oil Corporation, St. Louis.

Standard Oil Dealers' Meeting on Tuesday

The Standard Oil Co. of Indiana will hold a conference for its dealers from St. Louis and vicinity at the Elks Club Tuesday. The spring and summer merchandising campaign will be explained and the local consumer advertising campaign which will support it will be announced. There will also be a preview of a Hollywood sound picture, "Stan," which company representatives and dealers will show to the public later.

St. Louis division officials, salesmen and advertising representatives of Standard Oil Co. of Indiana who will attend, include: C. C. Smith, assistant manager; C. S. Reiber, dealer promotion; E. E. Wood, consumer promotion; F. C. Dickerson, special salesman, and F. B. Kramer, advertising representative.

O'Connell Motor Sales Appointed Terraplane And Hudson Dealer

O'Connell Motor Sales, Inc., 3340 South Jefferson avenue, has been appointed a Hudson - Terraplane dealer by W. S. Milton, zone manager.

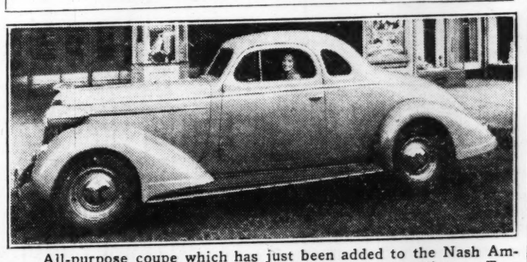
W. F. O'Connell, the owner of this business, has had a number of years' experience in selling automobiles in St. Louis.

The firm's building, which has been redecorated and remodeled, measures 75 by 125 feet.

All new equipment has been installed for servicing Hudson and Terraplane cars and carry a complete line of parts.

A new type of experimental pavement composed of a mixture of cotton and asphalt is being built at Reilly Field, Anniston, Ala.

New All-Purpose Coupe



All-purpose coupe which has just been added to the Nash Ambassador Eight, Ambassador Six and Nash Lafayette lines. Two comfortable seats swing out from the rear of the body to accommodate two extra passengers, making the coupe a five-passenger model.

Studebaker Reports First Quarter Earnings

The Studebaker Corporation in the first quarter of 1937 earned $699,459 after providing for Federal income taxes, except surtax on undistributed profits, according to the profit and loss statement and balance sheet made public by Paul G. Hoffman, its president. This amounts to 32 cents per share on the 2,183,243 shares of stock outstanding.

Before provision for Federal taxes, earnings for the current quarter were $822,459 compared with $104,655 in the first quarter of 1936, for which period no income tax provision was made. Sales were $19,308,220 compared with $15,738,737 in the corresponding period last year.

Total current assets were reported as $19,878,662 compared with $16,392,829 on Dec. 31, 1936, and $14,047,179 on March 31, 1936. Total current liabilities on these three dates were $7,644,423, $5,271,170 and $6,309,246, resulting in net working capital of $12,234,239 March 31, 1937; $11,121,659 Dec. 31, 1936, and $7,737,933 March 31, 1937.

Willys Owner Makes Fast 6182-Mile Trip

Driving a new Willys sedan, David G. Konvisser of Cleveland, O., on a round-trip from Cleveland to Los Angeles in nine days, reports that actual driving time was 117 hours and 18 minutes for the 6182 miles which gave him an average speed of 52.7 miles an hour.

Total gasoline consumption, he reported, was slightly in excess of 233 gallons or an average of 26½ miles to the gallon for a drive made at high speed.

Chevrolet Dealers Support Air Races

Members of the Chevrolet Dealers' Association of Greater St. Louis are to furnish 20 Chevrolets to be used as service cars by the St. Louis Air Race Association, Inc., during the International Aerobatic Competition and St. Louis Air Races to be held at Lambert Field May 29, 30 and 31.

The cars will be used to convey pilots to and from the field and for general staff work. The dealers' association also turned over to the air race headquarters a Chevrolet car painted white and carrying the aerobatic competition insignia.

R. T. Wengler, secretary of the Chevrolet Dealers' Association, said that members already had ordered 20 season boxes for the races.

Truck Equipped for Lighting Building at Night for Fighting Fires

Use of a new lighting truck, fitted with electric generators and flood lights for completely illuminating buildings, has made fighting fires at night much more efficient in Brookline, Mass., according to R. Allen, the fire chief.

"Introduction of lighting constitutes one of the greatest advances in fire fighting ever made. It has cut down accidents for us and improved the efficiency of our men. They work faster and better and greater safety for they can see what they are doing," he says.

"The unit has proved its worth not only in fire fighting, but in other emergencies. Recently, the lights in a local hospital went out while an operation was in progress. We rushed the lighting unit to the hospital, ran a cable into the operating room, connected a flood light and the operation was completed."

The lighting unit, a standard Ford V-8 panel truck, carries two 2000-watt generators similar in design to those used for lighting farm homes, a 1000-watt flood light, two 500-watt, three 250-watt flood lights and a 500-watt search light.

The large lamp alone brilliantly lights the side of an eight-story building. The three 250-watt lamps are for inside fire fighting. The two generators work automatically. When the capacity of one is reached, the other cuts in.

In addition, the truck has a submarine light for underwater use and a vapor-proof light for use in vats and tanks.

MOTOR TRANSFER TERMINAL FOR 6TH AND POPLAR

Yellow Transit Co. Acquires Quarter Block at Northwest Corner — Plans Drawn.

TRACT IS BOUGHT FOR FACTORY SITE

Owens Illinois Can Co. Buys Seven Acres on West Florrisant for $500,000 Plant.

By Berry Moore

The Yellow Transit Co. has acquired approximately a quarter block at the northeast corner of Sixth and Poplar streets as a site for a motor terminal warehouse and loading dock.

Negotiations in this connection were concluded several weeks ago. The price paid was not disclosed. The value of the site is enhanced by the Missouri Pacific Railway, which traverses Poplar street.

The parcel has a frontage on Sixth of 200 feet, and on Poplar street of 127 feet. It was formerly occupied by a filling station and old two-story buildings, which were dismantled.

Plans for the building project have been drawn by Preston J. Bradshaw, architect, who will supervise construction. It will consist of a one-story brick and concrete structure, 97x127 feet. A spur track will connect the premises with the Missouri Pacific Railway. The ground not occupied by the building will be available for parking space. Construction will be by H. B. Deal & Co.

Transports Merchandise.

The company operates an interstate freight system, with a fleet of trucks for transporting merchandise.

The Mesker Bros. Iron Works occupies the northwest corner of Poplar and Sixth streets, with an extensive two-story structure. The building of the John E. Mitchell Co. stands at the southeast corner of Sixth and Poplar streets. Cupples Station is one block west, at Seventh and Poplar streets.

Noteworthy as the second major concern in its line to stake a claim in St. Louis, the Owens-Illinois Can Co. has purchased a seven and one-half-acre tract at Goodfellow and West Florissant avenues, as the site for a can factory to cost $500,000. The new plant will replace the company's present building at 904 South Fourteenth street, occupied under a lease. It will have approximately 142,000 square feet of floor space, and will give employment to 400 persons, as compared with 250, now employed at the Fourteenth street plant.

Outside City Limits.

The site, just outside the city limits, is bounded on the north by the Wabash Railroad tracks and on the west by Lee avenue. It was owned by the Bay Brothers' Lumber Co. An option taken by the can company last month on a four-acre track in Southwest St. Louis, owned by the Julius Seidel Lumber Co., will not be exercised. The purchase price of the West Florissant tract was not disclosed. Vernon Clark handled the transaction.

The Crown Can Co., a subsidiary of the Crown Cork & Seal Co. of New York, last March purchased an eight-acre tract on Natural Bridge avenue, west of Clara, as a site for a plant ultimately to cost $3,000,000. The Carl G. Stifel Real Estate Co. handled the negotiations for this tract, owned by the Missouri Portland Cement Co.

The Crown Can Co. will manufacture cans of all varieties for packers of food, drugs, motor oils, paint and other commodities. The factory will have its own research department, and a staff of artists and designers. Within the building, there will be a railroad siding with space for 140 cars.

The Crown Co. has factories in Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Houston. The Industrial Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce co-operated in plans for the new factory, which is intended to supply cans for manufacturers in eight states in this territory.

Interests represented by the Henry R. Weisels Co. have closed contracts for the purchase of the wedge-shaped block at the northeast corner of Clayton road and Cromwell drive, in Blue Ridge Terrace, Moorlands Addition, Clayton. Saum, Architects, Inc., are drawing plans for its improvement with modern business structures.

Rubin Not Interested.

The site has a frontage on the north side of Clayton road of 278 feet, and on the south side of Cromwell drive, of 127 feet. It is the only lot in the Moorlands not restricted against business.

Jacob Rubin & Sons deny that they were prospective purchasers of the wedge, as was stated in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch. An apartment building recently completed by Rubin & Sons, stands on adjoining ground on Cromwell drive. The location is about a block and a quarter east of Hanley road.

KANSAS CITY LIFE SELLS REALTY HERE

Jack Dubinsky & Sons Acquire 15 Parcels From Insurance Co.

Approximately 15 parcels of St. Louis realty, consisting principally of apartments, flats and business buildings, owned by the Kansas City Life Insurance Co., have been purchased by Jack Dubinsky & Sons, real estate operators. The purchase also includes an 18-unit apartment building in University City. While not disclosed, the purchase prices wa in excess of $100,000, it was stated.

The list includes a building comprising two stores and two apartments at the southwest corner of Cates and Clara avenues; a four-family flat at 4158-60 Labadie avenue; a four-family flat at 2326-32 O'Fallon street; a two-family flat at 4167 Westminster place; a single flat of seven and eight rooms at 4751 Washington avenue; a building comprising four stores and four flats at the southeast corner of Easton and Marcus avenues; a building comprising two stores and four apartments at 2024-26 Franklin avenue; a four-family flat at 2700-02 Stoddard street; a four-family apartment at 14-15-17 Hills Terrace; an 18-family apartment building of four and five rooms at 727-29-31 Limit avenue, University City; 14 flats of three rooms each at 1700-10 North Spring avenue; five 10-room houses and three 8-room at 3930-38 Page boulevard; four-family apartment of five-room suites at 4186 Delmar boulevard; a business building at 3901 Twenty-fifth street. The purchase was made as a speculative investment.

This is one of a number of large purchases made by the Dubinsky Realty Co. during the last two years, including among others the Leonardo apartments at 4166 Lindell boulevard, and the Carleton apartments at 4616 Lindell.

DEVELOPER MOVES OFFICE FROM CITY TO CLAYTON

Arnold H. Maremont, developer, has moved his office and, that of the Fairfax Construction Co. from Seventh and Chestnut streets, to 24 North Meramec street, Clayton, in order to be in closer touch with his extensive building operations in St. Louis County.

The Fairfax Company, of which Maremont is president, has 42 houses under construction, notably in Litzinger Lan e, Ladue, in Summit Park, Brentwood, and in Geyer Terrace, Kirkwood, involving a total estimated cost of $700,000. It has disposed of five houses within the last two weeks.

Plans are going forward for the opening of a 68-acre tract on the west side of Geyer road, approximately a mile south of the Clayton road, recently acquired by the Fairfax Company. The Geyer road tract, to be known as Upper Huntleigh, will be a restricted development for smaller country homes.

Other members of the Fairfax organization include H. D. Calkins, Mrs. Thomas B. Sherman, Robert J. Readey and Roy McCrady.

HOUSE AT 6340 WYDOWN ACQUIRED BY K. L. VOLLMER

A residence at 6340 Wydown boulevard, owned by Charles Bennett, has been acquired by Karl K. Vollmer, secretary of the Columbia Brewing Co. The house has five rooms and three baths on the second floor, with living room, dining room, kitchen, pantry, lavatory on the first floor. There is a connected garage. Bennett acquired the house from the Gerhart estate.

A. T. & Whitelaw Terry handled the transaction.

METROPOLITAN AREA BUILDING ACTIVITY SEEN

Promising Season of Residential Construction Indicated From Contracts Awarded.

An active season in residential construction is indicated in St. Louis from the increased number of contracts awarded here during the first quarter of the year. Construction of this type gained 45 per cent in the metropolitan area in this period, with a total of $6,124,600, according to figures released by C. S. Bennett, local manager of the F. W. Dodge Corporation. This compares with $4,219,900 for the first three months of 1936.

As a whole private construction gained 81 per cent during the first quarter of the year, with a total of $9,851,600. This compares with $5,438,100 for the corresponding period of last year.

Maintaining the volume, contracts for private construction in the St. Louis area in March amounted to $3,586,000, compared with the nearly equal sum for March of last year.

The St. Louis area is given by the Dodge Corporation as comprising St. Louis, East St. Louis, St. Louis County and St. Clair and Madison counties in Illinois. This a total population of 1,335,158 persons in 1930, according to Dodge.

Total construction contracts awarded in the St. Louis area during the first quarter of the year aggregated in cost $16,366,100, as compared with $7,421,200 in the corresponding period of 1936.

The percentage of "go-ahead" in total construction in the St. Louis area is much greater than the percentage of advance in the entire 37 states east of the Rockies where total building was only about 15 per cent larger in the present 1937 quarter than in the same period of 1936.

According to the home owners' catalog division of F. W. Dodge Corporation, March residential contracts awarded amounted to $2,639,700 in this area.

Non-residential building jumped 88 per cent during the first quarter of the year with a total of $2,596,800 which compares favorably with $1,371,300 for the opening quarter of last year.

Buys Building on North Taylor.

Edward L. Bakewell announces the sale of residence and store property at 1512-14 North Taylor avenue to A. Abramowitz for the account of Henry T. Brinckwirth and Mrs. Josephine Brinckwirth Medart.

REVENUE ACT CALLED BUILDING OBSTACLE

Association Director Says Industrial Construction Has Been Held Back by Profits Tax.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—Stimulation of construction, both public and private, through release of funds which would in normal times be devoted to construction, constituted one of the main subjects discussed at the spring meeting of the governing boards of the Associated General Contractors of America here Friday and Saturday. Pointing out that construction, while it had made great strides toward recovery during the past year and a half, had not nearly approximated its normal volume of the pre-depression era, the association during the past year had been advocating certain legislative reforms which it believed would bring about further increases.

Revenue Act, Obstacle.

In the field of private construction, industrial building has been held back by the undistributed-profits provisions of the 1936 Revenue Act, E. J. Harding, managing director of the association, pointed out. Commercial building has not made a satisfactory recovery because of lack of confidence on the part of banks and lending institutions. "Both these types of building form important markets in the private construction field," Harding declared, "and all statistics show that they have lagged far behind residential construction in the resumption of activity. In order to determine the reason for this lag, we made many contacts with bankers and industrialists. We found that the demand was present but that there still remained a lack of confidence where there existed any degree of speculation. This, coupled with the provisions of the 1936 Revenue Act, which levies heavy taxes on undistributed earnings, which include expenditures made for improvements to industrial plants when made from earnings, appeared to be holding back the advance. It is the belief of the Associated General Contractors that proposed remedial legislation which it is sponsoring will to a great extent remove these obstructions to the upward climb of construction."

Want Act Amended.

The proposed legislation advocated by the association calls for an amendment to the Revenue Act, to permit industrial concerns to deduct from their tax returns expenditures made for plant extensions and improvements. To overcome the reluctance of lending institutions to make loans for commercial building, the association has proposed an extension of the authority of the Federal Housing Administration so that it may insure loans for this type of construction as it now insures loans for residential construction.

With respect to public construction, Harding pointed out that resumption of construction programs by the states and political subdivisions is highly necessary to bring back the public works construction market to its normal volume. "While the Federal government financed a vast program of public works construction during the depression era, the states failed almost entirely to appropriate funds for such work, with the result that the volume of public works during that period amounted to only 50 per cent of the volume in normal times," Harding stated. "If public works construction is to resume its normal volume the states must resume their construction programs, and Federal aid should be devoted to supplementing the states' expenditures instead of being used in substitution for them.

FURNITURE CO. ACQUIRES QUARTERS ON FRANKLIN

The first floor and basement of the three-story building at the northwest corner of Tenth street and Franklin avenue has been leased by the Erwin Furniture Co., headed by Erwin Dubinsky. The concern was recently formed to conduct a general retail furniture store.

The quarters leased have a floor area of 90x140 feet. Extensive alterations and improvements have been made to the premises.

The building is owned by the Amfesco Investment Co. Arthur C. Hoehn, vice-president of the Weisels Co., negotiated the lease, which is for a long term.

NORTH EUCLID APARTMENT SOLD TO WOMAN FOR $25,000

The eight-family apartment building at 325-39 North Euclid avenue has been purchased by Mrs. Ada Miller through the Wolf-Pollack Real Estate Co. for a reported price of $25,000. The apartments, consisting of seven-room suites, are occupied principally by specialty shops. The site has a frontage of 90 feet on Euclid. It is just north of the Fairmont hotel at the northwest corner of Maryland and Euclid avenues.

The building is to be remodeled at a large outlay.

C. D. Davis was the grantor to the title in the present transaction.

MONSANTO CHEMICAL LEASES WAREHOUSE

Manufacturing Co. Rents Three Story Structure at 1607 South Third.

The Monsanto Chemical Co. has taken a long-term lease on the three-story building at 1607 South Third street and at 310 Carroll street. The building, comprising 30,000 square feet of available floor space will supplement the company's present warehouse facilities.

The lease was negotiated by the Mullin-Walters Real Estate Co. The property is owned by an estate.

The Alton Manufacturing Co. has leased the entire seventh floor of the building at 1324 Washington avenue for factory, office and salesroom purposes. The Buck-Lee Tire Co. has leased two stores at 3323-27 Washington avenue for a store and salesroom. Velvet Freeze, Inc., has leased a storeroom at 2315 South Kingshighway.

Vernon Avenue Sale.

MORE FARMS BOUGHT LAST THREE MONTHS

Federal Land Bank Reports 1000 More Taken Than Year Ago.

The Federal Land Banks sold 1000 more farms in the first quarter of 1937 than in the corresponding period of last year, stated W. I. Myers, Farm Credit Administration Governor.

Farm owners and previous tenants bought 3625 farms and 637 parcels of land from the land banks in the first three months of the year compared to 2632 and 402, respectively, in the like period of 1936. The total number of sales for the 12 months ending March 31 this year was 16,241—also an increase as compared with the preceding 12 months.

Continued excess of sales over acquisitions reduced the inventory of farms and sheriffs' certificates on hand at March 31 to 28,411. The figure was down on a seven-months' trend from the high point of 30,636 at Aug. 31, 1936.

Figures at the end of the quarter also showed that the Federal Land Bank and Land Bank Commissioner had over 1,090,000 loans outstanding in the amount of $2,880,000,000. This represents long-term mortgage loans to owners of approximately 36 per cent of all the mortgaged farms in the United States.

CITY AND SUBURBAN HOMES IN RECENT TRANSACTIONS

No. 1104 Edwards Terrace (Richmond Heights) a new bungalow, with lot 40 by 120 feet, to Cecil Ray Yarger; a seven-room country home with one acre all in fruit, on the old Ballas road near Olive Street road, to F. Jolly Real Estate Co. Moves.

The Jolly Real Estate Co. has moved to new and larger quarters at 5629 Gravois avenue, one block east of its former location.

REALTY LICENSE ACTS ENACTED IN 2 STATES

West Virginia and Maine Adopt Protective Measures Urged by Association.

Action of state legislatures this year has already added two states to the list of commonwealths in which the public is protected against real estate frauds—West Virginia and Maine. Their newly enacted license laws follow lines advocated by the West Virginia Real Estate Association and the Maine Real Estate Association, respectively, and urged by the National Association of Real Estate Boards for all states.

A total of 29 states and in addition the territory of Hawaii now have such protective laws. States which have similar measures now before their legislatures include Texas, where the Texas Association of Real Estate Boards warmly advocates the proposed law; Connecticut, where the Connecticut Association of Real Estate Boards has made license legislation a principal objective; Minnesota, where real estate boards of the state are studying the measure now on the House calendar; Missouri, where the bill as introduced incorporated a paragraph that would specifically cover the right of licensed real estate brokers to draw up the ordinary documents involved in a real estate transaction.

A real estate license law for the District of Columbia is before the present Congress. The bill, supported by the Washington Real Estate Board, would list as unethical trade practices for which license might be revoked. Many of the items so included in the code for the real estate brokerage industry were negotiated under N.R.A. The real estate license laws of Nebraska and of Ohio already include in this way a list of unethical practices for which license may be revoked.

Subdivision Control Provided.

The new West Virginia act is already in effect. The new Maine Act goes into effect 90 days after the close of the legislative session. Both these acts as well as proposed laws in many other states enumerate both specific and general causes for which license may be revoked.

A recent statement by the Real Estate Commissioner of California illustrates the degree to which number of licenses is rising. In that State, in which higher qualification tests have recently been adopted, the number of licenses issued during the first two months of 1937 nevertheless shows a 15 per cent gain over the total number a year ago; 50 per cent more than 1933; and the highest total of the past seven years. At the present rate of increase the number of licenses issued during the present calendar year will show an approximate gain of 25 per cent over the total for the preceding year.

SHELL CORPORATION LEASES IN MONOGRAM BUILDING

The Shell Petroleum Corporation have taken a long-term lease on the entire sixth floor of the Monogram Building at 1700-18 Washington avenue, owned by the Central States Life Insurance Co.

The space comprising 15,000 square feet in the building situated on the northeast corner of Twenty-third and Locust streets, is inadequate.

The lease was effected by Arthur H. Fuldner, manager of the Commercial Leasing Department of Oreon E. & R. G. Scott.

The Scott concern also has leased office space on the third floor of the Daily Record Building, 100 Market street, to the Seagram-Distillers Corporation of New York, for an office to be maintained here under the management of Geo. A. Amos.

INGERSOLL RAND LEASES SPACE IN LOCUST STREET QUARTERS

The Ingersoll-Rand Co., of which J. Crocker is St. Louis district manager, has leased 8500 square feet of space on the first floor of the five-story building at the northeast corner of Jefferson avenue and Locust street, owned by the Elias Haas Realty Co. The concern now has quarters at 2701 Olive street.

The newly leased quarters will be used for offices, salesrooms, display rooms and warehouse purposes. The lease which is for a long term was arranged by the Griffith-Groves Real Estate Co.

26 HOUSES BEING BUILT IN PASADENA HILLS

Clients of the Carl G. Stifel Realty Co. have 26 houses under construction in Pasadena Hills, involving a cost of more than $375,000. These include residences being built for H. Ernst, Ruth Construction Co., contractor; Dr. C. A. Spoenneman, Edw. F. Stoeckel, builder; Misses Olivia Fritz and Matesson, J. V. Gastaldi, builder; A. H. Borbein, Harold C. Simon & Co., contractors; Hans J. Saemann, Chris Spoenemann, builder; Dr. Joseph H. Sewing and Elroy W. Bromwich, Edward C. L. Hall, builder.

Growth of Seeds Depends Upon Good Planti

Soil Requires Warmth, M ture and Air if Germi tion Is to Take Place.

Is it possible for amateurs grow in outdoor gardens ann flowers as large as those wh have become a common sight florists' windows?

This question cannot be answe for all amateurs, because so m depends upon skill, the weather, conditions and other factors, wh vary greatly. But it can be sta without reservation, that every a teur flower grower can grea improve the quality of his ann flowers by proper care and feedi especially by supplying ample pla food.

Fast growth is more important annuals than to other flowers, cause they have so little time reach maturity. They must atta the greatest possible size and vig between the time seed are so and the date when nature decre flowering shall begin.

To obtain the maximum growt the soil in which they grow shou be well prepared. Plow or spa to a depth of at least six inch as early in the spring as possib The soil should be friable, crumbly. Loosen heavy clay wi sand, coal ashes or peat moss.

After the soil is prepared an smoothed a complete modern pla food should be spread over the ar at the rate of four pounds per 1 square feet and raked into the to soil. This initial feeding should b supplemented by an application plant food at the rate of two pound per 100 square feet eight week after seeding.

With careful watering and cult vation you will be surprised at th manner in which annual flower respond to this treatment. Do no crowd the plants. See that each ha room to develop its full beauty.

All seeds purchased from reliabl sources have high germination While the seedsman is usually blamed for failures the fault may often lie with the planter. In order to germinate properly the soil re quires warmth, moisture and air It is reasonable to suppose that cold soil which is oversaturated with moisture will make germination slow if it takes place at all.

The soil should be prepared before sowing. Mellow soil which pulverizes sufficiently gives the best results. Depth of covering depends on the size of the seeds. Very fine seed should have sand or soil sifted over it and the surface should be firmed. The finer the seed the lighter the covering should be. While it is advised to firm the soil over the seed, a heavy soil may form a crust if pushed down too firmly.

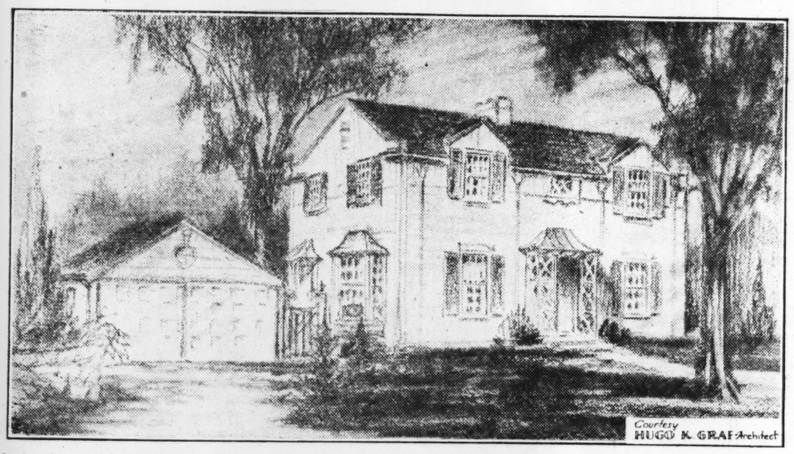
Regency Type House Planned for Sloping Lot

This House of Redwood Siding Painted White Was Planned to Preserve Two Old Elms Which Provide Shade.



WHEN Mr. and Mrs. John Barry selected a wooded lot in Webster Groves and planned to build a house there they did not realize they were handing the architect a problem which would require a very neat solution. In addition to two large old elm trees which were to be preserved at all costs, the plot of ground sloped upward from the street and dropped away at one side.

The architect's problem was to design a house which would fit between the two trees and which would tie in well with the slope without losing dignity. Since a garage at the back would necessitate an uphill climb, this adjunct to modern living was placed at the side and linked to the house by an ornamental gate. This leaves the entire rear free for garden developments.

The house itself is a dignified dwelling of the regency type of architecture with a latticed entrance in the Queen Anne manner. It is constructed of redwood siding painted white. The roof is of dark slate and shutters are also painted dark to harmonize with the roof. Vertical siding and gabled windows that break the cornice line have been used to keep the house from looking too "tall." Ornamental lintels over the windows at the first floor also give a certain amount of weight to the house. The entrance terrace is flagged.

THE living room was planned to take advantage of the southern exposure and likewise of the shade afforded by an old elm. It is a large, well-proportioned room with windows on three sides and flanked by a fireplace. A large porch opens off the living room and this end of the room with its built-in bookshelves is of pine paneling painted off-white as is the wood trim throughout the house.

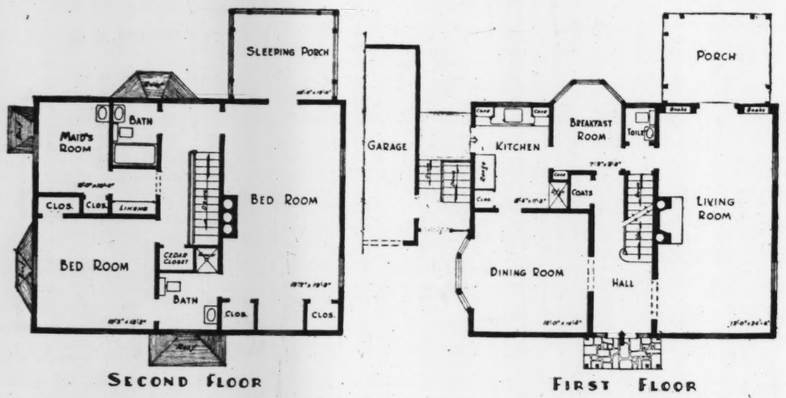
A large breakfast room also takes advantage of the shade and the privacy of the back of the house. The large bay window makes it a very pleasant room that can be used as a second sitting room or card room, whenever the occasion demands. The kitchen is placed to serve both the breakfast room and dining room, which also has a bay. The service entrance through the kitchen leads to the garaga and an areaway to the basement.

The entrance hall is ample. The staircase to the second floor is straight and without turns, having a dark handrail and turned balusters. The landing at the second floor is lighted by a window.

A MASTER bedroom with sleeping porch, two additional bedrooms and baths complete the second floor. There is ample closet space and all bedrooms have cross ventilation. A large linen cabinet and cedar closet serve the second floor.

The first floor is of concrete, with a hardwood and parquet overlay. This lessens the fire hazard and also makes the house termite proof. The hardware is of Colonial brass and the fixtures are of bronze and crystal. The rooms are papered to harmonize with the style of the house. Kitchen and baths have tile wainscoting.

The basement has space for a winter air-conditioned, gas-fired furnace, laundry and recreation room finished in knotty pine paneling. The house is completely insulated and weather-stripped and has a central chimney. The cubage is figured at about 38,500 feet and the cost is estimated at 30 cents per cubic foot. It was designed by Hugo K. Graf.



Modern Fixtures.

In building the modern home a preference for plumbing fixtures of superior quality, distinctive appearance, matched design and improved performance is shown.

TERMITE CONTROL IS IMPORTANT

More than $50,000,000 worth of property is destroyed annually by termites, a tropical insect.

The United States Government, through the Department of Agriculture, as well as many state agricultural departments, is conducting research work in an effort to stamp out this pest, which not only causes heavy property losses but sometimes actually makes buildings unsafe for habitation.

Termites are closely related to the cockroach family. They do not have the armor covering that a cockroach has, however, but can flatten themselves out to get through a narrow opening. They gain access to buildings by building subterranean tunnels through or over almost any kind of foundation.

Once they gain entrance and cannot get back to the earth they die. A termite must have moisture to live. Authorities on the prevention and control of termites say that spraying affords only temporary relief.

It is pointed out that copper and copper alloy shields between the foundation walls and the superimposed woodwork of buildings are one of a number of protections against the insects. These shields cover the top of the masonry foundation walls and piers and project straight out beyond each side of the wall, with the edges flanged downward.

Pipes should also be shielded, because the termite will build shelter tubes up the exterior of the piping, enabling them to reach the woodwork.

A FEW BRUSH TIPS

In applying paint to ceiling surfaces, dip your brush no more than 1-3 the length of the bristle and keep it well scraped on the edge of the can. This helps prevent the paint from running down your arms. The paint should be applied in strips 2 to 3 feet wide, using a rather full brush. Do not brush out too much—smooth out lightly with fan-shape, semi-circular brush strokes.

When applying enamel or varnish over woodwork that has been stained, it is wise to give the woodwork first a thin coat of white shellac—white shellac thinned with an equal amount of denatured alcohol. After this coat is dry, apply the varnish or enamel. This treatment will prevent the stain's 'bleeding" into the varnish or enamel and disfiguring the work.

If it is desired to decorate or refinish furniture in color, enamel or lacquer should be used. To restore the lustre to worn natural finish furniture which has been varnished, recoat it with varnish. Stained and varnished furniture that is faded can be freshened up in color or can be made darker to match walnut or mahogany by applying a coat or two of varnish stain.

FOR BETTER LIVING

Q. We have just bought a new brick bungalow and all the walls are plastered with a rough finish and all but the kitchen is a light tan color. Under all my windows it is all stained from the rain coming in and in this last rain our roof leaked and stained quite a place in the living room. Is there anything you can put on this to hide the spots? MRS. A. B. Overland.

A. I take it that you have had your roof repaired and your windows made weatherproof. From your description the finish on your walls is a cold water or casein paint rather than an oil paint. You might try touchingup these spots with cold water or casein paint. It is rather difficult to do a good job with patchwork of this kind and the suggestion is that you have the walls done over completely.

Q. I found an old brass lamp in our attic that belonged to my mother. The finish has become very dull. Is there anything that I can use to brighten the finish besides "elbow grease?" MRS. J. D.

A. Dissolve as much salt in cider vinegar as the vinegar will take up. Rub the liquid on the lamp and it will dissolve the dirt and tarnish. After cleaning scrub the lamp with soap and water to remove all traces of the salt for any that is left will cause the brass to corrode. Finish the job with a good metal polish.

Q. We live in an old house and have trouble each spring with roaches or waterbugs. Roach powder does not seem to help any. Can you recommend something? HELEN T. R.

A. Get sodium fluoride powder, put it in a puffer and blow it in all the cracks particularly in those between the flooring and the baseboard. Scatter it wherever the insects appear. Sodium fluoride is poison and great care should be taken not to confuse it with baking powder. To be on the safe side ask your druggist for the kind that is stained blue or green.

Q. We are planning to remodel our bathroom and have been reading about prefabricated units with fixtures on the panels. Is anything saved by installing these fixtures? H. C.

A. The one advantage of these factory-made units is that they save time in installation. The advantages are much more apparent when they are used in quantity.

Q. The shower in our bathroom drips and sprays on the floor. Is there anything we can do to remedy this condition? Y. C.

A. There are shower doors built with an anti-drip feature which catches and drains away collected water. A dealer in plumbing supplies should be able to give you more information on this door.

Q. The walls of our summer cottage are finished in knotty pine panelling. What finish should be used on them? We are planning maple furnishings. B. S.

A. Mix turpentine and raw linseed oil half and half and brush well into the wood. Wipe off the surplus after an hour or so and repeat in two days, continuing as long as the wood absorbs moisture. This mixture will not check the natural ageing and mellowing of the wood.

Q. Our house is a two-story brick with shingle second floor. When it rains hard there is a leak under the second floor windows. We caulked them but this does not seem to help. MRS. W. M. A.

A. The leak may be anywhere in the joint between the window frame and the wall. Water coming in at the top might run down the edges and show under the sill. Window frames should be caulked all around especially at the top. Look for cracks on the outside parts of the window frames. These cracks may be closed with paint.

Q. I have a very narrow lot and want to build a one-story house. How can I get proper light in all my rooms?

A. If the obstructions to your natural light and ventilation on the sides are close, it is advisable to replan your house to have the same amount of space on two floors, with the rooms arranged so that your light comes from the front and back.

Q. I am going to build and want my living room to be just right. What are the main elements to be considered in its design? N. C.

A. The living room, as the meeting place of the family group, should be the largest room in the house. Its size will vary with the size of the house, the size and circumstances of the family group, and the contemplated use of the room. The living room should be given a favored location as to exposure to sunlight and attractive views, and it should be conveniently accessible to other rooms.

PANELLED WALLS

In decorating bedrooms, walls paneled in moldings are appropriate and effective. Before adjusting the molding it is advisable to plan the panel spaces in relation to the furniture. If a double bed is used, a large corresponding panel space should be arranged; if twin beds are in the room, two narrow panels may effectively form the background for each bed. The wall paneling should take account of other pieces of furniture, such as chest of drawers, desk, dressing table, etc., in order that proper balance may be effected.

MODERN KITCHEN

Modern kitchens are and should be totally unlike old kitchens. They should possess a new and higher type of cleanliness, compactness, airiness, sanitation, beauty and convenience. The modern kitchen reflects more progress than any room in the house. Most of the equipment used therein has passed through a great change in size, appearance, utility, finish, convenience and cost of operation.

TAKE ADVANTAGE OF GARDEN

Now that home owners have definitely become garden-conscious and have turned the faces of their houses from the street to the garden, it is advisable to consider the possibilities of a garden shelter, or gazabo. It can be most useful as well as ornamental. It should, of course, provide a sheltered spot where one may sit and enjoy the beauties of the garden, or eat a picnic lunch, or read in the peace of natural surroundings.

The location will have to determine the character of this shelter; if there is a view beyond the garden house, it should be open to both the garden and the view. On the other hand, if the garden ends against another property over which one has no control, it would be better to choose the back of this sheltered space and have it open only toward the garden.

Besides this recreational portion, the garden shelter should contain a closet for garden tools, which are bulky and dirty and should not be stored in the house. Another closet can be provided for outdoor toys and games which need protection from the weather, and which usually are poked into the coat closet to the discomfort and irritation of all who try to extract a coat from amongst the deck tennis net and croquet mallets.

For a small back-yard garden, a garden house at the rear of the lot will form a lovely background, and it may be as simple as the purse of the owner demands. It may be rustic or semiformal, of frame, or even of masonry. If you can't have it at once, it is a nice thing to plan as a future item and allow for it in laying out the original plan of the garden.

NOW IS TIME TO FIGHT HOUSE FLY

Now is the time to begin war on flies if you do not want to be overcome by the pests in August. Screens are among the best weapons to use against the fly.

Screens in just a few of the windows, or in the windows only, are not enough. Every door should have its screen. Full-length window screens add greatly to summer comfort, because the windows can be opened at the top or bottom for better ventilation, and no cracks are left between the upper edges and the top sash which admit flies and other insects.

Copper screening will not rust and lasts for many years, the college says. Though it costs a little more, it is economical over a period of years. Painted or galvanized screening is the cheapest kind and gives satisfactory service for several seasons if it is brushed with oil when stored in the fall. How long it will wear depends on the climate.

The best way to destroy the fly, however, is to destroy its breeding place. House flies not only annoy in summer, but menace health because they breed in filth and feed on filth before alighting on human food. Absolute cleanliness in disposal of all garbage and waste, whether in the house or barnyard, is essential in fighting the fly.

Proper Planting Enhances Value Of New House

Plot and House Should Be Treated as a Unit With Careful Foundation Planting.

Everyone who has ever seen a new house standing forlorn in the midst of its lot will agree that planting does something about removing the newness and making it fit into its surroundings. Next to laying out the grass plots foundation planting is important.

For years stiff evergreens, matching on either side of the doorway have been accepted as foundation planting. These evergreens have usually been planted in tight groups and near the house, where planting has been undertaken by the home gardner, and soon develop into a ragged group in which branches near the wall are killed out because of insufficient light and air.

Material should be selected with regard to suitability to climate and soil, exposure to sun and wind, its harmony with the house and its size at maturity. Unless a screen is wanted foundation planting should never reach higher than the window sill when the plants are mature.

It is a good idea to treat the house and grounds as a unit when it comes to planting. When the only planting that is done is close to the house the yard or grounds seems to have no connection with it. A hedge or fence is not necessary to privacy. A small group of trees planted at the corner of the lot will provide privacy and give a parklike aspect to the entire plot. Where foundation planting has been carefully planned and some provision has been made for a spring flowering tree or two the house becomes an architectural background.

Most owners have their own ideas about laying out the backyard of their plots. Where the budget is rather limited garden improvements may be added each year until the plan is complete. It is a good plan to consider a mixed border of evergreens and deciduous shrubs with flower beds before them. If the plot is large enough a few fruit trees may be added and a pool may be planned. It is much more difficult to plant a small plot than it is a larger one for in the small one every plant must count and where one is planting for the future the gardner should make his moves with the same deliberation that is used by the chess player for every move will count either for or against the beauty of the plot.

HIS OWN ROOM

A child's room should be carefully planned and the utmost effort made to provide assistance in character building, promote pride of ownership and a sense of order which, cultivated during impressionable years, promises beneficial results all through life.

Attention paid to the particular needs of the smaller members will save time of the older people. The child's room must be practical, sound-proof, with walls finished in washable material and floors covered with linoleum, cork, rubber, or other material easily kept clean and free from dust. Sunshine, fresh air, and satisfactory ventilation are essential. An adjoining sun porch has many advantages.

If the room is a combination playroom and bedroom, low shelves and cupboards should be built in to take care of toys, books, and games. Color should be extensively used, adequate lighting and a cheerful atmosphere provided at all times.

A blackboard will permit the use of bright crayons and provide amusement and possibly encourage early attempts at drawing. Wall coverings are obtainable in many varieties from which pencil marks and other defacements may be readily washed and even scrubbed.

Furniture should be simple, durable and of a size to suit the occupants. Rugs, curtains, hangings must be able to withstand many washings. If possible, a special bathroom should be installed with necessary equipment of reduced proportions, but should the family bathroom be used, a special bench might be provided at the washstand to make the washing of small hands easier and a towel rack placed within convenient reach.

MODERN WINDOW IS EASY TO CLEAN

Washing windows is one of the most difficult housekeeping tasks, but its accomplishment offers ample repayment in bright, shiny surfaces, adding attractiveness to both the exterior and interior of the home.

A solution of the window-washing problem is found in a new type of equipment whereby a window may be reversed as readily as it is raised or lowered, thus bringing the window pane within easy reach of the washer. The sash may be adjusted to a horizontal position and the panes washed and polished on both sides without risk of falls or other accidents to the cleaner.

Installation may be made in old buildings without discarding the present sash or disturbing anything but the inside finishing molding strip.

Made of metal which will not rust, this specially equipped sash is weather tight, easy sliding, and will not rattle.

Property should be accessible to suitable employment areas, market centers, schools, and recreational facilities. Adequate and convenient means of transportation at reasonable cost should be available.

Decorators Divide Early American Into Two Periods

Line Now Being Drawn Between Rugged New England and More Decorative Colonial.

Decorators are beginning to draw a distinct line between Early American furnishings of the rugged New England type and the more elegant decorative style typified by Colonial Williamsburg. In clarifying American periods, decorators point out that the furniture of these two backgrounds should not be expected to dwell peaceably in the same room any more than you could expect a New England frontiersman and a Virginia plantation owner to feel equally at home in the same room.

In studying these two distinct American periods, home makers are learning color schemes that serve as fitting foils for each. One decorator, with a fondness for Williamsburg, reveals how the richness of Colonial America can be adapted to modern day tastes, in a living room that has white-painted walls around a fireplace enameled grayed blue-green. Other walls in the room are painted blue-green. The molding, also, has been given a coat of blue-green, while the baseboard is painted taupe to match the carpet. Around the effectively high-spotted fireplace are grouped a pair of mahogany Chippendale love seats upholstered in green and rose linen, a "butler tray" and candle stands. Nearby are gold upholstered mahogany chairs, also some mulberry red and gray ones, a desk, coffee table, console and end tables.

A second decorator, loyal to the more homespun American period, has created a sitting room with a pine panelled dado. Baseboard and molding, given a bleached finish, have been waxed till they glow in the candle light. The upper walls above the dado are pale green. A sofa, covered in old blue, has a maple base while the cobbler's bench coffee table, ladder-backed chairs, and the desk are also maple. The fireplace is maple and red brick. Twin brass lamps have old-ivory shades.

Another colorful example of the so-called "homespun" era combines delft blue painted walls with white-enameled woodwork and a cinnamon brown ceiling. The cornice is blue with a white design. The upholstery of the soft contains russet, brown and rose against a cream background. Window draperies are of the same fabric. A large maple chair is covered in brown and cream. Other maple pieces are: a drop-leaf table, Windsor chairs, milking stools by the fireplace, a commode, three-legged end tables. Bright red and blue glassware is effectively placed.

To this decorative plan, a Williamsburg enthusiast replies with a beautiful and dignified dining room. The upper walls are soft yellow, while the dado, dado rail, moulding and ceiling have been painted beige-white. Dark mahogany dining chairs are upholstered in mulberry colored fabric and the armchair is in blue-green. Draperies are elegant in mulberry silk.

Three Fundamentals In All Building

Every building operation has three fundamental elements—namely, cost, size and quality.

There are two kinds of quality: That which is "essential" and that which constitutes "luxury." The lowest permissible limit of quality in materials and construction is that which insures durability with low maintenance cost. This is "essential" quality.

The quality which pertains to elaboration of decorative and architectural effects, special equipments, etc., is "luxury." It is desirable, of course, to have both kinds of quality in the home, but if cost limitations permit only one, the sound investment demands that essential quality be maintained to the exclusion of luxury.

The selection of materials and equipment for the home should be governed by a consistency of quality. It is obvious that quality, in general, must be proportioned to expenditure, but certain desirable characteristics, such as design and plan arrangement, can be attained without material effect to the cost. A high degree of essential quality, regardless of the size or cost of the dwelling, is necessary to a property that is to be a desirable investment.

Room for Maid

In building a new home consideration should be given to comfortable quarters for a maid, if the family that lives in the home has a servant or plans to have one in the future.

When space is at a premium, a very small room can, with care, be made attractive. Built-in furniture is particularly adaptable to a room of this type. A bed may be built in, with drawers for storage underneath. Bookcases, a desk, and a drop-leaf table can be built in at little cost and will be a great convenience.

Servants' quarters, if on the north side of a house or facing the house next door, may be made attractive by the use of pastel shades that reflect the greatest amount of light.

A consultation with your architect should result in a room that is adequate and attractive but does not infringe upon the space required for family use.

Colors for Bathroom.

In a bathroom decorated in tones of gray and deep blue, the walls are of clear gray; the ceiling is painted deep blue. Blue is also the color of the shower curtain, the window shades, the towels and the linoleum on the floor.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

SOUND BUSINESS OPPORTUNITY

There are still a few desirable towns in Illinois and Missouri where we will establish complete auto supply and tire stores with individuals meeting our requirements.

You can become sole owner of one of these stores for three to five thousand dollars, depending upon management ability and town selected. This investment provides for a complete setup of merchandise, fixtures, equipment and working capital. You do not need previous specific experience as we provide training facilities to those selected.

Business conditions are fast improving. Good towns are being closed fast. We invite immediate inquiries from interested parties.

What Our Customers Say—

APRIL 30, 1937.

AN EMPLOYEE OF THE DESLOGE HOSPITAL, WRITES:

My brother and I have purchased from your South Side Chevrolet Company, a Used 1932 Model Ford V-8 Tudor De Luxe and find it very satisfactory. We get good mileage on both gas and oil which proves your quality and reconditioning in both workmanship and material. We know that your word alone would be a good guarantee. We also find that your trade-in prices on used cars are far above the average.

George and Joseph Bueter, 244 Bauman Avenue, Lemay, Missouri.

"EVERYBODY MUST BE DRIVING ONE OF THESE FORD DEALER'S USED CAR BARGAINS, CAPTAIN!"

USED CARS & TRUCKS R&G GUARANTEED ALL MAKES MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

R & G means RENEWED AND GUARANTEED! Many used car bargains offered by Ford Dealers are R & G cars. They are the cream of the used car market. You must be satisfied or you get your money back—like that! If you want the very best used car, look for the R & G emblem. 100% satisfaction or 100% refund.

You want a good used car. Your Ford Dealer wants space. Better see him now, and make a "deal" you'll never regret! He has a wide assortment of used cars taken in trade. He has the car you want—and it's a bargain! He'd rather sell now—at the year's lowest prices—than pay storage on them.

It's "money in your pocket" if you buy from a Ford Dealer now. He's reliable. He wants to do business on your terms. Easy payments as low as $15 monthly, your present car may more than cover down-payment.

See your Ford Dealer's used cars today.

MAYOR TO TAKE UP REGISTRATION BILL PROTEST

Will Confer With City Counselor on J. B. Edwards' Request for Meeting on Changes Made.

ATTITUDE OF STATE REPRESENTATIVES

'You Draft 'Em, We've a Right to Amend 'Em' — Substitute Perfected in Missouri House.

Mayor Dickmann and City Counselor Edgar H. Wayman, chairman of the Mayor's Civic Committee, which drafted the original bill for permanent registration of St. Louis voters, will confer tomorrow on the request of John B. Edwards, vice-chairman, for a meeting of the committee to consider changes involved in the substitute measure perfected in the State House of Representatives Thursday.

Wayman announced yesterday that he would make known the decision on the meeting after talking with the Mayor.

Edwards, a lawyer, who was chairman of the St. Louis Election Board in 1921-25, under Gov. Hyde, said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that, if the meeting was called, he would offer a resolution condemning the substitute bill, on the ground that it would destroy the usefulness of permanent registration and cripple the proper conduct of elections.

The Mayor said that he had no objection to calling the meeting, but that this was a matter for Wayman to act on as chairman of the committee. No one, the Mayor added, had asked him to have a meeting held.

Both Dickmann and Wayman returned yesterday from a trip to Washington on city business, but on different trains. Wayman reached City Hall after the Mayor had departed for the week-end.

Mayor Sees Representatives.

Discussing the legislative situation, Mayor Dickmann reasserted that he had done everything within his power to obtain passage of his committee's original bill. He added that Robert E. Hannegan, chairman of the Democratic City Committee, and one of his chief political aids, also had advocated it. Hannegan likewise has said to a reporter that he favored the original measure.

Among callers at the Mayor's office yesterday were State Representatives David A. Hess and Edward M. Brady, two of the 19 members of the city's solidly Democratic delegation in the House. Discussing their visit, Dickmann said to reporters:

"I said to them: 'What's the matter with that bill? Why don't you pass it as drafted?' They replied: 'You've a right to draft 'em, but we've a right to amend 'em, too.'"

Leaving the office, the Representatives said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that they favored the substitute bill, as submitted by the House Committee on Elections, and that it was sure to be passed. "You'll get it in a week or so," they remarked. Brady added that one objection to the original draft was the fear it would keep illiterate persons from voting. The draft made full provision for illiterates.

Edwards' Objections.

Former Chairman Edwards declared that the changes made by the substitute bill completely emasculated the original measure.

Particularly he condemned the elimination by the House committee of the authority given the Election Board in the present law to appoint precinct judges and clerks employed or engaged in business in the ward. The substitute would restrict eligibility to residents of the ward. The present law was enacted about the time Edwards' board took office and his board and those succeeding it took advantage of this authority particularly in the downtown wards, where residents largely are of floating character, whereas employes of banks and business houses are readily available.

"This change," Edwards said, "would cripple the board beyond all power of properly conducting elections. The right to pick judges and clerks not residing in the ward is one of the board's greatest powers."

Edwards also condemned elimination in the substitute measure of the requirement that voters sign their names for comparison, on voting, which he considered an essential element of permanent registration; omission of the biennial census of all citizens 19 years of age and over, another safeguard; changes in the bipartisan check of the Election Board office personnel, and retention of six election officials per precinct, instead of reduction to four, which would have saved $8616 or more at each election.

Meyers' Condemnation.

Condemnation of the substitute bill by Edwards followed similar criticism by City Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers, in a speech before a Republican ward club Friday night, and by the League of Women Voters, in a letter to the House Committee on Elections. Meyers was a member of the civic committee drafting the original plan, in which the league also was represented.

In addition to changes of which Edwards complained, Meyers and the league cited the following as objectionable: Removal of the prohibition against voting by persons not maintaining homes within the city, those registering from their places of business or employment, and those not registered in precincts where they offered to vote, and removal of the requirement that voters must prove bona fide residence.

Meyers declared the substitute was unsound and urged civic organizations, the press and the people generally to "rise up" against it.

Perfection of the substitute bill was voted by the Democratic majority of the House, over the protest of Republican members, following action on a makeshift permanent registration bill for Kansas City desired by Tom Pendergast, Democratic boss.

The Post-Dispatch pointed out Friday that the substitute retained the objectionable provision of the present law requiring destruction of ballots 12 months after elections, unless there is pending an election contest, a grand jury investigation or a prosecution in which the ballots are needed.

CENSUS OF ST. LOUIS JOBLESS UNDERTAKEN

Workers' Alliance in City and County Will Begin Tomorrow to Make Up List.

A registration of jobless on relief, in need of relief and employable workers in need of jobs, will be undertaken tomorrow by the St. Louis and St. Louis County Workers' Alliance, affiliated with the Workers Alliance of America.

The registration will be conducted through its headquarters at 3608 Finney avenue. Cards will be furnished the unemployed inscribed as follows: "I want a job! I am willing to work and able to work. I don't want to live on relief. I can't get work in private industry."

The registration campaign is in line with the national policy of the Workers' Alliance of America, which is supporting a legislative program to assimilate 3,000,000 of the nation's jobless into the W P A.

The Alliance announced approval of the attitude of Wallace Crossley, State Director of Relief, who said Friday that he would accept the resignations of three members of the St. Louis Relief Commission. It will ask Crossley to appoint new members from various groups interested in relief problems, including the St. Louis Ministerial Alliance, the League of Women Voters, American Federation of Labor, Committee for Industrial Organization, the Committee of One Hundred, the St. Louis Welfare Guild, and the St. Louis Workers' Alliance.

"The St. Louis Workers' Alliance will make definite recommendations to Mr. Crossley believing that new members of the commission should be persons who have the active sympathy of the unemployed," said the Alliance. "We believe that all persons sincerely interested in the welfare of the unemployed will support Mr. Crossley in his purpose to feed the people in need of relief. We believe that it will be possible to achieve that goal only by having on the commission members who understand the problems of the unemployed."

UNIONS PICKET MORE HOLLYWOOD STUDIOS

Workers in Four on Strike—Those in 14 Others to Vote Today.

By the Associated Press.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 1.—Picketing increased at major studios and spread to others tonight, as the threat of a paralyzing strike affecting more than 10,000 craftsmen and players hung over the motion picture industry. Four unions with a membership of some 2500 already were nominally on strike under a call issued last night.

The question of whether 14 other unions will join the walkout will be decided tomorrow morning at a meeting of the recently organized parent body, the Federated Motion Picture Crafts, strike sponsor. Its unions were voting today to determine strike sentiment.

The powerful Screen Actors' Guild also called a mass meeting for tomorrow night in the Hollywood Legion Stadium, to decide whether 5600 members, including nearly all the film colony's top-notch players, will pass through picket lines into the studios.

Federated Crafts officials are banking heavily on the Actors' Guild for support of their demands for a closed shop and union recognition in the industry. Producers' representatives so far have declined to grant these demands before receiving and considering any wage and hour requests which the crafts may expect to make.

Effect of last night's strike call to the four unions could not be determined definitely today, Saturday being a light day at most studios.

Pat Casey, labor conciliator for the producers, said few workers failed to report and such production as was scheduled was not hampered.

The four unions called on strike are the painters, makeup artists, scenic artists and draftsmen.

Draftsmen at RKO and Columbia studios walked out this morning. Other unionists, including studio cooks and culinary workers, and 195 camera machinists, were reported walking out in advance of the federation meeting tomorrow.

Picketing was orderly and good-natured. No attempt was made to prevent anyone going into the studios.

CABOOSE CUPOLA GONE FROM NEW TYPE CAR

Instead Bay Windows Are Used; Aluminum Paint Replaces the Familiar Red.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The familiar old caboose with its cupola, its architecture unchanged for more than a quarter of a century, is undergoing modernization on the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad.

The old familiar color of brick red has been changed to aluminum, with trimmings of black, but the major change is the removal of the cupola.

Trainmen say they no longer can see from the cupola, the length of the train. Formerly they could sit up there, one on each side, and spot hot boxes or other forms of trouble quickly.

The Milwaukee road has installed comfortable bay windows on each side of the caboose, fitted the bays with coach style seats in which the trainmen may sit.

Sodality Union Convention.

An all-day convention of member groups of the St. Louis College Sodality Union will be held today, beginning with celebration of mass at 9 o'clock this morning in the Desloge Hospital chapel, 1325 South Grand boulevard, followed by breakfast and a general discussion of sodality topics. At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon members of the Sodality will form for the procession to the shrine in the garden at the rear of St. Mary's Hospital, 6420 Clayton road.

SUIT TO BE FILED OVER BONDS HELD BY P. S. C.

Disposition of $555,000 of United Railways Securities at Issue.

The question of what use will be made of $555,000 of United Railways first m ortgages bonds now owned by the St. Louis Public Service Co. will be submitted to United States District Judge Charles B. Davis in a suit expected to be filed tomorrow.

St. Louis Union Trust Co., trustee under the United Railways first mortgage, has given notice that it will file the suit and will ask that the bonds be set aside in a special fund to apply against the existing deficiency in maintenance of the street railway properties.

Under a supplemental indenture executed by the Public Service Co. in 1927 when it took over the street railways and assumed the United Railways mortgage bonds, the Public Service Co. agreed to spend 25 per cent of gross revenue for maintenance and rehabilitation of property, or to place in a sinking fund for that purpose an equivalent amount of Government bonds or United Railways bonds. This provision was never met, and the existing deficiency is now more than $11,000,000.

Of the bonds in question, $118,000 are now in the treasury of the company, having been purchased with company funds before it went into receivership April 15, 1933. The remaining $437,000, acquired in like manner, were deposited with a bonding company to cover appeals from damage judgments, but the cases have been disposed of and the company expects to recover the bonds. The suit will be directed against Henry W. Kiel, trustee under the bankruptcy reorganization proceedings.

163 KILLED BY AUTOMOBILES IN MISSOURI IN 3 MONTHS

1096 Persons Injured in Same Time in Accidents, State Highway Commission Reports.

JEFFERSON CITY, May 1.—Accidents involving automobiles caused the death of 163 persons in Missouri in the first three months of 1937 and injury to 1096, the State Highway Commission reports today. Of these, 71 were killed and 568 injured on highways.

State totals included 131 accidents in St. Louis, 62 in Kansas City, 35 in St. Joseph and 15 in Jefferson City. These figures were regarded as incomplete.

Collision accounted for 876 accidents and striking pedestrians by cars for 170. A total of 113 automobiles turned over, 104 hit fixed objects at the side of the road, 83 went into the ditch and 38 over embankments, 60 hit parked cars and 43 collided with trains.

Mechanical or tire defects accounted for only 62 of the accidents in which the cause was reported. Seventy-three were attributed to general "careless driving," 53 to loss of control, 45 to stopping too soon, 37 to failure to see a train and 27 to driving when drunk.

Thirty children were hurt or killed when they ran in front of automobiles and eight others were struck when playing in the street. A dozen sleds ran into automobiles.

Missouri Savitar Queen.

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBIA, Mo., May 1. — Miss Barbara Porter of Kansas City became queen of the Savitar, University of Missouri yearbook, at a coronation ball here tonight. Six other woman students, chosen by George Petty, magazine illustrator, also will be honored in a special section of this year's Savitar. They are Miss Betty Bean, Miss Nadine Gurenzy, Miss Mary Jane Stephenson and Miss Constance Levich, all of Kansas City; Miss Joan Johnson of Mount Vernon, and Miss Martha Payne of Columbia.

JURY IS EXPECTED TO GET DENHARDT CASE TOMORROW

Judge Overrules Defense Motion for Directed Verdict of Acquittal After Rebuttal Ends.

By the Associated Press.

NEW CASTLE, Ky., May 1.—After arguments in chambers, Circuit Judge Charles C. Marshall late today overruled a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal for Henry H. Denhardt. The motion was made after the Commonwealth had concluded its rebuttal. The case will go to the jury Monday, it is expected.

The Commonwealth, trying the former soldier and politician on an indictment charging murder of Mrs. Verna Garr Taylor, had sought to prove stains on his overcoat were blood from her fatal wound. She was found shot to death the night of last Nov. 6, shortly after she had left an automobile in which she and Denhardt were riding near here.

Denhardt, in the course of his long statement to the jury of 11 farmers and a filling station attendant, had said he had cut his finger changing a tire shortly before the tragedy. Dr. Alexander S. Wiener, Brooklyn (N. Y.) blood expert, who concluded the defense's direct evidence, testified that no more than an eighth of a teaspoonful of blood would be required to make the spots on the heavy army overcoat that Denhardt wore that night. He said the spots were of the same type of blood as Denhardt's and that they resulted from "something like a cut finger." Dr. Wiener, a small, neatly dressed man, who spoke in a sharp voice, left for Brooklyn immediately on concluding.

Tells of Treating Cut.

Dr. A. J. McCormack, State Health Commissioner, and on whose $25,000 bond Denhardt is free, told the jury today he treated a cut on the general's finger a few days after Mrs. Taylor's death. Several other witnesses said they had seen the cut. In its short rebuttal the Commonwealth recalled Coroner D. L. Ricketts who testified he examined Denhardt after Mrs. Taylor's death and found no cuts or abrasions on him.

The Commonwealth then called Mrs. Mary Prior Brown, one of Mrs. Taylor's daughters, who had testified for the defense that her mother and Denhardt had quarreled shortly before her death. The defense objected on the grounds that Mrs. Brown had been in the courtroom and had heard Denhardt's testimony. Judge Marshall sustained the objection.

State Rests Its Case.

As the young woman stepped aside, H. B. Kinsolving Jr., the Commonwealth's attorney, said, "The State rests its case." The defense then moved for a directed verdict of acquittal and the arguments in chambers followed.

Kinsolving made no move to call Chester Woolfolk, 26-year-old laundry dricer, to deny Denhardt's testimony that he had threatened Mrs. Taylor through jealousy on learning of her engagement to Denhardt.

The courtroom, which had been well filled all during the trial and jammed to standing capacity when Denhardt testified was hardly two-thirds full today.

BREAKS HIS 52-DAY FAST WITH BROTH AND GREENS

Tennessee Mountaineer Says "My Trial Is Ended," and calls for Food.

STOOPING OAK, Tenn., May 1.—With beef broth and greens Jackson Whitlow, mountaineer, today broke a religious fast he said he began 52 days ago.

"My fast is over," he said. "My trial is ended. I know God is with me and I am not afraid."

Whitlow took half a cup of a fruit juice preparation yesterday after reporting receitps of "a sweet message from the Lord." He said he drank grape juice. Neighbors said it was elderberry wine.

His wife prepared steak cubes and greens in their Cumberland cabin to restore his strength. Physicians warned, however, there was danger in his eating without medical supervision.

Whitlow's fast was not a record.

CAPTOR OF 19 ROBBERS DIES

Ohio Filling Station Owner Killed Two Holdup Men.

By the Associated Press.

ELYRIA, O., May 1.—Matt Gardner, one-armed filling station owner who captured 19 robbers, wounding two fatally, shot himself to death today. The Coroner said it apparently was suicide.

Gardner, a former Oklahoma cowboy, operated a highway filling station west of Elyria. Over several years, with the aid of devices he had rigged up in his station, he repulsed six attacks by robbers. Friends said he had been worried lately over the condition of his wife, who recently underwent a serious operation. She was not told of her husband's death.

CHAIRMAN HAMILTON ON AIMS OF THE G. O. P.

Task Is to Co-operate With Good and Fight Bad of Administration.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—John D. M. Hamilton, Republican National Chairman, said in a radio address tonight that the Republican party's task is that of a constructive opposition distinguishing between "good and bad in the performances of the administration."

"We covet a willingness to cooperate with the good, and equally covet a determination to attack the bad and to expose it and, if possible, to prevent it from coming into being," he said. The party "will oppose any program of domination of this country," he declared.

He took note of suggestions that the Republican name be changed and new parties formed, but declared as to that only future could tell the results.

Foundation for Building.

"If the future holds any changes for the (Republican) party," he said, "I know that the new political structure will be built upon the foundation which we today call Republican—a foundation including 17,000,000 American citizens, among them more than 50,000 men and women officially representing the party in the precincts, in the wards and in the counties.

"And so I can say to all who are interested in this question: If you do not keep this foundation firm, any new political structure which you may envisage will either not be erected or, if it is, will not long endure."

Speaking of questions which transcend old party lines, Hamilton pictured a realignment as follows:

"On the one side are those among us who are convinced that the complexities and difficulties of modern existence can be solved only by a central and all-inclusive 'plan.' They believe that this plan should be blindly followed by all branches of the Government.

Crisis and Control.

"They are convinced that this action must extend to all the vital operations of our economic system. They foresee a great impending economic crisis. They wish to meet it by additional governmental controls piled on top of all the controls that have been put in place during the last four years."

"Against this conception," he said, "stands those citizens—of all parties—who believe that domination can lead only to a lower standard of government and to a lower standard of living. They think that this conclusion is fortified by the whole historic experience of Europe.

"They think that the division of powers between the various branches of our Government is justified not by mere constitutional tradition but by considerations of practical effectiveness. They believe that in the economic field the competition produced by private ventures can go farther than any one centralized plan toward enlarging prosperity and employment."

Formulas and Labels.

Hamilton urged Republicans not to fear "formulas and labels."

"There is a loose form of political thinking which takes refuge in such terms as liberal, radical and conservative without understanding of their meaning or their implication," he said.

"It is idle to repeat such phrases without reducing them to concrete acts and legislative proposals. If there is a policy of government which promotes the goal we all seek and the end we all have in view, it is the duty of the Republicans to favor it. If there is a policy of government which works against that end, it is the duty of the Republican party to oppose it.

"Both personally and in my official position with the Republican party I refuse and shall continue to refuse to be forced into any formula or to accept and label so long as I can support what is right and oppose what is wrong as I interpret the needs of the nation."

The Republican party, he concluded, will be "not merely a party of opposition, but a party of proposal. It will oppose any program of domination of this country either by omnipotent capital or omnipotent labor, and surely, by omnipotent government. But it will also continuously propose a positive program of co-operation between capital and government for the perfecting of a system in this country which shall not be less and less but more and more free from all dominations and all wrongful impediments whatsoever."

Illinois Dairy Strike.

JACKSONVILLE, Ill., May 1.—Many homes here were without milk today after drivers and plant men in the largest three dairies in the city went on strike. Drivers for five small daries made their usual deliveries. The dairy employes, recently enrolled in a union, are demanding higher wages and a closed shop.

A CAPPELLA CONCERT REACHES HIGH LEVEL

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

The St. Louis A Cappella Choir gave its annual concert last night in the Municipal Auditorium under the direction of its founder, William B. Heyne, and in the presence of a large and responsive audience was in many ways the most accomplished example of choral singing produced by a St. Louis organization for more than 10 years. The discipline of the choir in attacks, releases and phrasing, the perfect blending of the voices, the smooth and consistent control of dynamic shading and the intelligent interpretive spirit displayed were the obvious result of intensive training and devotion on the part of the singers and the director.

This St. Louis concert was, in a sense, the high point of a season that has already been in progress in several other cities. For the choir has just concluded its first important out-of-town tour. The result of these additional concerts was manifested in a certain ease which the choir has never had before.

The program performed last night was of rather uneven merit. In many spots the quality of the music was hardly consistent with the difficulties presented for the voices. The high levels of the program, came, of course, in the first part of the evening, with the performance of the Crucifixus by Antonio Lotti and two motets by Sebastian Bach. The two numbers by Georg Schumann were a distinct let-down but they at least served to show the choir's ability to handle unexpected harmonies and suspensions and very tricky changes of key.

The best example of technique, rapid contrapuntal passages was exhibited on the Bach motet, "Praise the Lord All Ye People."

The second half of the program was devoted to American composers.

Since its last concert at the auditorium, Mr. Heyne's choir has been built up to sixty voices, and fortunately the total volume which might have been expected from a group so large and so well trained was not forthcoming due to the favorable acoustic conditions. The choir will have to have the same kind of sounding board used by the Symphony Orchestra if it is to achieve its full sonority.

Southern Baptist Convention.

NEW ORLEANS, May 1—More than 4000 Baptist ministers and lay readers from 18 states are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist convention here, May 13-16. The vanguard of the visitors will arrive May 15 for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, which has nearly 3000 delegates.

Members of the St. Louis Ga den Club have spent the last yea replenishing and beautifying the gardens for the pleasure of th visitors. Peonies, iris, columbin and other early summer flower are expected to be at their bes by the middle of the month. Sev eral gardens will be the setting fo social affairs.

The first contingent of delegate will arrive Sunday, May 16, an after registration at Hotel Chase headquarters for the meeting, wi be taken to the Art Museum an to see the Lindbergh trophies. I the evening the visitors will be en tertained at dinner in the home of local garden club members.

The annual business meeting with luncheon afterward, will b held Monday on board a Mississippi River boat bound for Selma, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. William O. Schock on the bluffs below Festus, Mo. The party will arrive there about 2 o'clock in the afternoon to spend some time in the historic garden.

Selma, formerly known as Selma Hall, was built in 1850 by Ferdinand Kennett before a mile of railroad track was laid in Missouri. During the more than four years required for building, Mr. Kennett had all the material, with the exception of native rock, shipped by boat from Philadelphia. The common labor was done by his slaves.

For many years river men called the place Kennett's Castle, because its lights, high on the river bluffs, could be seen from a great distance. The spacious garden is laid out in geometrical design bordered with boxwood.

After a tour of Selma the guests will go by bus to Bee Tree Farm, the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene D. Nims, on the bluffs overlooking the Mississippi River just above its confluence with the Meramec. Bee Tree Farm is also one of the show places of this part of the country. The house, built high, to command a view up and down the river, is surrounded by landscaped grounds with flowers growing naturally and in great profusion. It is in this charming place that the delegates will be entertained at tea by Mrs. Nims.

On the way from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Schock to that of Mr. and Mrs. Nims, the party will stop to visit the gardens of Park G. Hammar's Mississippi River home and those of Mrs. Helen Mills Richmond, near Pevely, Mo.

The annual dinner will take place Monday night at Hotel Chase.

Two groups will visit the Missouri Botanical Gardens Tuesday morning. They include the presidents' council and quota guests, the latter those in attendance who are not presidents of garden clubs or delegates. Dr. George T. Moore has arranged an extensive program. Among other features, there will be a collection of books of botanical illustrations on display and a demonstration of tree feeding. Colored motion pictures will be shown in the museum and 30 exhibits will be on view in the floral display house. The iris garden will be one of the objectives of the Garden Club delegates. After a tour of the botanical gardens, the group will be entertained at luncheon at the St. Louis Country Club.

Tuesday afternoon the presidents of the clubs and the alternates to the meeting will visit the Missouri Botanical Gardens, while the others will see gardens in Florissant Valley, including those of Mr. and Mrs. Hermann von Schrenk, Dr. and Mrs. Vilray Papin Blair, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Fordyce and Mrs. James A. Seddon.

Tuesday evening Joseph Desloge will be host at a buffet supper at his home, Vouziers, Florissant. Supper will be served outdoors and a musical program will be given at twilight.

After the conservation and horticultural meetings Wednesday morning at Hotel Chase, luncheons will be given in private homes for the guests. The presidents of the clubs will visit the gardens in Florissant Valley in the afternoon, while others visit gardens in the vicinity of the St. Louis Country Club. The St. Louis Country Club gardens will include those of Mr. and Mrs. Mortimer P. Burroughs, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Werner and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Lee.

The final gathering will be held in the gardens of the Oliver K. Bovard home, Conway and Ballas roads, where Mrs. Bovard will be hostess at tea.

A CAPPELLA CONCERT REACHES HIGH LEVEL

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN.

The St. Louis A Cappella Choir gave its annual concert last night in the Municipal Auditorium under the direction of its founder, William B. Heyne, and in the presence of a large and responsive audience. It was in many ways the most finished example of choral singing produced by a St. Louis organization for more than 10 years. The discipline of the choir in attack, releases and phrasing, the perfect blending of the voices, the subtle and consistent control of dynamics, shading and the intelligent interpretive spirit displayed were the obvious result of intensive training and devotion on the part of the singers and the director.

This St. Louis concert was, in a sense, the high point of a season that has already been in progress in several other cities. For the choir has just concluded its first important out-of-town tour. The result of these additional concerts was manifested in a certain poise which the choir has never had before.

The program performed last night was of rather uneven merit. In many spots the quality of the music was hardly consistent with the difficulties presented for the voices. The high levels of the program, came, of course, in the first part of the evening, with the performance of the Crucifixus by Antonio Lotti and two motets by Sebastian Bach. The two numbers by Georg Schumann were a distinct let-down but they at least served to show the choir's ability to handle unexpected harmonies and suspensions and very tricky changes of key.

The best example of technique, rapid contrapuntal passages, was exhibited on the Bach motet, "Praise the Lord All Ye People."

The second half of the program was devoted to American composers.

Since its last concert at the Auditorium, Mr. Heyne's choir has been built up to sixty voices. Unfortunately the total volume that might have been expected from a group so large and so well trained was not forthcoming due to unfavorable acoustic conditions. The choir will have to have the same kind of sounding board used by the Symphony Orchestra if it is to achieve its full sonority.

Southern Baptist Convention.

NEW ORLEANS, May 1—More than 4000 Baptist ministers and lay readers from 18 states are expected to attend the annual meeting of the Southern Baptist convention here, May 13-16. The vanguard of the visitors will arrive May 15 for the annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Union, which has nearly 3000 delegates.

500 Guests Are Being Entertained At Princeton's Spring House Parties

PRINCETON, N. J., May 1.

FIVE HUNDRED AND NINETY-TWO out-of-town guests arrived on the Princeton campus yesterday afternoon for the annual undergraduate spring house parties, 16 individual affairs in the various upper-class eating clubs.

A formal dance in the clubs from 10 o'clock to 5 o'clock last night opened the week-end's program, which continues today with numerous athletic contests, a second presentation of the Theater Intime's "The Tempest," and a second dance tonight at the clubs from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Each club has its own orchestra for both nights of dancing, with the exception of Tiger Inn and Ivy Club, which are combining their party. Colonial Club will entertain the largest number of guests, with 47 expected at the clubhouse.

In the production of "The Tempest," which opened in McCarter Theater here last night, 10 girls from the dramatic department of the Finch School of New York combine talents with Princeton's Intime actors. The play features a revolving stage, the first ever attempted in McCarter Theater, and a mixed ballet. Richard A. Baer, a junior from New York City, Intime president, takes the leading role of Prospero, while Miss Susan Steele of Fredonia, N. Y., portrays Miranda. The play is under the direction of Lemuel Ayers of New York, a graduate of Princeton last year, who also has designed the sets and many of the costumes.

Week-end sports events include tennis with Cornell, Varsity and Junior Varsity; crew with Navy and Syracuse; polo with Army; rugby with Harvard, and lacrosse with Johns Hopkins University.

Two of the campus publications are taking particular notice of the house parties by putting out special issues. The Daily Princetonian, undergraduate newspaper, printed a six-page pictorial supplement yesterday, of photographs of last year's festivities. The Tiger, college humor magazine, has issued a special week-end copy.

Last night's dancing was formal and included a two-hour visiting period between the clubs early this morning. Tonight's dancing will be informal, lasting from 9 to 12 o'clock.

St. Louis students at Princeton and their escorts, are Wilbur Tyson Trueblood Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur T. Trueblood, who escorted Miss Carol McCarthy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Ross McCarthy; William McBride Love, son of Mrs. Isaac Dee Kelly, whose guest was Miss Virginia Claus of Bradford, Mass.; Raymond Amedee Dubuque Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs.

Many Parties Listed for the Week-End

SEVERAL parties for the debutantes and sub-debutantes fill the week-end's social calendar. Miss Effie Virginia Zeibig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hunt Zeibig, Denny road, entertained a group of past season's debutantes and their escorts at dinner at her home last evening. Guests were invited for 7 o'clock.

The sub-debutante crowd is inaugurating its own "little season" with a series of unusual Dutch treat parties on Saturday nights. Last night about 30 met at St. Albans Farms for a hay-ride and dinner at the Old Barn Inn afterward. Joe Horn and Miss Laura Rand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Rand, 7100 Delmar boulevard, were in charge of arrangements.

Ruwitch-Renard Wedding at Westwood Country Club in Elaborate Floral Setting

MASSES of blue hydrangea and delphinium, white snapdragon, stock and lilacs, from the floor to the ceiling of the Westwood Country Club lounge, provided the setting last evening at the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Renard and Joseph Ruwitch. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Renard, 5 Forest Ridge. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Ruwitch of Highland Park, Ill. The wedding party walked down an aisle formed by tall white standards topped with white snapdragon and lilacs garlanded together with ropes of blossoms.

The maid of honor, Miss Nina Renard, the bride's sister, the junior bridesmaid, Miss Elizabeth Ruwitch, sister of the bridegroom, and the bridesmaids, Miss Elsie Rauh, Miss Ellen Cronbach, Miss Barbara Scharff, Miss Anne Levy, Miss Libby Simon and Miss Mary Lepman of Chicago, Ill., were grouped in a semi-circle on a raised dais during the ceremony. Robert Ruwitch, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man. The groomsmen were Theodore Ruwitch, another brother of the bridegroom, Louis Renard, brother of the bride; Sidney Rothschild Jr. and Edward Marder, William Heinsimer and Howard Klee of Chicago. Behind each wing of the bridal party the wall was banked from top to bottom with blue delphinium and hydrangea, while behind the bride and bridegroom the wall was covered with white flowers, arranged against a drop of white velvet, making the entire wall a solid mass of flowers. Three hundred and ten tapers burning against the flower-banked wall, furnished the only light. From small windows at the

St. Louisans at Party Given by Paul Starks

ACRES of apple blossoms in full bloom greeted the 200 guests (half of them from St. Louis), who motored to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Stark in Louisiana, Mo., yesterday for their third "apple blossom-time-in-Pike County-party."

For several days, since the attractively decorated invitations were delivered, acceptances have been traveling by letter, telephone and telegraph, not only from here, but from Columbia, Kansas City and Jefferson City. Shortly afternoon (the invitations said 1 o'clock) a long queue of motors began wending its way to the red brick Victorian house, set high and well back from Georgia street. Guests found large tables and chairs all over the lawn in full view of the surrounding orchards, and a full fledged dinner was served buffet style with the help of the entire Stark family including Gov. and Mrs. Lloyd C. Stark, the host's brother and sister-in-law, and a corps of waiters imported for the occasion.

Country hams, for which Pike County is noted, and which had been prepared in home-made wine, were served with spaghetti and salads, and followed by fresh strawberry ice and "country" cakes. Afterward some of the guests sat on the wide porches and viewed the apple blossoms while others walked through the orchards.

In addition to Gov. and Mrs. Stark, those assisting included Clay, Lawrence, Tom and Edwin Stark, all of Louisiana, and all cousins of Paul Stark, and their wives.

Mr. and Mrs. Stark have given similar parties two years in succession, and although there was none last year, they hope to give others annually.

Simmons Family Reunion.

Mrs. S. Hallock du Pont of Wilmington, Del. returned to her home Saturday after a visit with her mother, Mrs. George Welch Simmons, 21 Westmoreland place. Mrs. du Pont accompanied her younger sister, Miss Georgia Wright Simmons, home about 10 days ago. Miss Simmons visited Mrs. du Pont at Wilmington after landing in New York from a winter abroad. Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Simmons of Chicago, son and daughter-in-law of Mrs. Simmons will return to their home today after spending the week-end here.

Anne Tierney's Betrothal Told At Garden Tea

Post Debutante, Daughter of Mrs. John L. Tierney, to Be Wed to Harry A. Baumstark of Chicago in the Autumn.

THE lawn of Curran House, the home of Mrs. Sol W. Gross in Normandy, bordered with blooming lilacs and early spring flowers, was the setting yesterday for a garden tea to announce the engagement of Miss Anne Curran Tierney and Harry Alvin Baumstark of Chicago.

The party was given by Mrs. Gross' daughter, Miss Joy Gross, a cousin of the prospective bride. Guests, who numbered about 50 of the debutantes of the past two seasons, were greeted at the garden entrance by Miss Tierney's younger sister Abigail, and by her cousins, Gloria and June Gross, daughters of Mrs. William Hickley Gross, who gave them each a bouquet of flowers to which was attached a card bearing news of the betrothal. The flower vendors were dressed in long, full pastel-shaded frocks and carried their wares in baskets.

Miss Florence Tierney, Miss Margaret Corley, Miss Harriet Hulburd, Miss Mary Bardenheier and Mrs. John Barron of Saugatuck, Mich., served at the out-of-door tea table.

Miss Tierney is the daughter of Mrs. John Leo Tierney, 4478 Maryland avenue. Her father, the late Dr. Tierney, died several years ago. A graduate of the Academy of the Sacred Heart, the prospective bride served as a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball during her debut season two years ago. She was introduced socially at a luncheon given by her mother at the Glen Echo Country Club. The late Mr. and Mrs. Con P. Curran were her maternal grandparents.

Mr. Baumstark, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis A. Baumstark of Kirkwood, arrived Saturday night for the week-end.

Miss Tierney will leave early next month with her family to spend the summer in Santa Monica, Cal. The wedding will take place soon after her return in the fall.

Miss Ann F. Cole Wed to Chicagoan

WEARING the yellowed lace wedding gown of her grandmother, Mrs. John J. Cole, Miss Ann Flintham Cole became the bride late yesterday afternoon of Daniel Hardin Callahan of Chicago. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Louis W. Forrey, S. J., in the presence of the families and a few close friends at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Glion Curtis, 453 Gray avenue, Webster Groves. The bride, the daughter of Mrs. John Gully Cole, 411 North Newstead avenue, was given in marriage by her brother, John Cole Jr.

The bodice of the wedding gown, fitted closely over the tawny satin underdress, was designed with a square neckline and elbow length puffed sleeves. The full skirt ended in a short train over which fell the heirloom lace veil of the Berthoud Clifford family. Mrs. Clifford, the former Miss Lucy Haskell and an intimate friend of the bride, wore it at her wedding. More of the lace was used for a cap, fastened by orange blossoms. An under veil of illusion completed the costume. Her flowers were white lilacs.

Mrs. George Tarlton Compton of Tulsa, Ok., was her sister's only attendant. She was gowned in pale blue marquisette, made with a full skirt and puffed sleeves. With it she wore a large hat of the same material and carried blue delphinium.

The bridegroom, the son of Mrs. Daniel Hardin Callahan of Highland Park, Ill., had his uncle, George Hardin of Chicago, for best man. The following were ushers: Edward Lawler, William Drake, Lawrence David, Paul Barry and Karle Meyer of Chicago and Ellis Rhea Hurd Jr. of St. Louis.

The bridal party proceeded through a ribboned aisle to the far end of the living room where an improvised altar in green and white had been arranged. A large standard of spring flowers stood behind the white satin prie dieux. Many green ferns formed a background for the lighted candelabra.

Following the ceremony guests greeted the bridal party and Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Callahan informally. Mrs. Cole wore ashes of roses lace with a large brown hat and accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of talisman roses. The bridegroom's mother was gowned in black lace over flesh tinted crepe. Her picture hat was of black straw and she had a corsage of orchids.

The bridal party was seated for dinner at a round table on the south porch of the Curtis home. White flowers and lighted candelabra formed the decoration. The

Christine Siegmund Becomes Bride of G. W. Cunningham

MISS CHRISTINE REMICK SIEGMUND, daughter of Mrs. Christine Remick Siegmund, 223 West Swon avenue, Webster Groves, and Col. Walter Finney Siegmund of Alton, was married at noon yesterday to George William Cunningham of Brookville, Miss.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Karl Morgan Block in the presence of the immediate families gathered informally at the Church of St. Michael and St. George.

Among those present were Mrs. Cunningham, the bridegroom's mother; Miss Martha Cunningham, his sister, and Mr. and Mrs. John Cunningham, his brother and sister-in-law, all of Brookville; Mrs. W. M. Ledbetter of Shreveport, La., his aunt; Mrs. K. E. Remick of Trenton, Ill., grandmother of the bride; Andrew Remick of Trenton, her uncle, and her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Dittmann of Alton. Two large baskets of white snapdragons and white stock stood at either side of the altar on which candles burned in branched candelabra.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and had as her only attendant her sister, Miss Elizabeth Siegmund. Norfleet Rand was best man and Fred Powell usher. The bride's suit, fashioned of light blue wool, had an attached blouse, tucked up front and tying at the neckline, with a fitted waist-length jacket, its bell-shaped sleeves reaching to the elbow. A navy blue off-the-face hat trimmed with chiffon streamers, navy blue accessories and a corsage of white iris and lilies of the valley completed her costume. The maid of honor wore a navy blue dress surmounted by a beige redingote, a navy blue turban and corsage of talisman roses.

After a wedding breakfast at the Park Plaza the pair departed for the Gulf Coast, and on their return, in three weeks, will live at 5500 Chamberlain avenue.

The bride attended Ward Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn., and was graduated last June from Washington University, where she joined Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority. Mr. Cunningham received his education at the Webb School in Bellbuckle, Tenn., and at Vanderbilt University, being graduated in 1934. He is a member of Delta Kappa Epsilon and resided at 7033 Tulane avenue.

Jane Barnes Is Wed To Allan Harper

A MAY DAY wedding of interest to county residents was that of Miss Jane Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Barnes, 830 South Sappington road, and Allen Drew Harper, son of Mrs. Lon Harper, 25 Plant avenue, Webster Groves, which was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock at First Congregational Church of Webster Groves, the Rev. George M. Gibson officiating. The bridal party assembled before a chancel decorated with palms and ferns to form a background for a large central basket of white spring flowers and side standards of white tapers. Besides the bride and bridegroom the party was composed of Miss Katherine Barnes, who was her sister's maid of honor; Edmund T. Allen, cousin of the bridegroom, best man; Richard Simcoke, Allan Caldwell, Ted Clayton, Morgan Moody, Frank Myers and Charles Babington, ushers.

The bride wore a white chiffon gown cut to a V in back and in front where it continued into a triangle of smocking, the streamers of a sash originating at either side of the triangle. Full puffed sleeves were shirred at the armhole and smocked above the elbow. Her veil, which was waist-length, fell from a coronet of lace, an heirloom in the Allen family, and she wore a strand of pearls, the bridegroom's gift, and carried a bouquet of white spring flowers. The maid of honor was gowned in turquoise blue chiffon cut similarly to the bride's dress, with a knife-pleated skirt, a high round shirred neckline and slit sleeves ending at the elbow. Vari-colored spring flowers were used for her bouquet and for a small hair ornament.

After a reception at the Barnes home for about 60 guests, Mr. Harper and his bride left for a brief honeymoon. On their return they will live at 305 Simmons avenue, Webster Groves.

The bride attended Washington University where she was elected president of the Women's Self-governing Association, and her husband is a graduate of Westminster College and the School of Business and Finance of Harvard University. His fraternity is Beta Theta Pi.

J. L. Boland Jr. and Nan McCreary Are Wed in Alabama

MOBILE, Ala., May 1.

AT NUPTUAL mass at 8:30 o'clock this morning at Spring Hill College chapel, Miss Nan McCreary, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Mervin McCreary of Spring Hill, a suburb of Mobile, became the bride of John L. Boland Jr., of St. Louis. Mr. Boland is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Boland, Warson road.

The Rev. A. B. Fox, S. J., officiated at the service performed before the altar decorated with shasta daisies, palms and ferns. Cathedral candles provided the illumination. Several organ numbers preceded the service.

Miss Estelle McCreary, as maid of honor, attended her sister and Miss Margaret Boland, sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Their chiffon gowns were made similarly with puffed sleeves, high necklines and full skirts, floor length. Miss McCreary's gown was yellow and the bridesmaid's, light ash blue. They each wore lace mitts and large leghorn hats trimmed in velvet ribbon in the tones of their gowns. Each carried a large bouquet of spring flowers.

The bride was escorted to the altar by her father. Her gown of pink chiffon was designed much like those of her attendants, with additional shirring at the neck and waist. Her large leghorn hat was adorned with pink ribbon and her flowers were white roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. Boland was attended by his brother, William, as best man and John Louis Dyer of New Orleans was groomsman. Harry Boland, another brother, and Bernard Keary were ushers.

Out-of-town guests included Mrs. Otis Mortimer Munroe of De Soto, Mo., grandmother of the bridegroom and her sister, Mrs. H. E. Miller, Festus, Mo., in addition to his family.

After the ceremony a small reception was held at the McCreary home for members of the bridal party and the two families. The young pair later departed on a wedding trip and will make their home in St. Louis.

The bride received her early education here and later attended Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., and Sophie Newcomb College in New Orleans.

The bridegroom, through his mother, the former Miss Margaret Munroe, is a great-grandson of the late Judge and Mrs. Robert A. Bakewell of St. Louis. He is a grandson of the late Mr. and Mrs. John L. Boland and a great-great-great-grandson of John Mullanphy, philanthropist. Mr. Boland received his early education at Chaminade and St. Louis University High School. His first college years were spent at Spring Hill College and he was graduated later from St. Louis University.

Invitations Received for May Fete.

Invitations have been received from the Women's Self-Government Association of Washington University for the annual May Fete of the university, to be held Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the court of McMillan Hall.

Spring Bridge Luncheon.

The Our Lady of Loretto Sodality will give its spring bridge luncheon tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, at Loretto Academy, 3407 Lafayette avenue. The proceeds will be used for charity activities.

WASHINGTON, May 1.

AMONG the first actions of former Secretary of State and Mrs. Henry L. Stinson when they returned to Woodley, their estate, was to look over their formal garden, at the side of the house shielded from the public view by tall trees and lilac bushes. Some years ago Mrs. Stinson drew a plan of the gardens and had them planted and both Secretary and Mrs. Stinson have gathered flowers and herbs from all over the world to plant in them.

Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of the Senator from Missouri, and her mother, Mrs. Wilbur Marsh, have built a rock garden on the slopes of the Clark home in Quebec street. It has a border of hyacinths in full bloom and other garden flowers already blooming and gay white and green chairs. Far down at the edge of their wooded hill runs a small brook, a favorite resort of the Clark twins, age 8, the edges of which Mrs. Clark is landscaping and where cherry and dogwood trees are blooming.

Mrs. Edward R. Finkensteadt of Georgetown specializes in iris.

Justice and Mrs. Owen Roberts, who live next door, take great pride in their gardens.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clement Watson of Silver Springs—she is a daughter of the late Senator Latimer of South Carolina—returned from Florida to get their early planting done and to inspect the lilac bushes of their home.

Mrs. Armistead Peters III likes the same old-fashioned flowers that have been a favorite in the Georgetown garden on the Peters estate and superintends the planting of them herself.

Mrs. Bernard B. Jones, also a garden farmer in her historic home Audley Farms, the former home of Nelly Custis in Virginia, specializes in snapdragons, verbenas and kindred flowers. Mrs. Hugh Campbell Wallace, Mrs. Truxton Beale, Mrs. George Barnett and the wife of Senator Borah also are gardening enthusiasts.

LADY GRANARD, who was Miss Beatrice Mills, daughter of the late Ogden Mills and sister of the former Secretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, will take in the coronation festivities of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth of England. Her husband, the Earl of Granard, is master of the horse under King George V, retired under King Edward VIII and was reinstated under the present monarch, King George VI.

May Day Brings Gay Parties in Washington

WASHINGTON, May 1.

MAY day brings many gay parties in Washington. Tonight Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert gave a dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury of Philadelphia at Villa Rosa, the house occupied by Mrs. Robert's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Walker. After dinner about 200 younger guests came for a dance given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. James Cromwell. Cromwell is Mrs. Stotesbury's son. He married Doris Duke.

Mme. Saito, wife of the Japanese Ambassador, at a small luncheon the other day, casually lifting between two chopsticks a piece of chicken from a little lacquer bowl, said: "This is real Japanese food, perhaps a little more than we have every day in Japan (the butler at that moment was placing before the guests the sixteenth full lacquer bowl), but it is the kind of food Japanese enjoys, the kind my husband and I have when we have no foreign guests."

When the guests were seated in the dining room of the Embassy, the table was bare except for a vase of roses and a small blue and white pitcher, a water glass, a wine glass and a serviette at each plate. The luncheon went through 20 dishes (seven courses) and finished with a bowl of rice and a cup of tea.

Burroughs School Mothers' Club Party

A LUNCHEON, style show and afternoon program will be given Wednesday by the Mothers' Club John Burroughs School for mothers and their daughters. Mrs. Fred Hume, 11 Carrswold, is general chairman and Mrs. Dwight D. Currie, 6235 Pershing avenue, is chairman of the program committee. Selections will be sung by the girls' glee club, a short play will be presented by members of the dramatic club, and a choric reading of three poems written by ninth grade girls will be given. The poems are by Miss Ann Van Dyke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Van Dyke, Warson road; Miss Lorraine Steiner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Steiner, 5601 Lindell boulevard, and Miss Patricia Gamble, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clark R. Gamble, 26 Wydown terrace.

Girls in the home economics classes will model their own handiwork in the style show.

The committees working with Mrs. Hume in planning the meeting are: Mrs. Charles D. DePew, Mrs. A. F. Utiger, Mrs. S. Watts Smyth, Mrs. Arthur F. Felker, Mrs. George Gill Jones, Mrs. John A. Latzer, Mrs. Miller Winston and Mrs. Chester H. Williamson, hospitality; Mrs. Francis T. Cutts, Mrs. J. B. Costen, Mrs. H. A. Osgood, Mrs. Gerard Kevil, Mrs. Clark R. Gamble and Mrs. I. D. Kline, decorations; Mrs. Dwight D. Currie, Mrs. Edwin S. Harrison and Miss Margaret Ewing, program; Mrs. Paul C. Simmons and Mrs. J. E. Stewart, menu; Mrs. A. M. Cornwell, Mrs. J. R. Van Dyke and Miss Amy Scholz, invitations.

Ruwitch-Renard Wedding At Westwood Club

top spilled ferns with fronds six feet in length, and tall arches of white lilacs stood on each side of the blue, flower-covered wall. The 50 out-of-town guests were seated with the other guests in long pew-like rows of white covered chairs, each woman wearing orchids sent her by Mr. Renard.

The bridal pair stood alone before an altar covered with Italian lace, while the silver goblet of sacramental red wine was in the center of two low silver candelabra. Rabbi Ferdinand Isserman and Rabbi Charles Schurman read the marriage service. Over the bride and bridegroom was the chuppah, an immense bell-shaped canopy made of asparagus fern. Strands of the fern connected it to the large chandeliers, and reached from them to the walls. Each of the seven stone arches in the lounge were covered with smilax, and between each archway stood a tree of arbiata, while additional trees filled each corner of the room.

The bride was gowned in white satin, made with a small round collar and long, close-fitting sleeves, tucked at the top into a shoulder fullness. Her veil fell from a coronet of lace, caught at the back by a band of orange blossoms, and she carried a narrow shower bouquet, with white orchids at the top blending into white lilacs.

Her attendants, also dressed in white, wore gowns alike, made of mousseline de soie in redingote style, while small taffeta bows trimmed the neckline and white taffeta in a leaf design was appliqued down the front and around the hem of the dress. Taffeta was also the foundation for their redingotes. In their hair they wore wreaths of white lilacs and carried shower bouquets of the same flowers.

Mrs. Renard was gowned in light blue crepe, made with sequins in a leaf design of a darker blue appliqued on the shoulders, and Mrs. Ruwitch wore a long, flowing gown of flowered chiffon. Each wore purple orchids.

After the wedding ceremony the bridal party and parents of the principals received guests before the bay window of the women's lounge, and here, too, white stock and snapdragons framed the background, while the walls and ceiling of the room were hidden by huckleberry foliage.

In the main dining room of the club, arbiata trees, 14 feet in height, stood between each of the 10 stone archways, and asparagus fern decorated lighted chandeliers. Here the 450 guests were seated at 40 tables. The tables were decorated in pastel spring flowers, one in yellow and white, another in blue and white, a third in pink and white, with no two floral pieces alike.

There were 3000 gardenias on the table at which the wedding party sat. Over them was suspended a replica of the wedding canopy large enough to cover the entire table and lined with white lilacs. The center decoration was a silver bowl filled with white orchids and snapdragon, encircled by eight small silver candelabra.

Trees of gardenias were surrounded by 12 small containers of gardenias and lilies of the valley and decorated with diminutive angels. Around these lay a wreath of gardenias.

Following supper, a bar was set up the length of the lounge, and space cleared for dancing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ruwitch have left for a wedding trip to California, where they will take a boat through the Panama Canal and expect to be gone a month. On their return they will make their home in Highland Park, Ill.

Ladies of Charity Reception.

The Ladies of Charity will give a reception for new members at its annual meeting, Sunday afternoon, May 16, at 2 o'clock, at Marillac Seminary, Normandy.

Dog Show Saturday At Villa Duchesne

THE Villa Duchesne Kennel Club will give its fourth annual Dog Show Saturday on the grounds of the Villa Duchesne School, Conway and Spoede roads, Clayton. Dogs of all breeds will be judged from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

For the first time luncheon will be served on the grounds. A large tent has been erected for the purpose. Mrs. Sol W. Gross, general chairman of the refreshment committee, will be assisted by Mrs. John L. Tierney, Mrs. Frank W. Corley, Mrs. June C. Gross, Mrs. Con P. Miss Molly Jauncey To Be Wed Next Month

PLANS for the wedding of Miss Molly Horsfall Jauncey, daughter of Prof. and Mrs. G. E. M. Jauncey, 702 Eastgate, and David Floyd Waugh have been completed. The wedding will take place at 10 o'clock the morning of June 5 at Graham Memorial Chapel on Washington University campus. Dr. W. B. Blakemore will perform the ceremony. The bridegroom-elect is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Waugh of New York, who will be here for the wedding.

Miss Betty Waugh, sister of the prospective bridegroom, of Austin, Tex., will be maid of honor and Miss Florence Whisnand and Miss Edmee Moellman have been asked to be bridesmaids. Lexie Jean Tolaman will be flower girl.

Dr. John Waugh of Austin will be best man for his brother and the ushers include Caswell Grave II, E. Dorsey Ruth, H. Kenneth Gayer and William Roa.

A breakfast at the Colonial Tea Room, to which the families and a few close friends will be invited, will follow the ceremony.

In addition to Mr. Waugh's parents and brother and sister, the out-of-town guests will include Dr. and Mrs. Leslie Jauncey of Washington, uncle and aunt of the bride-elect.

Both Miss Jauncey and her fiance are graduate assistants in the department of zoology at Washington University and are working for their masters' degree.

Phyllis Abeken Wed to W. F. Patzlaff

THE wedding of Miss Phyllis Willis Abeken, daughter of Commander Frederick G. Abeken, U. S. N., retired, and Mrs. Abeken, and Walter F. Patzlaff took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at Christ Church Cathedral. Dean Sidney Sweet officiated. Mr. Patzlaff, the son of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Patzlaff of Chicago, has been making his home at 6908 Marquette avenue.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore her traveling suit, an ensemble of thistle wool trimmed with a gray fox collar. Her hat was a small model of thistle straw trimmed with wine-toned leather flowers. She carried a bouquet of white snapdragon and pink roses.

Miss Marie Duebler was the bride's only attendant and Karl Kneis was best man for Mr. Patzlaff. The maid of honor wore a frock of printed chiffon white brightly colored flowers on a black background. She wore a large black straw hat and carried a bouquet of red roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. Patzlaff and his bride left by motor for Biloxi, Miss., where they will spend a month. His parents were here for the wedding.

The bride attended the Wilkes School for Girls, Newport, R. I., and Washington University where she became a member of Phi Mu sorority. Mr. Patzlaff attended the University of Chicago and Northwestern University. The pair will live in St. Louis.

Former St. Louisan Here.

Mrs. Jack Miller of Gary, Ind., is here visiting as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rothberg of the Embassy apartments. Mr. and Mrs. Rothberg have recently returned from a three months' vacation at Los Angeles, Cal.

Art Festival Of 8th District Clubs Friday

"TWO HUNDRED YEARS OF ART IN AMERICA," will be the theme of the annual art festival of the Eighth District, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, which will be held at the Coronado Hotel Friday. All the 94 clubs of the district will participate in some feature of the day's program. There will be 20 booths depicting various periods of history.

The festival will be formally opened at 10 a. m. with the presentation of Mrs. Frederick B. Hall, chairman of art of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, attended by the past presidents of the district and members of the district board.

Mrs. Edward P. Huck, chairman of art, will be in charge of a display featuring "The American Woman in Art."

Mrs. Abraham L. Brown, chairman of literature, will have a collection of valuable books, both old and new, including a complete set of McGuffey Readers, displayed in the "book bar."

Mrs. Ruth Kelso Renfrow, president of the district, will preside at a luncheon honoring the federated club presidents. On the tables will be a collection of dolls, the work of various clubs.

Following the luncheon Mrs. Irl L. Johnson, chairman of music, will present an original pageant, "Two Hundred Years of Music in America," in honor of the birthday of Francis Hopkinson, the first American composer. The pageant is in 10 episodes.

Hostesses for the art festival are as follows: Mrs. W. Clinton Taylor, chairman; Mrs. Charles W. Hay, co-chairman; Mrs. S. F. Burnett, Mrs. Walter Bailey, Mrs. Frank J. Bruno, Mrs. George N. Bishop, Mrs. Irene Chambers, Mrs. W. Purnell Diggs, Mrs. O. A. Doerman, Mrs. George A. Hanke, Mrs. J. H. Krabbe, Mrs. B. H. King, Mrs. C. W. Nystrom, Mrs. George Owen, Mrs. B. H. Prater, Mrs. Joseph Sheldon and Miss Jane Wood.

The following comprise the committees for the festival: Mrs. Edward J. Heiligers, place; Mrs. Foster Brown, chairman; Mrs. H. W. Schmale, Mrs. Robert Young and Mrs. W. A. Riddick, tickets and attendance; Mrs. A. S. Hinchey, Mrs. Arthur Krueger and Mrs. Clifford Zell, table decorations and dolls; Mrs. Jasper Blackburn, official hostess; Mrs. Upton S. VIRGINIA'S
BEAUTIFUL SHENANDOAH NATIONAL PARK

You can "get away from it all" — completely — here! Come! Enjoy this magnificent mountain park, dedicated last summer as a playground for the people of America. Here is the miracle roadway, "Skyline Drive"—that broad highway running along the very crest of the Blue Ridge. Far below, on one side, the blue and green patchwork that is the Shenandoah Valley . . . on the other, the Piedmont Plain! You wouldn't dream so vast an area of unspoiled natural grandeur existed next door to the bustling cities of the East and Middle West. Yet, there are six more parks in Virginia for your pleasure!

WISCONSIN

A model highway system with 80,000 miles of improved roads through a scenic wonderland, makes touring in Wisconsin a delightful experience.

And a modern system of traffic control adds greatly to your pleasure. Notable among Wisconsin highway regulations designed primarily for the convenience of the pleasure tourist is the ruling prohibiting trucks from main highways on week ends and holidays.

Smooth, safe, well-marked highways lead to all the thousands of vacation spots that make this state vacationland for hundreds of thousands of visitors each summer.

Let us be your host this summer. You'll like our grand country, our incomparable climate, our lakes and streams, woods and wild life, and our pleasant, friendly folks.

On purchase of any Electrical Appliance listed on reverse side
*Your Westinghouse Dealer

Grocers are making A SPECIAL SIX-CAN OFFER

Get your Libby's Tomato Juice and the certificate from your grocer tomorrow. Certificate good at any Westinghouse dealer's when presented with the labels from 6 cans of this juice.

LIBBY, McNeill & Libby wants you to get acquainted with the wonderful flavor of gentle press tomato juice now.

Westinghouse wants you to have now the electric appliance you've been wanting.

And so this marvelous arrangement has been made for you—

Simply go to your grocer and take advantage of his special six-can offer on Libby's Tomato Juice. He will give you FREE a certificate worth a whole dollar on the purchase price of any one of these Westinghouse Electric Appliances.

Just take that certificate and the labels from the six cans to your nearest Westinghouse dealer's to get your appliance for $1 less than its regular price!

There is no contest in this offer. No red-tape. No waiting.

While only one of the free certificates can be used toward the purchase of any one appliance, you can use another certificate on another appliance. And you will get a certificate worth $1 with each six-can purchase of Libby's gentle press Tomato Juice.

But this offer is good only till July 31, 1937.

Act now. You're going to like Libby's Tomato Juice better than any you ever tasted. Made from the finest red-ripe tomatoes by a patented gentle press method, it has a truly marvelous flavor. It is accepted by the Food Council of the American Medical Association; is pure, wholesome and rich in Vitamin C.

Try it now. Tear out this advertisement so you won't forget this amazing offer. Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago, Ill.

The control on this ADJUST-O-MATIC IRON gives correct temperature for any fabric. Fatigue-proof, air-cooled handle; easy-gliding ironing surface.

ST. CHARLES ITEMS

THE Country Club group is planning golf tournaments, inter-club, goat-kid and bogus money tourneys and a meet with Washington, Mo., to be scheduled soon. The Nature Study Club is making bird walks; the Garden Club of St. Charles has started flower-growing contests, and the river clubs along the Mississipipi are planning for the summer.

The Weber Lake Club, the largest and oldest of the river clubs in St. Charles, met Monday night and elected these officers: President, William H. Rechtern; vice-president, Francis B. Rauch; secretary-treasurer, Maurice Thro; directors, Oliver E. Denker, Oliver Heck, Edward Ahrens and Charles Rechtern. Another meeting is set for tomorrow night when the board will present its plans to the members.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weil have returned from a two-weeks' honeymoon in New York. They were entertained by Isadore Weil, a relative of the family. They are now at home at 7546 York drive, Clayton.

Lindenwood College will hold its May fete Friday afternoon. Miss Virginia Wilkerson, Hughesville, Mo., will be queen of the May. Dances will be directed by Miss Margaret Stookey. There will be hoop and scarf dances by a chorus and solo dances by Miss Helen Semprez, Miss Lois Penn, Miss Martha Anderson, Miss Charlotte Yokum, Miss Margaret Batholomew and Miss Molly Gerhart.

Mrs. Alfred H. Diekman, 1044 Madison street, and her daughter, Janet, will go to Pine Bluff, Ark., tomorrow to spend the summer. They will be joined later in the season by Mr. Diekman.

Miss Adele Spalding, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Spalding, 439 Lindenwood avenue, and Ralph Bredenbeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bredenbeck, 923 North Benton avenue, were married Thursday evening at the Lutheran Church, the Rev. Frederick Niedner officiating. Miss Ruth Houser was bridesmaid and Wilfred Bode best man. The bride wore a gray suit with blue accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. William H. Spreckelmeyer Jr., 1103 South Main street, have returned after two weeks with their daughter, Mrs. H. H. Kaveler, of Bartlesville, Ok.

Mr. and Mrs. Helmuth A. Meier, 121 North Fifth street, will leave Tuesday for Hamburg, Germany. They will be joined in Paris by Mr. Meier's uncle, August Winkle of St. Louis. They will return July 1.

Miss Helen Roffman of Worden, Ill., formerly of Normandy, daughter of H. F. Roffman, was married last Sunday afternoon to Victor H. Hemminghaus, son of Mrs. J. Hemminghaus, of 434 Georgia avenue, at the home of her aunt, Mrs. E. Picker, in Worden. The Rev. H. C. Claus of Zion Lutheran Church, Ferguson, officiated. The bride, who was unattended, wore a powder blue jacket frock with white accessories, and a corsage of iris. After the ceremony a supper was served to the immediate families, which included: Mrs. Mary Horn, grandmother of the groom, Dr. and Mrs. Earl Rice, Miss Augusta Roffman, all of St. Louis, and Kenneth Roffman, a student at Rolla, Mo. After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Hemminghaus will live at 4548 Flad avenue.

Ford Studebaker of 140 North Clay avenue left yesterday for Washington, where he has been transferred. Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Rice of Washington have taken the Studebaker home and Mrs. Studebaker and her daughter will stay with the Rice family until the close of school, when they will join Mr. Studebaker.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Seabor and family of 28 Almeda place will leave this week to spend the summer in Michigan.

Helene Rothschild Engaged to Marry

THE engagement of Miss Helene Lois Rothschild, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Aaron Rothschild, 6054 Westminster place, and Louis Wertheimer Jr., was announced yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Louis Shifrin, 9605 Lindell boulevard, in honor of Miss Edith Putzel of Cologne, Germany. Miss Putzel has been here as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Henry V. Putzel, 4463 Westminster place, and will return to Germany the first of July.

In keeping with recent labor trends, a pseudo striker, carrying a large umbrella with the words, "Unionized — Helene and Louis," painted on it, marched the hallway as the guests entered. The tea table, decorated with pink carnations and snapdragon, and purple iris, was presided over by Mrs. C. B. Levy, of Youngstown, O., a sister of Miss Rothschild; Miss Jane Wertheimer, a sister of the prospective bridegroom; Miss Elsa Logeman and Miss Louise Bretzfelder.

Miss Rothschild is a graduate of St. Joseph's Academy of Fontbonne College and of the St. Louis School of Fine Arts. Mr. Wertheimer is the son of Mrs. H. W. Wertheimer, 6132 Kingsbury avenue, and of Mr. Louis Wertheimer of Cincinnati, and the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Wertheimer of the Wiltshire apartments. He attended Country Day School and Washington University.

Plans for the wedding are still indefinite.

Spring Activities Set At Maryville College

AN ANNUAL spring meeting of the alumnae of Maryville College of the Sacred Heart will be held Wednesday, May 26, at the college, Meramec and Nebraska avenues. A general assembly meeting will be held at 11 o'clock at which classes of 1912 and 1927 and members of this year's graduating class will be honored.

The alumnae will be represented at the third biennial conference of the associated alumnae of the Sacred Heart at Detroit Tuesday, May 18, through Friday, May 21, by Miss Pauline Grindon. Mrs. Frank Corley and Miss Mary Ellen Murray will be alternates.

Mrs. O. P. J. Falk, president of the Maryville alumnae, and Miss Elizabeth Gratz Thomas, recording secretary of the associated alumnae, will also attend the conference.

The associated alumnae was organized in St. Louis by the Maryville College alumnae in 1933 with Mrs. William Julius Polk as its first president.

The Maryville College alumnae will give a prom Wednesday, May 12, at the Hotel Coronado. Mrs. O. P. J. Falk and Mrs. Joseph Gross have charge of the arrangements. The members of the executive committee, who will act as chaperons are: Mrs. Falk, Mrs. Frank Corley, Mrs. Malcolm McMenamy, Miss Pauline Grindon, Mrs. W. K. Holland, Mrs. Charles Huttig, Mrs. George Dyer, Mrs. John S. Johnson, Mrs. Charles O'Neal, Mrs. William Kineally, Mrs. E. L. Franklin and Mrs. Joseph Gross.

Mary Donley to Be Ursuline May Queen

MISS MARY VIRGINIA DONLEY, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo F. Donley, 2211 McLaren avenue, will be crowned May Queen tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Ursuline Academy May Day celebration on the campus of the school, 800 East Monroe avenue, Kirkwood.

Retiring queen is Miss Thelma Lyons, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Lyons, 7538 Lovella avenue, Richmond Heights. Miss Donley will be attended by Miss Ruth Roth, Miss Peggy Williams, Miss Lourine Preuss, Miss Dorothy Fagin, Miss Patricia Twombly, Miss Rita Deuser, Miss Aline Chapman and Miss Alice Sinclair. The daisy chain will be carried by Miss Virginia Richeman, Miss Jane Budge, Miss Marilyn Kilburg, Miss Alberta Schottel, Miss Mary Frances Picotte, Miss Bernadette Nuebner, Miss Edris Shea, Miss Anna Marie Kastner, Miss Mary Lee Catlett, Miss Madelyn Byrne, Miss Rosemary Murphy and Miss Dorothy Sackbauer.

New York's No. 1 Exotic, Valentia Schley, Designs Clothes for Celebrities

Dorothy Parker, Gladys Swarthout, and Lily Pons Among Those Who Wear Her Creations.

By Lucius Beebe

NEW, YORK, May 1.

IF YOU encounter, scorching along Front street, in Bermuda, Mrs. William Le Brot, dressed in a bicycling costume that makes her resemble nothing so much as a moyen-age princess riding a side saddle, or you meet Gloria Swanson at the Colony with a tuft of real, live carnations growing out of the top of her bonnet, or if Gladys Swarthout appears at a first night in such a mist of caramel-colored veils that it takes a full minute for her to unravel herself into her seat, you can be perfectly certain that Valentina Schley is responsible.

Because being herself Manhattan's number one, bar-none, exotic, Valentina naturally designs nine out of ten of the most fanciful costumes which the town's celebrites (who can afford them) sport for the envy of the public and the delight of the photographers. As a matter of record, Miss Swarthout was one of the first to turn herself over to Valentina, five or six years ago, and since then such notables as Lily Pons, Rosa Ponselle, Grace Moore, Laura Hope Crews, Dorothy Parker, Mrs. Harry Bull and Mrs. Joe Mielziner have joined her clientele. Musical celebrities, it seems, simply swoon over her designs.

Valentina's best advertising medium is herself, and the town's cafe dwellers have by now come to accept without comment her veils, two-foot headdresses, four-inch finger nails and cigarette tubes as long as yardsticks, although out-of-towners are likely to feel a trifle faint when they meet her on parade for the first time.

For, consciously, and with a vast deal of humor, she affects a sort of opium-dream version of the attire slinky Russian countesses and E. Phillips Oppenheim adventuresses are supposed to wear in their most seductive moments. Usually there is a towering arrangement of lace and veils on the head, a fantastic swirl of flaring skirts, accentuated bodices and trailing sleeves, and the whole overlaid with fathoms, nay, parasangs, of filmy stuff, tulle, silk, chiffon, malines or what not.

Among other things, Valentina drinks nothing but champagne, and frequently combs her alarming eyebrows in public with a platinum eyebrow comb to show that they are real, and not applied. Among her closest friends, with whom she is a perpetual first-nighter and diner at Jack and Charlie's, are the Frank Chapmans, Edna Chappell, the Grand Duchess Marie, Miss Moore and Miss Swanson, and get a table filled with Valentina, herself, and an assortment of Valentina patrons and you have something.

So numerous are the free-lance lensmen becoming in New York that they get under foot wherever there is anything of consequence going on and actually make it physically difficult for news photographers and reporters to do their work.

The candid madness even makes itself felt at presumably private affairs, such as church weddings, where amateurs shoulder their way around to get shots of folk who can't conceivably mean anything more to them than that they are social celebrities. It probably will end with some scheme of visual identification, more generally known than the police card accredited photographers now carry, and with amateurs being given the bum's rush wherever their intrusion on private premises is resented.

IF a parade were a feature of Russian Easter, which is celebrated this week end, the ranking White Russians of the town probably would not retain Elsa Maxwell to broadcast a description, for fear she might have the Czar himself in the middle of it. Miss Maxwell broadcast a colorful chronicle of the town's last Easter parade which included detailed descriptions of the costumes of such notables as Charlie Baskerville. George Jean Nathan and the Sigourney Thayers. Mr. Baskerville, it appears, stayed in bed all day until tea time Easter, suffering from a slight katzenjammer. Nathan assures this department that he had restrained himself—by staying indoors—from exhibiting the sartorial splendor with which Miss Maxwell found him eclipsing "us women." Mrs. Thayer had written the account of the Easter parade for her own paper, cataloguing those actually present from the recesses of a cruising taxi. Miss Maxwell was, of course, a victim of the weather, which kept promised celebrities off the avenue, and, anyway, she couldn't see out from the depths of the sound truck in which she was immured.

GRETTA PALMER remarked recently that if Jack Kriendler ever were embarrassed for money he could start selling off his stable of hunting waistcoats . . . Apropos of which Mrs. Henry Field, now in town, recalled the London youth who, passed by at a social gathing by a snooty oldster, said: "Nuts to you, sir: I've been cut by better men than cut your clothes" . . . Dwight Fiske doesn't know whether to be livid over being refused permission to sing in England or not . . . It cost him $12,000 not to, but it was almost priceless promotion to be branded by the British Commonwealth as too wickedly witty for the provincials in town for the coronation . . . Our correspondent, Harold Seton, the amateur of social curiosa, writes to say there's a five-and-ten-cent bar in Hollywood called the Woolworth Oasis, and why don't we have one in Manhattan? . . . Well, why?

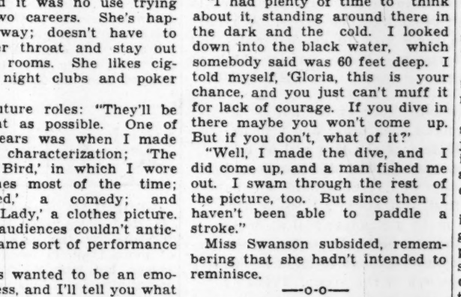
GLORIA SWANSON Wants to ACT HER AGE

RECENT PICTURE OF GLORIA SWANSON, READY FOR A FILM COME-BACK.

GLORIA HAD TO JUMP OFF A DOCK TO PERFORM A RESCUE—AND SHE COULDN'T SWIM A STROKE!



AS HEAD OF HER OWN COMPANY, MISS SWANSON MADE $750,000 WITH "SADIE THOMPSON."

IT WAS BACK IN THE EARLY TWENTIES THAT CECIL DE MILLE BEGAN TO GLAMORIZE MISS SWANSON WITH BIZARRE COSTUMES.

SHE WAS QUEEN OF HOLLYWOOD, BACK IN THE DE MILLE GLORIFICATION BATHTUB ERA.

HOLLYWOOD, May 1.

GLORIA SWANSON, a movie actress again, came down the wide staircase of the great hall of her old house. Watching her—a small, unimpressive figure in blue, walking briskly—you couldn't help thinking of other years and imagining other entrances made by the most glamorous and talked-about star of the egregious, profligate Hollywood of gilded legend.

Some of the legends are still bright for her, although she begs to be excused from reminiscence. Her interests are supposed to be in tomorrow and whatever new career lies ahead. And yet she does reminisce. . . .

She began it as soon as she had shaken hands and said hello. Miss Swanson admits being a deeply intuitive person, and proved it when she followed the reporter's glance and thoughts around the somber, paneled hall and the rooms beyond. She said, "It's too big now. I wish it would shrink. I must get a smaller place."

We went into a library where there was a wood fire. The actress continued:

"I've had it more than 14 years. When I was a kid getting started in the movies I lived in a Beverly Hills bungalow and passed this house every day. It had been built by King Gillette, the razor man. Those tall palms on the drive were tiny then. I would stop and look at this house because it was so big and grand and because I had heard it had an elevator.

"Well, I got the house. And I have been stuck in the elevator. Edmund Gwenn and Gladys Swarthout were in it too. It was ghastly, because I've got claustrophobia and I nearly went mad. Now I use the stairs."

On March 27, 1937, Miss Swanson was 39 years old. Which means that it has been a little more than 23 years since she appeared at the Essanay Studio on Argyle Street in Chicago and asked for a job. On that same day incidentally, another attractive applicant was Agnes Hinkle, who became Agnes Ayers. She's in Hollywood now, hitting the comeback trail at Paramount.

Miss Swanson hasn't appeared in a picture since 1934, and at that time her screen fortunes had been waning for two or three years.

"Sometimes it's hard to analyze what happens to careers," she said. "Perhaps they get too deeply in a groove. I was convinced that light things would be bad for me, so I turned down a number of offers.

"I was tired anyway, and determined not to go back to the screen. But two and a half years of rest made me a different person, and I had to be active again. Doing a play seemed like a good idea, so I went to New York.

"I might have spent the rest of my life quietly in Hollywood, but the minute I left here I was missed. There was talk of a contract with Universal. Then Metro wanted me. Meanwhile my stage plans were being delayed. And now I've got this contract with M-G-M for three pictures a year. My mind had been so set on not coming back that I feel a little foreign here now."

Miss Swanson looks about the same, though. Trim and obviously exceedingly well. Her face seems to have lost a shade of siren languor and to have gained in animation. She never has done anything about the mole on her chin. Her clothes, even at night clubs and plushy premieres, bear no suggestion of the Swanson brand of exoticism, circa 1922.

She said: "I never have lied about my age. In fact, I've stuck to the truth in self-defense.

"When an actress has been around for 20 years people get the idea that she spans a couple of generations. I catch 'em peeping at my back hair to see whether it's gray at the roots. I hear 'em say: 'Why, she was on the stage before she was in pictures. She must be well past 50!' "

She was not on the stage. Daughter of Capt. Joseph Swanson, of the Army Transport Service, Gloria lived at American and foreign military posts and had no theatrical experience other than amateur productions. She was 15 when she went to Essanay, 17 when she was the wife of Wallace Beery.

—o-o—

ALMOST the only thing she doesn't care to discuss is her personal romantic career, which to date includes four husbands, a title, four divorces, some extraneous romances and more newspaper linage than was accorded any other fluttering heart up to the time of the Simpson-Windsor affair. Her attitude is that everything has been said. And maybe it has.

Until a few months ago she was seen about a good deal with Herbert Marshall. That's all over, and Marshall has a diversity of feminine interests these days. Miss Swanson is concentrating on the building of a new career.

She has no thought of returning to dewy demoiselle roles. In the forthcoming "The Notorious Mazie Kenyon" (or maybe just "Mazie Kenyon"), Miss Swanson will be her age as a night club hostess who has a daughter. Miss Swanson also will sing. Her earliest ambition was to be an operatic star, and teachers she has had have told her that she might have realized it.

Her voice lessons were discontinued only a few months ago when she decided it was no use trying to have two careers. She's happier this way; doesn't have to pamper her throat and stay out of smoky rooms. She likes cigarets and night clubs and poker parties.

About future roles: "They'll be as different as possible. One of my best years was when I made 'Zaza,' a characterization; 'The Humming Bird,' in which I wore boy's clothes most of the time; 'Manhandled,' a comedy; and 'Laughing Lady,' a clothes picture. That way, audiences couldn't anticipate the same sort of performance each time.

"I always wanted to be an emotional actress, and I'll tell you what I did to become one. Bobby Vernon and I had been co-starred in Keystone comedies, and Mack Sennett said he'd make me a second Mabel Normand. I said, 'I don't want to be a second anybody. I want to wring people's hearts, and cry and die all over the place!' Of course that disgusted Sennett and he tore up my contract.

"Those were the days when everyone was typed. A man who wore a mustache in one picture was a villain for the rest of his life. And I was a comedienne.

"For three months I didn't work at all. Then I decided to go back to comedies, but on the Christie lot, where they also made serious pictures. That way I might get a break in a dramatic part.

"And I did. The very first day I began working in a silly little comedy I was taken out and sent to Jack Conway's office. He said they had a dramatic picture for me, and showed me the script. It was about a girl who jumped off docks and yachts and cliffs. He said, 'Of course, you can swim.'

"Now if there was one thing I couldn't do, that was it. I had always had a terrible dread of the water. But I said yes, I could swim.

"The picture, called 'Smoke,' started all right, and then I got a location call for 9 p. m. at the Wilmington docks. This was in the middle of February. The director said this was to be a scene where I rushed to the edge of the dock, tore off my evening gown and plunged in to rescue a would-be suicide.

"I had plenty of time to think about it, standing around there in the dark and the cold. I looked down into the black water, which somebody said was 60 feet deep. I told myself, 'Gloria, this is your chance, and you just can't muff it for lack of courage. If you dive in there maybe you won't come up. But if you don't, what of it?'

"Well, I made the dive, and I did come up, and a man fished me out. I swam through the rest of the picture, too. But since then I haven't been able to paddle a stroke."

Miss Swanson subsided, remembering that she hadn't intended to reminisce.

—o-o—

THERE was a sharp squall from upstairs, a child's yelp of protest. Miss Swanson laughed. "And only yesterday I was wishing I had another one!

"That's Bridget you hear. She's 5. There have been many tears today because she was bad. She'll be an actress, I know. Emotional and moody. She lies and steals and her mind works like an eel. They're nice children, though, the three of them."

Bridget is the daughter of Michael Farmer, Irish playboy who became Miss Swanson's fourth husband in 1931. For six years previously she had been the wife of James Henri la Baily de la Falaise, Marquis de la Coudraye. Before that, for five years, she was Mrs. Herbert Somborn. He was the man who had the idea of building a restaurant in the shape of a derby hat. Somborn, who died in 1930, was the father of Miss Swanson's first child, Gloria II. And during their marriage a boy, Joe, was adopted.

The actress isn't rich now, though she has had several fortunes since 1920, when her salary went to the stellar level of $3500 a week. That was the year of her first smash hit, "Male and Female," and the time when Cecil B. DeMille began to glamorize her with bizarre costumes and fantastic headdresses.

A Philosophy For Tackling Bitter World

"Many Trials in This Life Are Merely 'Mud on Your Heel.' "

By Elsie Robinson

MY FATHER said it to me. Whether he himself coined the phrase, I don't know. Whoever did, it's as fine a philosophy as I know for tackling this bitter world—so I'm passing it on.

I was still in the husk . . . one of those lackadaisical, dreamy youngsters, seeing all things through the glamor of my own ideals. Abruptly some petty, vicious act had roused me to a realization of reality. Frightened, furious, I had fled to my father—sobbed out my distress.

It wasn't fair . . . it was all a lie . . . there must be some terrible mistake! People wouldn't — couldn't—act like this!

Gently my father's big, work-scarred hand patted the tangled curls, the hot, tear-stained young face . . . drew me close until the clamor in me stilled. Then, in that quiet voice which pain had made so deeply understanding, he spoke:

"Never mind it, little girl; never mind it. Life is filled with such things. Ugly things. Unfair, stupid, malicious things, done by people with frightened hearts and sick minds. And there's nothing you can do to stop them. So don't waste your energy on them, child. Don't let them spoil your faith or cripple your courage. Pass them by . . . ignore them. Keep your chin up and your eyes on the stars . . . these things are mud on your heel!"

—o-o—

"MUD ON YOUR HEEL"—what wisdom lay in those four words! What perfect poise and power over petty circumstances. The man who spoke them had always been poor. His life was filled with the cruel and constant hardship of the penniless pioneer. I never saw him save in shabby clothes . . . smiling bravely through lips that were twisted by pain. He died young, without ever knowing common comfort, much less luxury. Always he had to battle.

But from that battle he had drawn a deep knowledge of values that was a greater heritage to me, his child, than a million in gold. Clearly he saw that there were only a few great, fine things that really counted. All other things were—MUD ON HIS HEEL! And he took them in his stride!

You'll save yourself many an hour of wasted worry and effort if you'll do the same, partner.

—o-o—

THAT BARBED retort that rankles like a poisoned arrow in your mind all day—

That sneering, belittling smile—

That sugar-coated flattery which is planned to make a fool of you—

That humiliating story which is told you "for your own good"—

That lying gossip, based on distorted truth, which spreads from whispering mouth to mouth—

That petty persecution from some nuisance nagger, who hopes to rouse your ire—

They're all the product of sick spirits, darkened by ignorance, jealousy, greed, envy and hate—as inevitable in our semi-savage state as the trash that litters the road on which you walk.

Don't waste your strength fighting them. Don't drain your heart grieving over them, or trying to explain them away. Don't let them spoil your faith or cripple your courage. Pass them by . . . ignore them . . . take them in your stride.

New Bridge Pads

The flower motif predominates in new tallies and score pads for spring bridge parties. All of the spring blossoms are represented in the designs so that the hostess may carry out the same theme in all of her decorations. A new set which suggests a novel color scheme displays dogwood blossoms on a brown background. White table ware, the beauty of antique brown furniture, a spray of dogwood as a centerpiece and the dogwood place cards would be an excellent beginning of a successful luncheon-bridge party.

Informal Linens

Linens for use during late spring and summer indicate by their splashy flower designs that they were meant for informality. Not only shade, but many are included in the pattern which are blocked by hand. Russian linens also are effective in bringing out the informal note and look especially well with pottery service. Japanese crepe in new designs and appliqued sets of Chinese grass linens do their part toward emphasizing the cosmopolitan trend of our table coverings this year.

MY OPINION

by Martha Carr

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM a reader of your column and never fail, even if it is late or I am tired; I get so much good and I often think that I am not the only one who finds it hard to live. I wrote you once before and have been looking to see if my letter was prined, but I guess it found its way to the waste-box.

I work at the laundry for a living. My husband is always out drinking and associating with the worst women. He is so cruel with me, I feel I have more than I can stand sometimes. My only hope is in God; but sometimes I even feel that He does not hear my prayers, or things would be different.

I saw in your column that a woman who was breaking up housekeeping would give away a canary. If she still has her bird and would give it to me, I would take good care of it and have a cage to put it in, and I would be glad to pay all charges. Please let me know. M. U.

You do not say how your first letter was signed and, for that reason, I am afraid I cannot recall it. However, I am sorry you received no answer and I shall be glad to have you write it again and send it to me. I should like to be able to give you good cheer at least, if you feel that I can.

Don't you think that, in your little town, you might have some older friend who may from his own observation realize that your husband is not being fair to you (or to himself, for that matter) and whose interest and admonition might help your husband to realize his mistakes and unkindness? Why not entrust your story to him or her and ask for help. Sometimes men are carried away by a thoughtless, foolish devotion to what they think is pleasure; especially, if you make the living too easy for him. Tell him that his desire for entertainment and pleasure should make him want to provide a little more in his home; and if you were not so fatigued from responsibility and work, you might make his life at home conform more to his wish for a pleasant atmosphere. Tell him to see a doctor and get his help in the resolution to let liquor alone; as that is probably the source of all your trouble.

I am sorry, but the canary you mention has been given away; but probably someone else will offer one and it could be shipped to you.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I WAS RATHER AMUSED when I read a letter in your column from "Human," wherein she said her associates in the office where she worked (?) did not pay much attention to her. That they never complimented her on her appearance, etc. Since when do people expect parlor manners in an office? We have one of that kind in an office where I am employed. This one is always using the rouge pot, the lipstick, the eyebrow pencil and what have you?

I would suggest to "Human" that if she wants attention she should pay more attention to her work and probably that would have the desired effect. INEZ.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A GIRL 13 years old, and would like to know about a problem which has recently confronted me. I am a lover of horses and have been going to a certain riding academy because it was close and convenient. A man there is my problem. The place is rather small and last night I was there with a group for a moonlight ride. When we returned I was taking off my horses bridal in the stall when this man came in and tried to kiss me. It upset me terribly. He couldn't have been in his right mind when it happened. Do you think it would be wise to go back to the stables and act as if nothing had ever happened? PUZZLED.

Tell your parents about this.

Dear Martha Carr:

THERE ARE four of us who have been good pals from the second grade in school and we are now going in the seventh. We have had a club for about three years and have recently initiated a new member. But since she has been in the club, she seems to be a wall-flower and just doesn't seem like one of us. We have concluded that we would like, in some way, to get her out. But of course we do not like to act rudely. Please do not think us sillies and answer us in the paper. THE FOUR.

When four girls have been together so long, it is natural that they should understand each other and also natural that a newcomer should feel, if she is a girl of nice feeling and the right rearing, just a little bit strange and backward. You know, perfectly well, that should she be as free as the rest, right at first, you would all resent her. It is good breeding to try to make a stranger feel at home and to show her more attention and be kinder to her in little ways, that you ought to be clever enough to think about, than with the "seasoned" members of the group. Probably as soon as you have done this and she feels more at home, she will not be such a "wall-flower." Perhaps, because of your lack of tact and understanding, she may think as little of you as you think of her; but is too polite to let you know it. Just try a little "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

My dear Mrs. Carr:

HERE IS my problem: I like a very nice boy, but my family is not so impressed with him. I really care a great deal for him, but you see, Mrs. Carr, he doesn't even know I'm living. He likes to joke with me and tease me, but he never gives me a serious thought when he is around me; he always fights with me. I'm not crazy to throw myself at his feet. What would you do in my place? Would you please print this letter before May 7, because I am leaving town then. LONESOME GAL.

Take a tip from the boy and let everything be a joke. Do not let him see that you are thinking seriously of him; of course make yourself as attractive as possible in neatness, in learning how to do things—especially summer sports, and sometimes invite him with others to your house for an evening of fun. Don't eye him every moment; show a little "extra-special" attention to someone else.

If you find this prescription does not help send me a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a folder on popularity. You may find better medicine, in that, than the mild stimulant I have given you.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

THE HEAVY CORONET IS CARRIED ON THE ARM, AS SHOWN AT LEFT, UNTIL A SIGNAL IS GIVEN TO PUT IT ON. THEN ALL PLACE THEIR CORONETS ON IN UNISON.

● A Headache All Titled Women Who Attend Coronation Must Face; the Real Story of Problems of a Peeress.

By URSULA PETRIE

CROWNING A LADY

LONDON, May 1.

GET there early and take a stand in the gutter near Westminster Abbey, if you want a really good view of the coronation doings. That's the advice of one peeress of the British Empire who remembers the ceremonies for George V in 1911, and she's really vexed, as she says, that she can't roost by the curb, too, instead of taking her hereditary seat inside the Abbey.

Second choice for sightseeing is a comfortable pew in the smoking loge of your neighborhood theater, according to this titled lady. You'll be a couple of days late on the occasion, but you can take the edge off your anxiety by reading the newspaper reports meanwhile. That's what she's going to do, for she'll be in such a state of collapse from sitting in the Abbey from 7 a. m. until after 1 p. m on the coronation day that the actual performance won't make sense to her.

"Blinking bore, you know, but it's the last of them and we might as well do it right."

First call for ushers in the Abbey is 5:30 a. m. From that time on, all lanes to the edifice will be clogged with beautiful women, for all the 7000 guests at the coronation, with the exception of the royal family, must be in their places by 9:30, at which time the doors will be locked and the sit-in goes on until royalty enters at 11 o'clock.

It may have been a bit too guttery in the days of prancing horses, but it's a goldfish globe display in this age of plate-glass limousines. Pungent remarks, critical in the extreme, are bandied along the curb. One New York matron who will be in that traffic jam was recalling the other day the candor of the curbside critics while her limousine idled alongside them on the day she waited to be presented. She was one of New York's class A debs that season, and used to flattery. But:

"Gor, what a beak! . . . Put up your tootsies; we wants to see yer shoes! . . . Ain't the feathers silly on an American?" were the kind of compliments she got.

Silly or not, every American who can wangle her way in will be wedged into the 15 inches of seat space allotted to her. That's all the room that commoners will get, although the lucky sit-downers who have a title are assured of 19 inches of space. By 6 o'clock at the latest they will be wiggling into their rigidly prescribed court dress, pulling on their shoulder-length white kid gloves, cursing the three ostrich tips that must be skewered somehow to the tops of their shingled heads. The hair-dressing must be done just the night before and many a peeress will sit up all night to spare her curls.

PROBABLY only a Hollywood actress can share with them the despondency that must come with arraying oneself along about milkman time in the most formal of evening toilettes ever yet conceived. The subtle difference is that the actress gets paid for her dressing up.

The British peeresses, however, will probably have to rise before dawn, for they have to put on a lot more clothes than the commoners. Duchess, Countess, Viscountess, Baroness—that's the way they rank, and the higher the rank the weightier the costume. Any gutter watcher can count the "powdering" on an ermine cape and call the lady's rank to win. Powdering, it seems, is merely ermine tails stuck on an ermine garment. The powdering is done in horizontal stripes known as bars, and a Duchess rates four stars—er, that is—bars. A Marchioness rates three and one-half; a Countess claims three; a Viscountess two and one-half, and a Baroness struggles along with only two bars. Red velvet trains, a "must" for peeress costumes, are two yards long for Duchesses, but they dwindle to one yard for Baronesses. An average costume weighs about 11 pounds.

Well, there's the train, and the waist-deep ermine cape over it. Then there's the kirtle, a sort of sleeveless red velvet dressing gown, hot as pepper, bound 'round with ermine. The kirtle opens in front over a white gown—and guess what? The peeresses are cheating this year, and wearing slips, not complete gowns, beneath their kirtles. Sh-h-h! It's a secret, but daring, my dear!

Every peeress must wear a tiara and long, white gloves. Also she must dangle on her arm a nice, heavy coronet, miniature replica of her husband's symbol of rank. It makes a handy cache for aspirin tablets and ham sandwiches during the long wait, and they do say that the ladies take full advantage of it.

Comes the great moment when the regal crown is held over the Queen's head, and the peeresses go into action with their coronets.

It is a tense moment, solemn as art, at that, for the coronets must be emptied of surreptitious sandwiches and whatnot, care must be taken not to knock the tiaras galley west, and it is simply not cricket to poke your elbows into the neighboring peeresses' eyes. It is one of the surest ways to lose your white aggie.

In all, a very expensive headache, but they all love it.

"GOR, WHAT A BEAK!"

Jobs That Begin After Forty -:- -:- By Marjorie Hillis

A POPULAR superstition, for a good many years, has been that jobs for the man or woman of more than 40 were alarmingly scarce, but now Walter B. Pitkin comes along and tells us that there is nothing in it—or, at least, not as much as we supposed—in another of his excellent books. This one is called "Careers After Forty," and it ought to be a comfort to a lot of people. I have no idea how many individuals past 40 are in need of careers, but my own mail makes me suspect that there are a good many, and I should think every one of them would find help in this volume.

In the first place, Pitkin backs up all his claims by dozens of actual cases, out of the hundreds he has investigated, who have started out on some new line and made it pay at an age when they once would have been thought old enough to be put away in mothballs. (One of Pitkin's examples began a new career at 82). Among the women, he cites a policewoman, a head of a school of beauty culture, a manufacturer, an actress, a city hostess, a model for stylish stouts and a banker—which ought to give you an idea of the variety of careers from which you can choose even if you start out in search of a job after you reach the age of discretion.

He also tells you in what types of jobs you can hope to do well, with experience or without it, and how to go about getting them. Among those suited to older women with no experience behind them he lists chaperons, house-mothers, hostesses, supervisors in institutions and professional shoppers. And with a little training or talent, he says you might run a day nursery, make candy, manage a highway stand, keep a small inn, do quality canning or take up country house demonstration.

Pitkin points out that most of the women who make the greatest successes in middle-aged careers think up their own jobs. They don't look for them in the help wanted columns; they think out what they can do best and how it can be applied profitably to their own locality. Women with this much ingenuity have created dozens of brand-new jobs that other women have profited by and will create dozens more.

There are, of course, handicaps after 40, as the author admits, but they can seem incidental compared to the opportunities. And Pitkin says not to be reticent about your age, but to talk about the advantages it gives you in wisdom and judgment and experience. (Go right ahead, Mr. Pitkin, but forgive me if I don't follow you in this one point).

I almost pitied the young when I finished this optimistic little opus. How can the poor things hope to get on with so much experienced competition let loose in the world?

—o-o—

THERE HAVE BEEN moments, during the past months, when I've almost wondered whether I wasn't going to be a little lonely, here in America, during the first part of May. So many people I've met seem to be playing with the idea of going to the coronation. (I've since noticed that nine-tenths of them weren't playing very hard). But lately, in counting my blessings, the fact that I was staying home from this spectacular event has loomed pretty large at the head of the list.

In the first place, I wouldn't see the coronation if I went. Westminster Abbey will be jammed to the roof with royalty and nobility and official envoys, and an unimportant commoner like me would be just one more in the crowd outside. And the crowd is going to be something that will make the handful that goes to a world series game seem like a drop in the bucket. Not only near the Abbey and along the line of march, but more or less all over London, and for a good many days, besides. It seems to me that it would take a stronger woman than I am to cope with it, and I suspect that it's going to be a lot more fun to curl up on the sofa at home, wearing a negligee and listening to the coronation goings-on over the radio. I don't mean to belittle all the pomp and fanfare, which will probably outdo anything that you or I shall ever see—but we do have some pretty good photographers and descriptive writers on our American newspapers, and I can't seem to get all worked up over the fact that I'm going to see all the splendor secondhand.

The truth is, I'm afraid, that I'm a comfort-loving creature and London is going to be a pretty uncomfortable place next month, if it isn't already. All of the good beds were engaged long ago, at a price far beyond my income. All of the restaurants will be so crowded that you'll have to wait and wait in line before you eat. All of the taxis will be taken when you want one. And you'll spend so much time standing, if you want to see half the things you came to see, that you will probably end up with a backache and a pair of ugly but sensible shoes.

On top of this, you'll pay and pay for all of the discomfort. Anybody not a millionaire who has gone from here to see the coronation has probably mortgaged the old homestead or will have to cable to relatives for more funds. And no matter what he pays, he'll work hard for his fun.

This is, of course, just sour grapes on my part, but it cheers me up a lot and I hope it will do the same for you.

Summer Frocks In Bright Colors

THOSE gay touches which distinguished the early spring costumes look decidedly drab in comparison to the striking colors appearing for summer wear. Frocks, especially, are becoming very colorful, the use of vivid flower designs on white background contributing to their arresting combinations.

Big, splashy flower prints such as were used in the winter resort collections for evening dresses are regarded as the smartest fabrics for afternoon frocks. Tones of bright blue, fuchsia, and violet are used often together and no combination could be more brilliant on a white background. Since the fabric is so striking the dresses are designed along simple lines. V-necklines, moderately flared skirts, short, puffed sleeves and sash belts are characteristic. An occasional dress adds a wide patent leather belt that is trimmed with flowers, these flowers repeating the most vivid tones of the fabric.

In contrast to the large, floral motifs are chiffons which present a quaint and dainty theme. Here the background usually is dark, such as navy blue, and the little nosegays are quite scattered. Many of these dresses are cut with accordion pleats or scattered knife pleats to supply skirt fullness while the blouses verge on the basque type. Frills appear at the V-shaped necklines and as edging for the short sleeves.

Match your gloves with your evening slippers, is the advice of Paris and it applies to the fabric as well as to the color. Bright shades of silk or linen may be employed to carry out this theme but the most striking results are achieved by the use of metallic finished leathers.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Dorothy Coleman

JUNE being just over the next turn in the calendar, jewelers' windows are a-glimmer with orange-blossom bands. Cosmetics ads are devoted to telling us how to be the bride of the century in this or that lipstick. And—

The lists of showers for brides-to-be grows longer and longer in the society columns. Can't anything be done to put an end to this cheapjohn way of colecting a trousseau and household equipment? It's one thing for the family to get together to help a bride outfit herself or her future home, but it's something else to expect her friends—and the same ones—to accept invitations for luncheons and teas day after day, on condition that they come with an offering.

One recent bride had given in her honor, by bridesmaids or other girlhood intimates, a run of afternoon and evening parties at which the price of admission was variously: a piece of silver, a flagon of perfume, lingeries, stockings, cosmetics, something for the kitchen—vegetable bins and electric clocks very acceptable; something for the bathroom; something practical — a nursing thermometer, stepladder or carpet sweeper would do; something for the pantry—tinned caviar or a batch of home-made marmalade; and something miscellaneous—field unlimited.

SOME girls decline these invitations when their purses simply can't stand the gaff. But if even 10 show up—and sometimes there are three times that number at a tea—you can see that the plunder piles up pretty fast. In fact, at several parties it has had to be transferred to the bride's home in more than one automobile. A room has been given over to it, where it has been unblushingly displayed along with nuptial contributions which the actual wedding invitations have precipitated.

All this is dandy for the bride, but think of her friends. Almost the same crowd is invited to every party, and every party costs at least a dollar. You may think you can get by with only a box of colored toothpicks for a cocktail shower. Then someone else turns up with a wooden pick stuck all over with the things. Your offering just doesn't make any splash at all.

Some of the brides simplify the selection of contributions by leaving lists of preferred articles with their favorite salespersons in the department stores. You know exactly what $5-an-ounce perfume will suit and what will not. You are informed that dark green suede gloves, size six-and-a-half, constitute the most serious gap in the bride's going-away outfit. After that kind of unmistakable steer, you would feel like a perfect piker appearing with a pair of yellow cotton mittens, washable.

In defense of some brides of recent months, let it be said that they protested this tacky custom from the start, and what showers were given for them were arranged by hostesses without the consent of the guest of honor.

If you don't actively resent being imposed upon, and continue to attend these come-with-a-present-and-not-a-two-bit-one parties, then when you are approaching the altar you probably feel justified in sponging the same way, remembering the presents you have given. And that just makes the circle more vicious.

—o-o—

A DIFFERENT FORM of pre-marital subsidy, above board and strictly on a cash basis, is that provided by a Jewish society in St. Louis, called Hachnosas Kalo. The name, taken from the Talmud, means, "Give to the bride."

Hachnosas Kalo provides funds to help finance the marriage of young persons who cannot make go of it without assistance. Most of the applications to the local society come from European countries. They must be signed by the rabbi of the town in which the prospective bride lives. The money is sent to the bride. It is not used for her dowry, but generally is turned over to the young man to help him get a start toward making a living. Frequently he buys merchandise with the funds and starts a business. Letters of thanks tell of whole families being started on the upward path by this boost to one member of it.

The organization is young and operates on a limited budget. Consequently, it can never send much to any one bride. But, hard as it is to realize, the want of just a few dollars can prevent a marriage, especially in the older countries among classes with simple needs. A few of the applications come from this country, some from within the city. There are those now contributing to the society who were once aided by it. No repayment of the money is expected; it is an outright gift.

The principle behind the work is an ethical one: the organization feels that it can best serve morality "by giving young people who wish to marry their chance for respectability." The dividends it expects are "the peace and dignity of the humblest" and a strengthening of the institution of marriage.

Summertime Knit Wools

By PRUNELLA WOOD

FOR the sports wardrobe of either the active fan or the decorative kibitzer, lightweight knit wools continue to hold their place as supremely comfortable and appropriate. Two-piece, one-piece, classically tailored or gracefully dressmakerish, they keep out the sun, let in the breeze and give complete freedom of action.

Styled on simple lines, wool jerseys, soft zephyrs in lacy construction, sheer angoras, sheer jacquard knits and countless novelty stitch treatments are interesting and becoming in solid tones or fascinating many-color combinations.

$15,000 Clothes Bill for Duchess

LONDON, May 1.

A BILL for $15,000 will be presented by Capt. Edward Henry Molyneux, British dress designer, to her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Kent, when this coronation season is ended. The bill represents the dozens of dresses, capes and coats for all occasions Capt. Molyneux has designed for the Duchess.

One is a white satin gown to be worn with a long coat in nightblue net, while another is a draped gown of satin-blue crepe, and still another is in flesh-pink marocain.

Princess Marina is particularly fond of printed fabrics, so that she has ordered a garden-party dress in black-and-white flowered crepe, with a line formed at neck and sleeves by the twisting of the material. A lemon-yellow sash falls to the hem, which just clears the instep.

Another afternoon ensemble, in black-and-white crepe-de-chine, is patterned with tea-pots in all shapes and sizes. One more incorporates a design of anchors in red-brick and ivory, while the skirt is full of gored pleats. Similar pleating appears in a sports outfit made in shades of brown and beige with buttons in copper.

She has also chosen a beige woolen material for an afternoon coat, with short silver-fox bordered sleeves. Morning outfits are simple and classical, including a dress in a warm yellow crepe with polka-dots, of which she is very fond, worn with a black jacket.

Molyneux, who first tried his hand at dressmaking just after the war, was at one time much disliked by London socialites, labeled an upstart.

So he opened in Paris, spread his establisments throughout France's Riviera, and became fashionable in London when he did the Duchess of Kent's wedding gown.

She has been going to him for her wardrobe for several years.

Rainbow Trimmings

Rainbow trimmings are striking additions to summer dance frocks. A sky blue morganza frock which serves as an effective background has the rainbow tints applied in the form of wide border at the bottom of the skirt and the top of the square-cut bodice. Taffeta ribbon in the various rainbow hues is used for the decoration, each row being placed so that it overlaps its neighbor.

Lace Popular In the Spring Style Picture

Every Formal Costume Must Have Touch of This Material.

WHEN women start wearing hosiery with lace heels and put lace hoods on their heads regardless of warm weather, then we can be certain of a lace revival.

Every formal costume—and some not so formal—must have its touch of lace to be in style now. A lace 'kerchief carried in the hand or a lace edging on a pocket may be sufficient but the chances are that most women will demand at least one entire lace frock.

The full length hooded cape of lace is one of the fashion fancies of the season. What it lacks in warmth it makes up for in style so that the wearer doesn't bother about cool nights or brisk spring breezes. This cape usually is donned over a chiffon or organza frock in a contrasting shade and frequently is of the chantilly texture.

—o-o—

INCRUSTATIONS and bandings of lace are striking additions to pastel chiffon frocks. One mode of combining the two consists of sleeves and side skirt sections of black lace in alliance with a foundation of pale pink chiffon. The redingote of lace over mousseline or chiffon is typical of the trend as is the use of vertical or horizontal black lace panels on white chiffon. "Cut out" details also may be arranged with excellent results and the woman who is interested in bringing an old frock up-to-date may be thankful for the revival of lace.

Filmy versions are the ones which are in favor this season while large, elaborate patterns are advantageous if lace trimmings are to be used. Medallions, band appliques and shaped bolero treatments are most successful when the very sheer laces are selected.

The vogue of lace is reflected also in blouses for wear with dressy silk suits, tiny jackets to accompany dark sheer frocks, trimmings for lingerie, and millinery. The large brimmed hat which is made entirely of lace to match a frock is a striking climax to a costume for a summer wedding while smaller hats of lace are worn with dinner dresses.

Colorful Housecoats

The vogue of colorful housecoats isn't limited to mothers and grown-up daughters. The little girl of 5 or 6 years also is permitted to participate in the fad. Children's departments show very swanky little coats that are made of colorful cottons. All of the garments are cut with flaring skirts that come to the floor and fitted waistlines. Pajama ensembles consisting of robes with matching pajamas likewise are patterned after the grown-up fashions and include terry cloth as well as lighter materials.

The house coat theme in women's styles begins to verge more on the feminine and there are many pastel printed robes as well as the dark ones for summer use. The lighter ones look little different from the flowered evening frocks designed along redingote lines, and if one is sufficiently brave the coat could go out dancing as well as look pretty around the house.

Summer Bags

Summer bags are being made of many novelty materials ranging from cottons to raffia, but the various versions of the straw themes are the most impressive for informal use. Lacquered varieties are numerous and appear in so many gay colors that it would be difficult to make a choice. Most of the bags are of the pouch type and have handles, although the devotees of the envelope bag may find something to please them. Composition frames are used most this year although the metal frame that is covered with patent leather contributes a contrast that is in keeping with the mode.

Paisley Prints

Anyone who thought the paisley printed fad would disappear with warm weather need only look at the pastel paisleys in the stores to change her mind. Delicate tones of green and blue are replacing the more vivid tones in the designing of the fabrics and backgrounds are lighter than before. Noted among the summery versions is one frock of crepe which has a putty-toned background on which is the paisley print in tones of soft greens and yellows. The shade of green is repeated in the trimming of the dress, there being bands of it at neckline and waistline.

Steak Broiler

A sizzling steak broiler is an inexpensive item which proves practical for everyday use. Not only does the steak cook quickly and well but the platter may be brought to the table without transferring the steak. Detachable wooden handles are part of the equipment of these metal pans which may be obtained in various sizes.

STYLE—SMILES -:- -:- -:- by Gretchen

"I'M A FIRM BELIEVER IN YOUNG MARRIAGES—AFTER ALL, IT TAKES A LONG TIME TO MAKE OVER A HUSBAND."

It may seem a bit giddy at first, but the idea grows on one just like her striped silk print. A draped bodice meets the level stripes diagonally, the skirt is box-pleated all around . . . Nothing is sweeter or more chic than the beige crepe her young pupil wears. Collar, cuffs and little hip pockets are trimmed with lace dyed in the same beige tone. And, though they're as traditionally modest as ever, the big bunch of violets at her waist are a sophisticated color contrast.

LOWER NECKLINES BRING DEMAND FOR NECKLACES

THE jewelers who have been sighing for the last few years about the high necklines and the resultant sad plight of necklaces at last have their reward for patient waiting. Lower necklines both for daytime and for evening have brought a demand for necklaces and now four out of every five or six women you see in every well-dressed crowd are wearing some type of jewelry around their necks.

The return of the necklace is only one of several jewelry revivals which contribute a glamour to spring clothes and convince us that we are in the midst of a lady-like, elegant era where fashions are concerned. Costly jewels are being worn more by those who can afford them but who kept their treasures hidden in their safety deposit boxes. Bright colored, inexpensive baubles are in demand for informal dress and everywhere there is an emphasis upon jeweled decoration.

Whether a woman spends much or little on her clothes she tries to achieve an effect of expensiveness—such an effect being accomplished more easily with the aid of costume jewelry. Crystal, prystal, metal and colorful glass are playing their part in the trend as are the costly diamonds, emeralds and rubies. Novelty is an asset in the choice of jewelry and means as much as price in the success of costume. Elaboration of design likewise is repeated in costly and popular priced lines.

NOTED AMONG the most interesting necklaces for spring and summer wear are the chain types which are wound around the neck three or four times before being clasped. The same chain theme is repeated in bracelets with a circle of jewels or their imitators going half way from the wrist to the elbow. Many pieces are designed so that they may be worn interchangeably—one time at the neckline and the next time on the wrist. The bead theme is most successful in the chain idea and is applied to rubies as well as to colorful glass, or glass and metal types.

The pendant theme is another which is gaining in popularity. It sometimes is developed with multiple spangles emanating from a circle of metal fastened around the neck, the beads being added at intervals in drop or spangle formation. Bracelets usually match so that the wearer has a complete ensemble. The single pendant idea also is being worn and often consists of a flower or leaf shaped pendant that is attached to a beaded necklace.

In contrast to the bead and pendant themes there is the vogue of massive jewelry which is indicated by wide bracelets, cabochon rings, heavy clips and large button earrings. The widest bracelets are shaped to the arm and look most spectacular when a band of metal such as platinum or silver is set with stones which form interesting designs. The cabochon rings are quite colorful as are the button earrings. Clips often match some other jewelry such as ring or bracelet and many are quite costly in appearance. It is illustrative of the current mode to find that the wide bracelets usually are worn without rings and that the wearing of earrings also eliminates the popularity of necklaces or hair ornaments.

LET ME SUGGEST

by Josephine Walter

MAYTIME may be the month that poets wax lyrical about and that gardeners look forward to during all the long, dreary winter but to some of us it's just moving time. And that's no fun at any time, whether there are snowflakes or apple blossoms floating in the air. Now, I'm not foolish enough to try and shed sweetness and light on this harrowing job and make it seem like a May day fete; all I'm trying to say is that there are certain ways of lessening the agony.

First of all, don't, if you can control your feelings, work yourself up for three weeks beforehand about the awful day ahead so that when it finally arrives you are in a regular "moving day mood" or, in other words, a frenzy. It's sort of like a visit to the dentist—bad at best and only made worse by contemplation. Also, contrary to general opinion, I think getting out the night before, either to a movie of a friend's for bridge, is better than sitting around looking at a denuded house and worrying about the morrow.

If you have children, foist them on some relative or kindly friend for the day if possible. I've often considered making my fortune by starting a parking nursery for moving mothers. If you have no way of getting rid of the dear little ones, be sure and leave out one or two of their most fascinating toys so that they can be put off in a corner, out of harm's way, with something to amuse themselves.

—o-o—

The first job and one of the most important, I think, is to analyze carefully the place you are moving into and try to decide how the furniture is to be arranged. Measure your wall spaces and the size of your furniture. Then, draw a rough floor plan of your new abode and sketch in each piece of furniture and label it. Then, if you cannot get to the new place as soon as the movers do you can either give them the sketch or whoever is stationed there so that the furniture will be correctly placed. Also, movers are usually paid by the hour and if you are undecided about where each piece is to go and have them shift it first to one place and then another, you will find that your move has cost a great deal more than you estimated.

● BY ALL MEANS, have your new home as clean and straight as possible the day before you move in. See that windows and floors have been washed up for it's much simpler to wipe up the few track marks that the movers may make than to try to clean all the floors after your furniture is in. See that your pantry and closet shelves are fixed with all the paper, oilcloth or edgings you intend to use. In fact, contrary to many persons' opinion, I believe in moving all china and glassware before moving day, with the exception of the few pieces you actually need. In this way, they can all be washed and correctly arranged on the shelves before you are too busy with the actual moving. And right after you have moved, there are so many things to be tended to such as clothes closets, the hanging of pictures and the arrangement of nicknacks, that it is a great relief to have something in order.

Be sure and make all your arrangements about such services as light, gas and phone long enough in advance so that these companies will have plenty of time to take care of it. No matter what your political theories about the public service companies, they are most obliging and helpful on moving day. In fact, if you mention that you have little ones to feed they will get downright tender-hearted.

—o-o—

● IN GETTING READY for the movers, here are a few suggestions for saving time and breakage. By all means, leave your clothes in their drawers and all letters and such in your desks. In between your clothing, pack all sorts of decorative objects, clocks and such, and if possible pack them in the piece of furniture that they normally stand on. In this way, the straightening out process is greatly simplified. Those things that you do pack in boxes and barrels, label carefully so that you won't put out Junior's dump truck when you are searching for the Sheffield tray.

AND FINALLY, greet the movers with a smile and then get out of their way. They are bonded men, have had long experience in their work and will move a piece just as carefully whether they personally think it is ready for the junk heap or you warn them that it used to belong to your great-aunt Tilly. And as they are about to go out the door with the last of your worldly possessions, miraculously produce a bottle of beer for each of them. They are big, strong men and one bottle of beer won't cause them to play football with your most prized antique.

Even if your house isn't completely settled and in apple-pie order, knock off work about 3:30 or 4 p. m. and go to the beauty parlor, even if you only get a manicure. Then, home and a hot bath and get into your nicest tea gown. And let your husband bring home the dinner from the corner delicatessen—after all he hasn't done a thing.

HOME WAS NEVER LIKE THIS—EVERYTHING WITHIN ARM'S REACH.

MERRILY THEY ROLL ALONG

BY ESTHER FOLEY

THE most surprising thing about a trailer kitchen is its size. It is a dollhouse kitchen, really, and it is a great surprise when it works. Somehow or other, one does not expect the cupboards to actually open, the kettle to boil, or the faucet to run. But it is no playhouse, and it can be made to be the most efficient, labor-saving little kitchen you were ever in.

Lift your arm, and your hand touches the ceiling. Stand at the stove, and you can reach, without moving, every utensil and every cupboard on the stove unit. Turn about face, and there is the sink unit, with dishes, canned goods, running water and the garbage bag within arm's reach. Home was never like this!

Because the kitchen is so little, it is exceptionally easy to be neat and orderly. It's an odd rule, but to be disorderly you have to have room. And here there is not one speck of excess space! You cannot save that dear little spider even if the handle has broken off. Out it goes. And out goes the good-looking pot holder, with the burnt corner. The kitchen holds just enough space to take care of today and tomorrow. Yesterday—and two years from now—have no place. Leave the great square kitchen at home, and roll along as comfortably as can be in a two-by-four.

Of course, the stove is most important. In a trailer, the kerosene stove has been found to be very practical. In our own case, we have found it easy to cook with kerosene. The chimneys on this particular stove are held in place, while the car is in motion, with a clamp which can be swung free when the stove is being used. We purchased a safety can of kerosene, filled up the tanks, loosened the clamp, and went to work. The chimneys tipped straight back, easily enough, exposing the flame spreader. This perforated piece of metal rests on the wick, and it must rest evenly or the flame is uneven and smoky. Turn up the wick until the edge just begins to show above the collar. Light it in two or three places, place the chimney firmly in position and wait until the light has spread around the wick before turning the flame up. The flame will be blue with pale yellow points, a bit of doubling upon washing, and can be regulated almost as easily as gas. Anything that can be prepared on top stove heat can be prepared here.

After each cooking period, we allowed the stove to cool, then tipped the chimney back, removed the flame spreader and wiped it free of any carbon with a piece of paper toweling. The wick can be cleaned the same way, and any ravelings cut off. A wick cleaner may be used, but a piece of paper does very well. This cleaning takes just a minute if done every day, and the stove will repay you by always being in good working order. It is not really messy to cook with kerosene, but it might get messy if you let the accumulation of carbon grow out of control.

The next important consideration is water supply. Most commercial trailers are equipped with a water tank, either beneath or behind the car. The faucet on the sink is really a suction pump, and so water is usually obtainable in sufficient quantities for cooking and cleaning. (The tanks vary in capacity from 20 to 50 gallons). The water in the tank should be used mainly as an emergency supply. If you are forced to park where the quality of the water is doubtful, save the water in the tank for drinking purposes and use the water taken from the brooks or wells for cooking purposes only, and be sure not to use a drop for any purpose until it has been boiled.

If you park where the water supply is good, drain and refill the tank, flushing it well if you have the time. It should be rinsed well anyway, at least twice a week. The purest water contains materials which settle out on standing, and the bottom of the tanks is apt to become slimy unless rinsed frequently.

With reasonable caution, none of the meals planned for our trailer kitchen should require more than three to four gallons of water. This includes vegetable preparation, cooking and dishwashing. We did maybe, if you are not accustomed to doing it in your own kitchen, it might shock you a little. One day last week we prepared the following menu in our Trailer Kitchen:

Pan fried loin pork chops
Creamed potatoes Buttered canned spinach
Rolls and butter
Spiced applesauce Cookies
Tea or coffee

We made the applesauce first so it could cool and develop flavor, and after we had washed the apples, we washed the potatoes in the same water. A rubber stop held the water in the little sink. Altogether we used less than a gallon in washing and cooking these two foods.

It is a saving in both time and energy if you can arrange to carry in your kitchen cupboards the canned goods, the seasonings, the staple vegetables (onions, potatoes, carrots), coffee, tea, etc., to supply your family for two weeks. With a good stock to back you, it is a simple thing to pick up eggs, milk, cream, butter, fresh green vegetables and baked goods, when you want them.

THE lack of an oven is no cause for worry. Many canned products were baked before canning, and retain the baked flavor even when reheated on top of the stove. As for cakes and hot biscuits—well—you are on a vacation! Use the bakeries. Maybe now and then a farmer's wife will sell a pie or a cake.

Before settling down to prepare any meal, fill up the 7-quart kettle with water and set it on the stove to heat. When it boils set the pot aside, covered, where you can keep an eye on it. Dip it up with a clean dipper for all cooking purposes, and use what is left for washing up. If you plan real trailer meals, the hot water should not be cold by the time dinner is over. With the few pots and pans that are allowed, and the plain, good food recommended, trailer meals should not cause many dishwashing groans.

Keeping down steps, work and trouble, while on a vacation tour, is a real business. Carefully plan each meal before you start to get it together. Then prepare the foods in sensible order. Wash up pots and pans, as you finish using them, and hang them up, out of the way. This is another trailer meal:

Pineapple Juice
Hamburg Patties
Creamed Cheese Macaroni
Buttered Carrots
Lettuce and Tomato Salad
Rolls
Stewed Fresh Prunes Cookies

We put the cans of pineapple juice and the prunes in the icebox. Even half an hour of cooling does good things to the flavor.

Then the carrots were washed and scraped and cut up on the little board that pulls out like a shelf on the stove unit. We put them on in boiling water.

The meat patties were next. Down from the little cupboard over the stove came the seasoning basket. The largest stew pan served as the bowl. In a minute the meat was seasoned, mixed with a little onion and a few bread crumbs and formed into patties. A bit of fat in the spider, and they were browning beside the bubbling carrots. The stew pan, used for mixing the meat, was washed and a can of creamed macaroni with cheese turned into it.

Pineapple juice (you may choose any fruit juice or lemonade) was poured, the table set, the prunes opened and served, the cookies placed on a plate, the coffee measured, and the salad prepared.

While the carrots were being drained and seasoned the macaroni was heated almost to the boiling point.

The plates were filled directly from the kitchen—saving serving dishes and consequent dishwashing.

Ways to Make Flaky Pastries

LEARN to make tarts that are fluffy and light right down to the final flake of their bottom crusts. The secret is in making the pastry properly and then putting in exactly the right filling at precisely the right time. Here's a pastry recipe that you can count on:

Flaky Pastry.
One and one-half cups flour
Three-fourths teaspoon salt
Two-third cup shortening
Ice water.

Sift flour and salt together. Cut in one-fourth cup shortening with two knives. Carefully add just enough water to hold dough together. Cover and chill. Roll in oblong shape on floured board. Spread with one-third the remaining shortening, fold to make three layers. Turn one-fourth way round. Repeat this rolling twice, spreading with shortening and folding. Cover and chill. Roll three-eighth of an inch thick. Cover outside of inverted muffin pans, prick with fork. Bake in hot oven until brown.

Fig Tarts.
Two cups figs, chopped
Two-thirds cup sugar
Two-thirds cup boiling water
One tablespoon lemon juice
One tablespoon butter.

Cook figs, sugar and water in double boiler until thick (six to eight minutes). Remove from stove, add lemon juice and butter. When cool fill tarts, top with whip cream.

Peach Tarts.
Two and one-half cup of cooked peaches or apricots
One and one-fourth tablespoons cornstarch
One tablespoon sugar
One tablespoon lemon juice
Two teaspoons butter
Few grains salt
One-fourth teaspoon almond extract.

Heavy Whipped Cream.

Drain peaches. To one cup of juice add the cornstarch and the sugar. Cook, stirring until clear and thick. Remove from heat, add lemon juice, butter, salt, almond extract. Add peaches, chill. Just before ready to serve fill tart shell and garnish with cream.

New Discovery In Propagation Of Plant Life

Horticultural Specialists Multiplying Plants With Chemical Regulators.

By Harriet W. Chandler

THE discovery of root hormones by the Boyce Thompson Institute promises to be a great boon to gardeners who are now thinking of increasing their stock of shrubs and perennials by cuttings. This new method will hasten and make more certain their plant propagation.

Whatever hormones may be, they are no longer confined to the medical laboratory where animal hormones have been talked of for several years. Horticultural specialists have taken them up and with new chemical regulators have been able to multiply plants more rapidly.

It seems that under natural conditions cuttings make their own hormones at the base of the cutting or on the stem, as in the case of the pussy willow, and where these accumulate roots are induced to form. It would also seem that some plants are able to make hormones more easily than others; for some root readily, some are slow, and still others will not root at all. With this new plant growth-stimulant, hormones develop rapidly and 100 per cent of the cuttings live now where before only one-half or one-third of that percentage grew.

THERE ARE already about 50 new chemical compounds which stimulate root growth, most of which have unpronouncable names. The few with proprietary trade names, short enough to cling to the customer's memory, bid fare to become popular as the garden public learns to use them. Unfortunately there is a headache for the amateur even in this promising advance, for there is no general rule for the use of these chemicals, and different plants require different treatment.

Rose cuttings are sensitive to any of these compounds and respond readily to a mild solution, while most evergreens require a much stronger solution to promote the same amount of root growth. However, it has been found that in the majority of cases where cuttings were soaked for 24 hours in one-third teaspoon, 20 drops, of any of the liquid forms of the chemicals, to a half glass of water, the treatment is effective.

IN MAKING the water solution do not add the concentrate to the water but pour the water over the chemical while stirring. Pour enough in a glass to cover the basal end of the cutting to a depth of about two inches. Make cuttings about six inches long where the one-year growth joins the two-year old wood. Several slips can be made from one rapidly growing cane without regard to a bud or node or even the old-fashioned slanting cut. Where the slips are taken from terminal growth, trim off all but three leaves. Stand the cuttings in the solution for 24 hours; then remove them and rinse off with clear water before planting.

A recommended rooting soil is one-half peat moss and one-half moderately coarse sand, but any method of planting slips which affords good enough drainage and aeration to keep the cutting in good condition, will do. Plant deep enough that one-half to three-quarters of the stem is buried. If there are leaves on the slip, bury to the first leaf. Press the soil fairly tight around the cutting and water thoroughly so the sand will come in close contact with the stem. Keep shaded as with all cuttings, and in an amazingly short time the little rooted plants will be ready for potting. Geraniums and heliotropes will have good roots in two weeks, when without the treatment they gave poorer roots after twice the time.

IT IS encouraging to know that the popular yellow roses, which have not lent themselves heretofore to propagation by cuttings, are being successfully slipped with this new treatment. Now as chrysanthemums and delphiniums begin to send up their young sprouts, break them off and give them a treatment, and you will soon have many where you had one before. And do not be afraid to break off any number of the young shoots, for the roots will continue to send up new ones to replace those snapped off. Soft wood cuttings of phlox, pyrethrum, genesta and any number of hardy perennials can now be slipped, and with the 24-hour treatment a goodly supply of a favorite flower can be multiplied to fill your garden.

Do not let your cuttings be crowded in the solution, do not expose them to direct sunlight during the treatment, and do not have the solution too strong. The sap is up and the season for cuttings is on. This is the latest theory, and every botanical garden in the country is experimenting with it, so why shouldn't you?

ROYAL CHINTZ

CHINTZ IN A CROWN AND PLUME DESIGN IN HONOR OF THE CORONATION. WE DOUBT IF KING GEORGE AND QUEEN ELIZABETH WOULD BE ABLE TO MAKE THE GRADE WITHOUT THE HELP OF ALL THE WALL PAPERS AND FABRICS THAT ARE COMING OUT IN THEIR HONOR.

MAKING AN INSPECTION OF TWO ENGLISH HOMES

By Elizabeth Boykin

VISITORS to the coronation will see the historic sights of London, past and present, will visit the ruins, exclaim at the palaces and look reverently at the poets' corner. But those who are fortunate enough to have a friend of a friend of a friend who will invite them to visit in a typical English home will have the best time.

One of our pleasantest afternoons in London we spent in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Milne, parents of Christopher Robin, whose Winnie the Pooh bear is as famous as the rest of the family.

Mrs. Milne is a tall, graceful woman with brown eyes and brown hair, and her drawing room is spacious and becoming to her. Yellow likes as sunny an effect as poswalls, because in foggy London she likes as sunny an effect as possible; then a blue-green rug, upholsteries in shades of beige to flame color, handsome painted cabinets from Venice, together with a collection of beautiful glass set on the edge of the leaded bay windows to catch and reflect sunlight.

Mrs. Milne's own bedroom has a golden glow about it. The furniture here is mostly Venetian, too, painted in dramatic floral designs, while the canopied bed has been made from gilded cornices and hung with gold satin. Now that may sound very Mae Westian in print, but actually it's quite distinguished and dignified as Mrs. Milne has decorated it. She has a decided flare for color. Mr. Milne's room is in blue and cream, quite austere by request.

—o-o—

THE MEN IN fancy dress who stand guard over the royal jewels in the Tower of London never impressed us so much, though we do think they're very decorative on a dingy street.

Because the English accent in living always pleased us a lot more. Several years ago we recollect taking pictures for an article about the home of the Earl and Countess of Iddesleigh, who live within a stone's throw of Westminster Abbey. They have a small compact old house in town—one room to the floor and five floors high—where they live with their two children.

The dining room, which you enter from the street, has pale walls and built-in cupboards in which Lady Iddesleigh keeps her fine collection of fans. Over the mantel there is a Dutch flower painting and a floral screen repeats the flower motif. The little sitting room adjoins in an alcove and contributes details of old gold in furniture coverings.

Upstairs Lady Iddesleigh's bedroom is quite spacious with the large old carved bed set in an alcove, leaving the floor space of the room proper very pleasantly open for a tea table in front of the fireplace and two easy chairs there.

On the floor above that is the nursery, while the top floor of the house is a library lined with books, highlighted with brasses and furnished with deeply comfortable furniture covered in deep rich blue.

A domestic, unpretentious establishment this, for a family of high rank. We like to think of them here in their pleasant little house raising a family like the rest of us—and in no grander a setting, although they maintain here an atmosphere of gracious dignity that gives an aura of glamour even to a very small a house. That's a point to think about in ordering our lives and manners, even in a simple setting.

It's interesting that the young couple living quietly in this small house will have important places in England's great coronation pageant.

—o-o—

THE TERM "living room" does its duty. It gave the family the freedom of the best room in the house. Remember when we first started speaking of the "living room," we had to pull up the window blinds and get some easy chairs in, for up to then the "front room" had been reserved for company best.

But we feel that liberties have been taken there. It's all very well to recognize that drawn blinds and horsehair were too stiff and formal and that the family should enjoy the best room in the house. On he other hand, an active family can wreak havoc in a room when they're turned loose in every day. And in the end they will appreciate having one civilized room in the house that they must learn to respect.

So we advocate using another room for the hard wear—the dining room perhaps or make a family sitting room out of the not-often-enough-used guest room.

Little Pat, who was ch tened Edna, is a Washington c who used to pirouette with late Father Hurney's St. Pat Players there. And a reedy she was, giving no promise of beauty that is now hers.

There are two yarns curr about Pat's future. One is that master, Fokine, will have her the head of a great ballet to t Europe. The other is that she lead an American ballet of 100 a tour of this country. Whiche way it falls, young Bowman's tistic future looks happy.

For years Patsy led the ball at the Roxy, being the protege of that redoubtable showman, an she was the ballerina of the Ra dio City Music Hall for a yea after it opened. A brilliant dancer owing to her constant study wit Fokine, she has probably spen years on her toes—and every day, rain or shine, a foot-doctor came backstage at the Music Hall to tend those expensive pinkies. I love the art of the classic ballet, and am glad that our own Pat is going to go all over the world on her toes, showing how it should be done!

GLAMORIZE YOUR HAIR STYLE

By ALICE WADE ROBINSON

IT'S smarter than ever to be more feminine than ever. So look to your hair! You'll need to this year of all years, with the new hats so small, so transparent, so romantic. You cannot expect to carry off whatever honors might be yours by carrying into the summer the hair-do you wore all winter. Summer 1937 simply will not let you. So part your hair differently; or wear bangs; or uncover your ears; or cut off that bun on the nape of your neck. Or—but there's an "or" for every reader. It comes down to this: No woman can be too versatile in trying out becoming hair styles. But full many a woman can be too backward for her own best if she sticks year in, year out, to the same old hair-comb.

Suppose you've lost your beau, or your job, or that money you invested in New Guinea—put a new face on life by dressing your hair a completely different way. Change your type; shift your mood, create a new personality—merely by altering your hair style. It's an excellent prescription for anyone who feels she's getting into a rut. It's a wise pick-me-up for the overly sensitive. It's a spurt toward enterprise for the shy who wish to oversome self-consciousness. All in all: it's good to do.

Nor should you have any trouble here in our country. Our hairdressers are especially accomplished. They have to be because we American women are becoming increasingly individualistic in our hair-dos. Not one of us wishes slavishly to copy anyone else. Our hair must express the type we have—for the time being—become. Unless our hairdresser is psychologist enough, imaginative enough and deft enough to gratify our demands, we go elsewhere. Thus we keep our hairdressers alert. They must "step on it" to keep up to date.

It was the hair style shown on this page which the young cinema actress, Marion Marsh, wears which sent me in search of the man who did it. I found him to be M. Louis, director of a school for hair styling —the American Hair Design Institute—which gives post-graduate courses in style trends to hairdressers from all over the country. Louis had just returned from Hollywood, where he had created coiffures for such stars as Luise Rainer, Fay Wray, Ann Sothern, Marian Marsh (as we have said) and that star-in-the-bud, young Margaret Tallichet. The drawings of hair styles which we show were especially fashioned for you by Louis—and are suitable in some adaptation or other to the basic type faces most readily identified as American.

Betty's coiffure is suitable for the face whose problem is a wide forehead and unusual width between the ears. Doris' exemplifies the pure oval-type face which is the experimental hairdresser's dream. It can wear becomingly the most bizarre or the simplest arrangement. Jean's hair style softens the angular lines of a rather long oval face, makes it appear plump, and the brushed-out curls above her ears balance the slimness of her lower face. Dorothy's coiffure is an adaptation of the popular pompadour roll. Its beauty lies in its utter simplicity, but, to carry it off well, it requires a clear, unlined, youthfully serene face.

Now for a special word on Marian Marsh's coiffure: Louis has given an illusion of height to that engaging young movie star. He has adapted for her the old mid-Victorian cascade. As a result, we have a kind of international style: Geisha girl above the forehead but at the nape of the neck the Flemish page boy turn-under. It is charming as is a coiffure for a special prom, but brushed out and redressed for daytime wear, the Geisha girl roll becomes a mid-Victorian puff while the page-boy turn-under remains unaltered.

In other words, in the hands of the right hairdresser, our hair-dos become adaptable. Merely by brushing and shaping our hair, we ought to be able to keep ourselves looking trim, chic, young between visits to the hairdresser. Brushing, as you know, softens a permanent wave, encourages naturally wavy hair to curl the more, and if your hair is as straight as a string, brushing adds to its luster, makes it easier to handle. So brush for hair cleanliness, for hair health and for hair wealth. It never passes a dividend.

FASHION FOR HAIR STYLES

"BE YOUR AGE" in your hair-do. Pin up those fluttering shoulder-length tresses or have them clipped. They're out!

—o-o—

HAIR is shorter. It shows the shape of your head—if that's an asset—or it's cut to camouflage shape—if that's your need.

—o-o—

EARS are in style. If you show a pair of well-shaped ones, you'll have the admiration of your friends.

—o-o—

THE "swept - off - the - forehead" look is new. Good both for day and evening wear. It's romantic and it's young.

GO EASY on hair ornaments in summer. Most of them belong in jewelry boxes. Even flowers are independable. They wilt—is there anything worse?

—o-o—

HAIR LINES are natural but trim. Watch the neckline for unbecoming fuzz. That's where fastidious care tells.

—o-o—

SUMMER'S hair styles are always less formalized than winter's. Curls are softer, less rigidly sculptured. Waves are shadowed rather than deeply indented. Hair ripples, swirls.

—o-o—

IF YOU wear spectacles, draw the hair off your face. Get height above the ears. Avoid the forehead "dip." Balance the weight of your coiffure against that of the glasses.

—o-o—

IF YOU have a widow's peak, rejoice. It's a gift most highly to be prized. Dress your hair to show it. Brush your hair zealously to guard it.

"Relieve the Pressure on Failing Pupil"

"Give Him Fewer and Easier Problems, With More Time for Play."

By Angelo Patri

"YOU don't mean to tell me that you have another note from the teacher? Poor in reading; weak in arithmetic. Well, you'll just have to stay in and study. That's all. Change your clothes and sit right down at that table and learn your lessons."

"I'm tired of lessons. Teacher kept me in all recess time. She made me write all my tables five times over. My head aches. I want to go out."

"If you want any playtime you'll have to learn your lessons. The teacher can give you extra work and you can do it Saturday, too. If you don't work you'll be left back. You have to study. I mean it."

It is bad enough for a child to fail in school. He wishes he could succeed and do as well and better than the others, but try as he will, he cannot come up to the standard. He feels bad about that. The other children will smile at him and call him Dummie and the like behind his back. They pass the word along from home to home until the whole community knows that Tommy Arkley doesn't know anything. Teacher said so.

—o-o—

ADDING TO HIS humiliation the punishment of more work which he cannot do, depriving him of fresh air and exercise which might make him more fit, sends him deeper into the Slough of Despond. He grows duller under the cure instead of brighter. Such treatment doubles his grief, insures his failure. It is unjust and it is cruel. One would not put a double load on a lame horse, but a failing child is the most overburdened of all the children.

Lessen the load of the failing child. Give him fewer and easier examples than those given the other children. Give him more time for play in the open air. Relieve the pressure of the classroom from him as often as possible. Give him five minutes of cordial, intelligent help every day. Praise him for what he can do, and do not punish him for what he cannot do. He will take heart and try again and succeed to a greater degree.

The first thing to do in helping a failing child is to build up his physical and mental health. Feed the failing child. Give him plenty of happy play with cheerful companions. See that he gets enough rest. Look him over every six months or oftener, and correct any defects that show. Poor vision, slight deafness, obstructed breathing passages, malnutrition, bad teeth, are all contributing causes to backwardness.

EQUALLY IMPORTANT is the mental health of the child. Good mental health is shown in the child's attitude. If he is mentally well he is happy. He wants to work. He accepts failures, faces them and overcomes them if aided a little by help and encouragement, particularly encouragement. Mental health is marked by an absence of all forms of fear such as meaningless movements, self-consciousness, stammering, retreating from difficulties, trifling complaints about illness, dread of the dark. Fear is an unmistakable symptom of poor mental health. How to cure it?

Physical and mental health are so closely bound together that it is not possible to treat one without treating the other. Building up sound physical health helps mental health. Teaching a child to think wholesomely, to feel himself adequate, appreciated, useful, will help his mental health and reflect strongly upon his physical condition. Build up the failing child and forget about the punishment drills.

METHOD OF PUTTING ON YOUR OWN 'ROYAL' PARTY

By Hazel Maxon

IF you've missed your sailing for the coronation on May 12—stage your own coronation party.

You can do it with dimes or dollars, depending on whether you want to entertain in-the-grand-manner with empire setting of gold damask, golden goblets—or whether you want to go in for Scottish-plaid gingham cloths on little tables, and clever dime store novelties that make for fun.

Buy the biggest white stationery you can find, splash it with gold-wax seal and write this invitation:

Coronation Party . . .
Don't Crown me for my rhyme,
But come next Friday evening
For a royal good time.

Hang a map on the wall in the hall labeled Coronation Route, but instead of the map of London showing the way of the big parade, make it a map of your house.

It's all spontaneous fun, of course, with no rehearsals and the sillier the better, so let each person draw to determine what office he will have in this auspicious ceremony. Place large paper envelopes on a table, each containing some paper costume-accessory to designate an office. A gold cap is labeled King, a very flower-bedecked Queen-Mary-type hat is labeled Queen, a dunce cap with bells attached is labeled Jester, high black-cardboard caps—busbies—with scarlet red crepe paper capes are labeled Guard, and a red cap is labeled King's Champion. You'll want guards, King's horses, pages, maids-in-waiting, etc.

Then on with the parade. . . . The leader blowing a tin horn, and carrying the route map; the King, Queen and royal family each carried "basket fashion" by two stalwart guards who will, no doubt, drop them occasionally en route, and the Victrola playing "The King's Horses and the King's Men!"

The destination is the living (coronation) room where great solemnity prevails—lighted candelabrum, royal purple cheesecloth hangings and gold paper crests on the chairs.

England's own coronation chair encloses the famous Stone of Destiny, on which is engraved: "If Fates go right, where'er this stone be found, the Scots shall monarchs of that realm be crowned." Legend says that it was used as a pillow by Jacob. A very "ancient" oak kitchen chair can be your coronation chair, with a rock beneath it. The King is seated, the Queen by his side, while maids-in-waiting, with their pages in attendance, line up alongside. The King is presented with the ring—from the dime store—and the crown (cut from an old derby). Everyone quaffs from a "golden" goblet or tin cup and "Speech!" completes the ceremony.

Be sure to plan amusing favors and contest fun during the feast. Kings by the score attend coronations. Construct several royal majesties using marshmallow heads, toothpick legs and gumdrop feet; dress them in crepe paper robes trimmed with cotton (for ermine). Give them cardboard crowns, of course, and set them in a "cabbage field." Since cabbages are a bit big for centerpieces, pile up "miniature cabbage" (Brussels sprouts).

FOR place card favors, put small crowns at each plate. You can make these crowns out of a strip of gilt cardboard, notched and pasted around a circle of yellow crepe paper. Put an elastic on each crown so it can be worn during the coronation feast. Under each "crown" place a slip of folded paper, on the outside of which is written Sh-h-h! Keep this under your hat! When the paper is secretly unfolded, it tells each guest what monarch he is to represent. Each must try to guess the identity of the others by the question-and-answer method. Seat Queen Bess next to Henry VIII, and pair off other partners to make for hilarious supper conversation.

Certain characteristics of each monarch, designated, might be listed on the folded paper. The person who can guess correctly the identity of the greatest number of monarchs, receives a prize—a bag of gold-wrapped candy.

The shops are full of new coronation games which can be played after the supper. There's London Bridge, a progressive bridge game in which familiar London characters are used; the Royal Family, another progressive bridge game, in which each player represents a member of the royal family and the tables are designated as The Palace, The Royal Gardens, etc. There are decks of cards in coronation tri-plume design, score pads, pencils and box and even coronation suede table covers and matching score pads and pencils.

CALLING ALL DOGS

YOUR puppy has just chewed a window curtain, and disemboweled your prettiest couch cushion. He is now under the bed, happily gnawing the toe off of one of your patent leather evening shoes. So you fall into a fury and perhaps give him an unmerciful beating, just as you did yesterday when he ripped the marabou fringe off your wife's pink satin negligee.

You don't stop to think he is teething (puppies are teething, off and on, till after their sixth month) and that his gums and all 42 embryo teeth are itching vehemently. He craves something to chew, something to tear, in the hope of easing the savage itch. This, far more than his natural babyish love of destructive mischief, is responsible. Scold him, if you like; even slap him over the loins with a loose-folded newspaper. But use common sense, too.

See that he is provided always with plenty of toys: rubber balls and rubber bones and knotted strips of canvas or of bed-ticking, anything that he can chew or rend. Almost always he will learn quickly to prefer these toys to the things he has no right to destroy. That is one of the most nearly certain cures for puppy mischief.

MANY YEARS AGO, I watched the judging of a class of six white collies at one of the big dogshows. My attention settled on a magnificent contestant, perfect in type and with pale blue eyes. At his handler's signals, he moved or posed with fine precision. He won the blue ribbon as best dog in his class and later the cup for best white collie in the show.

"I've got a great young dog here," his handler bragged to me as he left the ring.

"Yes," I agreed, "and the dog has a great handler. You've trained him to 'work on signal.' He has to. He can't hear your voice. He's stone deaf. And the American Kennel Club debars deaf dogs from the show-ring. Don't worry. I'm not going to blab."

After a blustering denial, the handler admitted to me at least that the collie had been stone deaf from birth. He asked how I had guessed it.

Nearly every snow-white and blue-eyed dog or cat I have seen was deaf. I was certain of this collie's deafness as soon as I saw the wordless signals.

I don't claim a white animal with light blue eyes is invariably deaf. But the exceptions are very few. I don't know why this should be. Do you? Have you read any proven scientific reason for it?

AESOP TELLS of the fox that sought to eat a cluster of grapes it could not reach. When I studied the queer ways of foxes I learned they are genuinely fond of grapes as well as of one or two other fruits, Aesop, as usual, was right.

For half a century I have watched the attitude of dogs toward grapes and fruits in general. My observations have brought me nothing conclusive. Here are the few meager results of my tabulations:

I have found more young dogs than mature dogs like to eat fruit, though some older canines like it, too. Out of a dozen young dogs, I have found sometimes that half of them enjoy raiding arbors and vines, daintily nibbling the ripe fruit from its stems. Others of them will not so much as taste the berries or grapes, even when handed singly to them.

Once in a while, though not often, pups and grown dogs will pick up ripe apples or pears from the ground, in orchards, and will eat them with greedy delight, and even will lap up orange juice. But, more often than not dogs won't willingly taste any kind of raw fruit.

Why do some dogs love apples and grapes and oranges and berries, while others won't eat them? Another of the million canine mysteries no human can explain!

Priceless Gems Will Be Worn At Coronation

LONDON, May 1.

IT would be impossible to calculate the total value of gems that will adorn the aristocratic ladies and gentlemen—and the not-so-aristocratic, as well—during the coronation season. The sum—apart from the priceless diamonds, sapphires, rubies, and emeralds of the Royal Family—will run into millions of dollars' worth.

One example of an enormous stone, the Jonker diamond, owned by the American, Harry Winston, suffices to give some idea of the money represented at a coronation function.

The Maharajah of Indore, who recently ordered a $75,000 railway carriage for private use, has just bought a piece of this huge diamond to be mounted in a ring. Winston had decided to have it cut up, as nobody wants to buy it as a single stone. Maharajah's little piece will weigh 29 carats, and will cost him $100,000.

Ciro's gave a party the other night to exhibit the largest collection of gems in Britain. Among the facts that were given out was the information that rubies are soaring to higher prices than ever before, owing to the fact that the ruby mines are, in most cases, worked out, or else are not being operated any longer. Even a millionaire would be lucky to find one over five carats these days, while to match a large ruby now is impossible.

TEMPTED To Lower The Boom

By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD, May 1.

THE "sound-fisherman" hovers behind the camera, operating the long boom from which dangles the microphone. He turns its ear from one player to another, lowers it, raises it, swings it about.

I've often wondered if he weren't tempted occasionally to use his boom for skull-cracking purposes on some temperamental actor. So I asked one. He chuckled, like a man who has found peace in tolerance and resignation, and said:

"Just at first, I used to think of that myself. I don't any more. I just do my job. If an actor gets mean, he's the one that suffers, not me. I just pay 'em no mind. When I leave the studio I'm through. Haven't seen a picture in months. I go home and read. . . ."

And that's what I call nice detachment.

But Ivy's real mission in life is effervescent humor and the helping of unknowns trying to beat the Hollywood game. She started this a long time ago when she was a concert dancer and a good one. She was dancing at a San Francisco club when the manager fired a young Italian dancer, insisting the boy had "nothing to offer."

Ivy had watched the women patrons of the night spot when the lad danced. That made her sure he did have something. She lent him train fare to Hollywood, where in time he made a bit of a name as Rudolph Valentino.

Constance Bennett, no so long ago, was one of those stars whose exit from a preview meant a grand rush of fans with autograph books. She always was in a great hurry. And just a spot disdainful, too.

The other evening, escorted by Gilbert Roland, who stopped frequently to sign, Miss Bennett sauntered slowly down the roped-off lane, smiling pleasantly, but the fans didn't recognize her. They were all eyes for Alice Faye. As far as I could follow her progress, none asked for a Bennett autograph.

It was wise Joan Crawford who said once: "The only time I'll ever worry about autograph-seekers is when they stop asking for mine."

● ADVANCE ITEM: The Theater Guild's program for next season tentatively includes Katharine Hepburn in "Jane Eyre," the Lunts in "Amphytrion," Sidney Howard's "Ghost of Yankee Doodle," Ben Hecht's "To Quito and Back," Roger Flud's "The King of the Mountains," Andred Birabeau's "Dame Nature" and Gaston Baty's "Madame Bovary." The schedule might be changed any time, though, to include something from Eugene O'Neill's promised series of plays.

—o-o—

WHEN A MOVIE STAR says she's going to retire, you can believe it. She'll retire that night—and in the morning she'll be up again and fussing about her movie future.

When she sets a limit on the number of years she'll stay in pictures, you can believe that, too. She'll stay that long—if she can—and then she'll start all over again.

Maureen O'Sullivan used to say that if she didn't get what she wanted out of pictures in a couple of years she would quit. She was going to quit, anyway, after she married. Well, she's married, and she's still making pictures.

—o-o—

Lola Lane "retired" to domesticity when she married Lew Ayres. They split, and Lola never liked domesticity, anyway. She's back, too.

Not long ago it was Ann Sothern. She was going to quit in just a few more years. She's married to Roger Pryor, the band leader, and it's to be domesticity. We'll have to see.

Arline Judge was going to quit, too. That was when she first married Wesley Ruggles. She was going to quit to have a baby. She did. But she returned. When she divorced Ruggles and married Dan Topping, she didn't say she was quitting pictures. She demanded a leave of absence from Twentieth Century, and she got it.

—o-o—

● MARY PICKFORD, unless she does something pretty soon, will be on the retired list. But Mary never said she was going to retire. That makes her almost unique.

Ann Harding once talked about leaving films and going back to the theater. She was going back to little Hedgerow where she started. But she changed her mind.

Stars who marry film executives frequently do retire permanently. Dorothy Jordan (Mrs. Merian Cooper) is one. Virginia Fox (Mrs. Darryl Zanuck) is another.

Retiring is, after all, a pretty costly business. A star with a big home, a swimming pool and staff of servants has to have a substantial pile before he can do it safely—if he expects to keep up the show.

Henry Hathaway, the director, was saying the other day he expected to quit pictures the minute he had $200,000, cold cash, stored away.

Mae West couldn't understand that. Mae wants millions. For Mae, ex-vaudevillian, there "just isn't too much money."

And that's how, talking turkey, Hollywood really feels about it.

—o-o—

REMINISENCE ITEM: Oddest interview I ever enjoyed (one of my first in Hollywood) was with Edmund Goulding, the director. Obligingly, while I sat there, he dictated the "interview" to his secretary. He spoke of himself in the third person and described—for me!—the versatile film talents of Edmund Goulding. In justice, to complete the picture, it should be reported that Goulding really is a smart fellow.

"NO, I Won't TALK"---Harpo Marx

By HARPO MARX

NEVER having learned to write, writing doesn't bother me, because I can't read, either.

And I won't talk!

That doesn't leave much to start with, hardly enough for an argument. But the Chinese say one picture is worth a thousand words, so a couple of gestures should be equal to 2000 words, more or less. I have been requested to tell all about myself, my wife and my brothers, Groucho and Chico, in a thousand or so words.

Words are a funny thing.

Whenever I demand to talk in a picture, Groucho and Chico use 2000 words just to say "No!"

On the other hand, many a man has gotten "life" for saying "Yes."

Everything in life is relative, and it's the lucky man who hasn't any.

To start at the beginning, I am the second from the left, having followed Chico, who was fifth from the right. Groucho showed in the Marx Stork Derby, Gummo was fourth and Zeppo trailed.

Hello, Eddie, Cantor!

We were all born in New York on the other side of Park avenue. The other side, that is, of town. And it's a big town.

Vital statistics: I weigh 140 pounds, am 5 feet, 7 inches tall, have brown eyes and hair, what's left of it, and 12 red wigs.

Like all successful men, I started at the bottom, but rose rapidly. I began my career running an elevator in New York's Hotel Savoy Plaza.

All of the Marx brothers were clever as boys. Chico started playing the piano when he was 7, and taught me "Love Me and the World Is Mine" and "Waltz Me Around Again, Willie," by the touch system. This proves that Chico is a very clever fellow, because I can still play the same two pieces.

About this time, Groucho learned to tap dance. We lived on the tenth floor of a swank apartment house, commonly known as a tenement. The floors were so thin, a tenant on the first floor complained that Groucho's tapping made his false teeth fall out.

Those days seem far away now. There were some minor tragedies, a few laughs and a lot of hard work for little pay. Whatever success we may have attained must be credited to our mother, Minna Marx. She found the small sums that paid for Chico's music lessons, toured the theatrical offices to find places for Groucho, and kept us together. If mother hadn't taken me out of the hotel, I might now be New York's oldest living elevator boy and bellhop.

What I learned in that hotel was pantomime, putting on an act to make a dime tipper raise the ante to 25 cents.

It isn't true that I have never spoken on the stage or screen. When I joined Groucho, Chico and Gummo in the act—"The Four Nightingales," it was titled—I spoke three lines. That is why my brothers always say "No!" when I ask for a voice. I muffed all three lines.

I did manage to sneak in a few words in our new picture, "A Day at the Races," but Groucho got out the shears and cut my voice off the sound track. I am the original voice on the cutting room floor.

Traveling in our early vaudeville days was a problem. We were getting $40 a week for the act and paid our own railway expenses. By talking falsetto and wearing knickers, Groucho got by for half fare almost to the day he was married.

But one day a conductor caught on.

"One of your BOYS, Mrs. Marx," he said, "is shaving in the washroom, and the nine-year-old one is smoking a cigar."

—o-o—

LATER, we got up an act, "Fun in Hi Skule," which proved very successful. I was the only one who could not talk, sing, dance or play an instrument. By that time, Chico was an expert on the piano, cornet and violin. Groucho played the guitar, mandolin, banjo and piano. That didn't leave much for me, so I selected the harp, partly for sentimental reasons. My grandmother had been a fine harpist. Since, I have added the flute and trombone to my accomplishments. At the time I started my lessons on the harp, I couldn't read a note of music, and still can't.

It was a mule that started us on our present type of comedy. Until that time, we had been fairly successful in vaudeville but never enjoyed the top spot on a bill. "Fun in Hi Skule" was more music than comedy and we played our parts fairly straight. During a performance in Nacogdoches, Texas, a mule started to kick out the side of the theater, and the audience left us to watch the fun. To hold the attention of those remaining, we started to burlesque our act, and the folks liked it.

We started adding lunatic gags to our act. I used to run out into the audience, grab a hat off a woman's head, put it on my own. This was always good for a laugh, until a woman in St. Louis stuck me with a hat pin. It was her new Easter bonnet. After that, we had a woman planted in the audience. It was safer.

These were years of struggle, doubt and debate. We couldn't see that we were getting anywhere in vaudeville, but each failure proved valuable experience. Groucho was doing considerable writing by this time. In 1917, we had our first story conferences, and on the backs of old laundry slips, bills and letters, produced a comedy titled, "Mr. Green's Reception."

We put it on ourselves. The play was bad, but the reception was worse. Again, we learned something. Comedy takes times to develop. It is 5 per cent inspiration and 95 per cent hard work. Comedy is intangible. One person laughs at a joke and another one won't. Even today, I can't tell whether or not a gag will go over, no matter how funny it may seem to me. For a picture like "A Day at the Races" or "A Night at the Opera," it takes a year to develop a script, including the time we spend previewing it before a visual audience on the road. Because timing is the essence of comedy we take from four to five months to film a picture after all the preparatory work is done.

After the flop of "Mr. Green's Reception" we went to war. It wasn't so hazardous. Groucho and Chico entertained at soldier camps. Gummo went into training at Great Lakes. I went overseas with the Seventh New York Regiment. Zeppo was too young for service.

The war gave us a breathing spell and a chance to readjust ourselves. When the war ended, Gummo was tired of vaudeville and went into business. He is now an actor's agent, with Zeppo.

While the four of us were at war, Mrs. Marx taught Zeppo to dance and sing. This was the beginning of the Four Marx Brothers and our first real break. We went into the Palace Theater with our act. The wilder the comedy, the better the audiences liked it. People wanted excitement. I gave it to them one evening by falling into the orchestra pit and ruining the cornet player's cornet. Groucho started wearing a grease-paint mustache and smoking cigars. Chico developed his Italian dialect. By this time, each of us was specializing.

We appreciated the possibility of motion pictures and I made one comedy, "Too Many Kisses." It may seem odd, but pantomime needs conversation to get over, unless you are a Charlie Chaplin, whom I consider not only the greatest pantomimist, but the greatest actor, of this day. I flopped badly.

With more confidence in ourselves, we decided, in 1923, to try a show of our own once more. A musical show, "The Thrill Girl," was failing. We took it over, renamed it, "I'll Say She Is," a popular catch phrase of the day. We took it to Chicago for a trial and the comedy ran for six months. It went for 48 weeks at the Casino on Broadway and was equally successful on the road. In all, the musical was good for two years.

"The Cocoanuts" and "Animal Crackers" followed, and they were two-year shows, too. In 1929 and 1930, we came to Hollywood and made both shows into pictures.

Our mother lived to see us make the success she had worked for and wanted for us. Nothing could have made us happier.

Today, we work together, and play separately. We never have any arguments, because we have always stood by a majority rule.

—o-o—

I HAVE almost used up my allotted words, but have left the best part for the last, my wife, Susan Fleming.

Perhaps my romance with Susan never reached the public eye, although it went on for five years, because it was all on my side.

We met at the Palace Theater, over the footlights, in a manner that was extremely embarrassing to Susan. She's never forgiven me. While doing a show, I spotted an attractive girl in the third row, and played to her. I pointed her out to Groucho and Chico, and they did the same. By this time, the audience had caught on, and Susan was the center of all eyes. At that time she was dancing in New York and had dropped in to see the show.

Later, while standing in front of the theater, Susan passed by, and a mutual friend introduced us. I pretended I had never seen her before. I had just returned from Russia and was wearing a Sovie. haircut, with bangs.

"You looked like the Wild Man from Borneo," she told me, afterwards.

Our next meeting was at a party in Hollywood. I changed the place cards so that I could sit by her, but again pretended we had never met.

After five years of this, Susan gave in and we were married. Remembering Groucho's marriage, when Chico and I threw rice at the minister, carried off the bride and ruined the wedding, Susan and I went as far away from Hollywood as we could get for our marriage.

That, in so many words, is the story of myself, my wife and my brothers, Groucho and Chico.

But I won't talk!

Date Loaf

One cup chopped dates.
One teaspoon soda.
One cup boiling water.
Two beaten eggs.
One-half cup nuts.
One-half cup sugar.
Three tablespoons shortening.
Two cups flour.
One teaspoon baking powder.
Combine soda and boiling water and pour over the chopped dates Stir until mushy. Allow it to cool. Beat the egg, add sugar and melted shortening. Sift the flour and baking powder three times, add alternately with the date mixture. Add chopped nuts with the last of the flour. Bake at 300 degrees until the loaf rises, then at 325 degrees until done—about one hour. Raisins, orange peel or candied cherries may be added if a richer loaf is desired.

Hay Fever in Spring Season; Its Treatment

Medical Care Should Certainly Begin in May, Says Doctor.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

THE NUMBER of persons who are subject to spring hay fever is far smaller than the number subject to the fall type. The season also is shorter, but they have the disadvantage that there is no climatic escape. In most cases the condition is due to the pollen of grasses, and these are so universally distributed in northern as well as southern climates, that even the barren places of the desert do not afford comfortable refuge for the victims.

It is my experience that it is easier to prevent seasonal attacks in these patients by pollen vaccines than it is the fall type. The only thing that prevents success is that the reactions may be more severe. They may be so severe as to cause the discontinuance of treatments. In those who are able to take the treatment without reaction, about 80 per cent can be controlled.

TREATMENT should certainly begin with the spring type in May and possibly in April. Or to put it another way, it should begin at least six weeks or a month before the time when experience has taught the patient the symptoms begin. Some doctors prefer to give preventive treatments all the year round, and think they have better results in this way.

Most of the spring hay fever, as I say, is due to the grasses, but some cases are due to trees. The earliest of these over most of the United States is the hazelnut, which in an ordinary season begins to shed pollen in March. In April the alder, cottonwood, birch, box elder, ironwood, hard maple, hackberry, oak, sycamore and ash may shed. Some of these go over into May, and in late May begin dock, red sorrel, rye and blue grass. In June the walnut and the chestnut come in, and dock, blue grass, orchard grass, lamb's quarter, wheat grass, timothy, red top grass, buckthorn, sedge, slough grass and sudan grass come in.

JUST WHY certain people should be sensitive to these particles that float in the air is a mystery that I don't think anybody has solved yet. There is some peculiar state of the body which makes the cells, particularly of the nose and eyes and bronchial tubes, react to these vegetable particles which are entirely inoffensive to other people.

Another peculiar thing is that during "the season" the hypersensitive person reacts to many foods which he can handle with perfect comfort the rest of the year. Thus on some fine spring morning a person who has been eating grapefruit for some months will have his usual morning dish of it and immediately come down with an attack of sneezing and coughing. It is a very disagreeable legacy to carry around, and those of us who do not have it should be very sympathetic with those who do.

SMART WOMEN PLAY UP GOOD POINTS OF BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

NO woman with sense enough to boil eggs need be told that she should play up her good points, soft pedal the poor ones. It's a game played by every member of the universal sisterhood. Eve knew all about it long before she started a flirtation with the serpent. Trust the frail sex for that.

If the fairy godmother has placed a pair of dimples in a pretty girl's cheeks you can bet she's going to do a lot of smiling. Life would have to be tragic to keep the dimpled ducky from laughing. She knows that her beauty wealth is made up of rare coin. She isn't going to forget it or fail to invest it.

—o-o—

LET US SAY that a young woman has beautiful long curly eyelashes. She can't pass a mirror without peeking into it. Though she may not be all coy or shy she has a way of keeping her eyelids lowered. Who wouldn't with eye frills long enough to rest upon the cheek? Long lashes impart an air of mystery. Let 'em flutter, do their worst. Let the men fall for them right and left.

If a man isn't aware of elements of charm it is fair play to call attention to them. Usually they spot them quickly enough. A single curl has been known to be so compelling as to inspire a proposal of marriage.

When a girl has pretty feet she knows the shoe situation forward and back. She can tell you every detail of the latest styles. She'll fling money for shoes if she has to make the old winter coat serve for another year. Who would say a word against that? Pretty feet may be consolation for a nose that is too long or freckles that stay home to roost.

Tricks are turned by the woman who has been told that she has a beautiful profile. You seldom meet her face to face. Her head is turned. She finds many reasons for giving you a side view, showing the perfectly modeled nose, the noble forehead, the piquant turn of the chin.

Tell women to play up their good points? Ha! Let's laugh.

—o-o—

WHEN A GIRL has beautiful hands everybody knows it. She lavishes upon them the most devoted attention. She learns to use them gracefully.

Somebody has said that no really beautiful woman ever lived. At the same time there are few that haven't some element of pulchritude. If they cherish that blessing, display it, they're just being smart. The wheels of life are oiled for good lookers. Certainly good looks make traveling from birthday to birthday an easier and pleasanter journey than if one were weighed down with beauty sorrows.

EN PLAY UP

too long or freckles that stay home to roost.

Tricks are turned by the woman who has been told that she has a beautiful profile. You seldom meet her face to face. Her head is turned. She finds many reasons for giving you a side view, showing the perfectly modeled nose, the noble forehead, the piquant turn of the chin.

Tell women to play up their good points? Ha! Let's laugh.

—o-o—

WHEN A GIRL has beautiful hands everybody knows it. She lavishes upon them the most devoted attention. She learns to use them gracefully.

Somebody has said that no really beautiful woman ever lived. At the same time there are few that haven't some element of pulchritude. If they cherish that blessing, display it, they're just being smart. The wheels of life are oiled for good lookers. Certainly good looks make traveling from birthday to birthday an easier and pleasanter journey than if one were weighed down with beauty sorrows.

Picture Stars Always Ready For Big Strike

Actors Put Fortunes Into Oil Wells, Mining Ventures, Race Horses and Poultry Ranches.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 1. HOLLYWOODITES, despite their generally huge salaries, are not content to let well enough alone financially. Just as the butcher and the baker hope to strike it rich—by investing in a gold mine or a sweeps ticket—so does the actor. Very few players put their money solely into securities returning a moderate interest.

Oil wells are reputed to have cost movie people many hard-earned pennies. Some have paid off, like the one Roscoe Karns helped to sink. He gave a friend some money, more as a favor than anything else, on "a sure thing." Much to Roscoe's surprise, it came in last week.

Folks were reminded that all is not gold when Al Jolson and Sid Grauman, the showman, went into court this week to explain their part in a South Dakota mining venture. A few months ago, Al was sure he was going to make millions.

Years ago, Noah Berry bought a mine up in the Mojave. The deposit is stuff that can be turned into soap. Only within the last few months has he received returns on his investment.

The amazing dividends paid by the Santa Anita racetrack probably had something to do with influencing Bing Crosby and a group of friends to build a track south of here, at Del Mar. Jack Warner, the producer, and Al Green, the director, are behind a move to establish another track.

Barbara Stanwyck and Mrs. Zeppo Marx are said to have invested nearly $300,000 in a ranch near here to breed horses. Robert Taylor also has acquired a ranch—also to raise horses. They expect a return on their money. And so does Irene Dunne, who with her husband and her brother, owns a patented construction device.

Into dog kennels and a turkey ranch, Charlie Ruggles put $50,000 of his movie money. Mae West backed her sister in a chop suey factory. Wallace Berry buys real estate.

MOVIE science progresses with new color process, said to be remarkably good considering its simplicity and cost. It is Keller-Dorian color, the invention of a Frenchman.

Black and white film, with a barrier coating of emulsion, is used in a regulation camera. A color filter is put over the lens. For projection, another filter is used on the projection machine. Other color processes require special cameras and film and the cost is much greater.

Grand National is interested and will release the first Keller-Dorian picture. It will be "Grand Canyon," on which filming already is under way.

Gregory Ratoff and his accent are leaving the screen, for a while at least, while they direct "Lancer Spy." The picture will introduce, in the leading roles, French Germaine Aussey (O-Say is how you say it) and George Sanders.

Ratoff had been given a "B" picture budget, but after he saw tests of his principals he convinced Darryl Zanuck of Twentieth Century that he really should have more money. Zanuck was won over and "Lancer Spy" was moved into the "A" classification.

'Romeo and Juliet' Settles Down to Place in History

By Colvin McPherson

IF SHAKESPEARE is loved best by those who know him best, then there is every reason for those who saw "Romeo and Juliet" on the screen last fall at the American Theater—and paid good money for it—to go back for the second or third view at popular prices, which is the arrangement Loew's has made for this instance. Here is a work whose fullness increases with each visit.

Having seen "Romeo and Juliet" at preview, at the American and again at Loew's, I confess I got more out of it the third time than the first, I found almost nothing irritating or tiresome through repetition and I am even ready to accept Leslie Howard as a pretty good Romeo after all, in his way.

As the years go by and the late Irving Thalberg's name is brought up again and again in connection with "Romeo and Juliet," it will be seen what essential refinement he, as producer, with George Cukor as director, and the scores of others who may legitimately take credit for the production, have given to it. The authenticity of setting, the richness of costume, the responsiveness of acting, the masterly staging, the skillful editing, the thrilling musical score may serve as standards.

The casting presents a case of star and leading man, rather than co-stars. Juliets always have been praised for their artfulness in looking young but Norma Shearer shows perfect schooling in the little tricks of shyness, innocence and recklessness that make Juliet a warm-blooded youngster. With the balcony scene there is a change of pace and Miss Shearer looks and acts decidedly ungirlish. But that may be Shakespeare's fault as much as hers.

The Bard, who was rather young when he wrote the scene, let himself go as he would not have later in life, and he might conceivably blush if he saw the scene performed by even the best actresses, including Miss Shearer. The soliloquy on the "shrieking mandrakes," as Juliet is about to take the sleeping potion, seems a little daft, too, but Miss Shearer's fears for Juliet make the lady quite pitiable and worthy of our sympathies.

If some persons are going to develop a strong attachment for this particular film—and I here submit my own testimonials—it will be because they delight not only in the loveliness of the romance and tragedy, in Juliet wide-eyed as she wanders away from her place in the dance, in the "Cukor qualities" that make for sentiment and tender feelings, but also in the many fine players—Leslie Howard, John Barrymore, Edna May Oliver, C. Aubrey Smith, Basil Rathbone, Violet Kemble Cooper and the others, because the Tschaikowsky music is an intensifying accompaniment and because there is some new wonder to be noted each time.

Even if "Romeo and Juliet" has had a previous engagement in the city and has been talked pretty thoroughly by all who discuss the current theater, it is only fair here to call attention to its excellence and to point to its place on the top pinnacle among cinema exhibits of the week.

To give its patrons short subject diversion, Loew's is showing Robert Benchley's "Romance of Digestion." With his matchless drollery, the humorist describes the trip the food takes from the teeth on, wanders into guidebook chatter; a discussion of plant management and fairy tales for the children.

Wailkiki Wedding.

BING CROSBY, Shirley Ross, Martha Raye and Bob Burns disport themselves amid the palms and on the blue waves of the Hawaiian Islands, in the Fox's "Waikiki Wedding." Six or seven songs, all done in the same style, and more hip-twisting than we have seen since the news-reels showed spring football training keep the dull intervals far enough apart.

The romantic events follow a diagram in which Crosby is a promotion man for a pineapple canning company, Bob Burns his loafing assistant, Miss Ross winner of a slogan contest and trip to Hawaii and Martha Raye the fourth at hearts, or Public Stenographer No. 1. Miss Ross, who is writing her adventures for the papers, isn't finding any and that's bad publicity for pineapples. Bing has to show her some excitement and he does, with several stunts that any 6-year-old moviegoer would be wise to.

The artificial thing turns out to be the real thing—there's the catch—and Bing has to do some fine inventing before he can persuade Shirley that she should stay in the island and go native with him. All of which proves that real love is the same anywhere and you don't have to think of the best 10 words about pineapples in order to avail yourself of it.

The songs in "Waikiki Wedding" are easy to listen to, but it's difficult to recall the names of particular ones, since they are all done with the wailing of guitars and gnashing of teeth, maybe, by citizens who can stand just so much of the stuff. The Hawaiian dances, staged in Hollywood style, give the right effect. One, a fast duet number done on top of several huge drums, is exciting and rhythmically worthy of Fred Astaire and Jessie Matthews.

Bob Burns and Martha Raye run out of things to do. Burns has a pig that is good for one hearty laugh. Miss Raye's one good scene takes place when she tries to get herself in the right mood to listen to serenading intended for Miss Ross. A trained chimpanzee is used to put some chuckles in another sequence.

"The Man Who Found Himself," down-under at the Fox, is notable only in that it introduces a new actress, Joan Fontaine, who is the sister of that fine young leading lady, Olivia de Havilland. Miss Fontaine, classified as a blonde, bears little resemblance to the other actress in the family. She needs a clearer diction, and more experience, of course, but in her vivacity and sincerity, shows her individual promise.

The story, about a young surgeon who got a bad break and left the profession for a while to go into aviation, can be seen at least three light beacons ahead. His Park avenue fiancee treats him badly, he sinks to the level of the hobo faster than the audience loses interest, and out in the golden West, meets the little inspiration who is going to give him his chance at everything again. A train wreck and not an airplane crash is the big finale number.

Internes Can't Take Money.

THE fondness for things medical, when the Hollywood lads start writing, is shown also in "Internes Can't Take Money," at the Ambassador, which is another of those screaming siren, miracle operation and errand of mercy affairs. Joel McCrea the young physician, Barbara Stanwyck the girl.

At some time in the past, Barbara has been involved in criminality, has spent two or three years in prison and is now out looking for her baby. Its father, a bank robber, is dead and out of the way of romance. Joel is working in the clinic at a big general hospital. Comes thither Barbara, with a burn on her arm and a sadness in her heart.

A gangster, Stanley Ridges, knows where the body—beg pardon, the baby—is hidden and won't tell except for a thousand dollars or Barbara. But Joel does a good turn for bookmaker Lloyd Nolan, and won't take pay. The books are cleared by having Nolan force Ridges to tell Joel, who can tell Barbara where the baby is. And they live happily ever after, although probably apart until he finishes his education. The performances of Ridges and Nolan, and an emergency operation in a saloon, are the best elements of the show.

"Let's Get Married," the comedy comrade of the main feature, is about a big politician, his daughter, a weather forecaster and an election. The mutual interest of Ralph Bellamy and Ida Lupino is the French harp, the crisis a big rain on election day.

Municipal Opera Names 39 Principals for Summer

Al Trahan, Margaret Daum, Eddie Foy Jr., Blanche Ring and Fritzi Scheff Among Newcomers Signed—Joseph Macaulay, Detmar Poppen, Leonard Ceeley Back.

A LIST of 39 singers, dancers and comedians signed by Municipal Opera for its nineteenth season in Forest Park, beginning Friday, June 4, was announced yesterday. All but 10 on the list are newcomers.

Casting for the season's repertory of 12 shows is not complete and the special operatic group for Smetana's comic opera, "The Bartered Bride" is yet to be assembled. Negotiations in that case, however, are under way with four Metropolitan singers.

Returning from various theatrical assignments will be Joseph Macaulay, Leonard Ceeley, John Sheehan, Robert Pitkin, Detmar Poppen, John Ehrle, Rosemary Deering and Helen Denizon, of former seasons.

Following the procedure of the last several years, casting has been made for the particular show rather than for the formation of a stock company to last all summer. Some principals will appear only one week, others several.

Al Trahan, whose only assignment is to "Louie the 14th," has been a star in every leading vaudeville theater in this country and Europe, billing himself as "the man who made the King laugh" after command performances before the late King George. He has been in the "Second Little Show" and Earl Carroll's "Vanities" on Broadway, and on the radio.

Foy is a member of the famous American vaudeville family and has had experience in such New York musical plays as Ziegfeld's "Show Girl," "The Cat and the Fiddle" and "At Home Abroad." He will appear in Victor Herbert's "The Fortune Teller."

Miss Daum will make her Metropolitan Opera debut in the second annual spring series there this month. She is heard each Sunday afternoon on a radio broadcast. She sang with the Civic Light Opera Co., at New York in the presentation of a group of Gilbert and Sullivan works, and for a solid year was a featured artist at the Radio City Music Hall, New York. The contralto played the leading feminine part in the New York musical offering, "Revenge With Music," and sang the lead in the American premiere of "Amelia al Ballo," under direction of Fritz Reiner, noted conductor, at Philadelphia and New York last month. She will be seen at the Forest Park theater in "Louie the 14th," "The Mikado," "The Prince of Pilsen," "The Pink Lady" and "Babes in Toyland."

Miss Olsen has appeared on the New York stage in "Follow Thru" and Earl Carroll's "Vanities." She will be seen in "Louie the 14th," "Salute to Spring," and "The Prince of Pilsen."

Evans is a star of concert, radio, operetta and oratorio fields. He was winner of the Atwater Kent Foundation several years ago, made his operatic debut in 1933 in Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde," with the Philadelphia Orchestra, has been soloist with symphony orchestras in this country and Canada, and guest artist on the radio. He will sing in "Louie the 14th," "The Prince of Pilsen," "Robin Hood" and "Wild Violets."

Jack Arthur, baritone of Sunday night radio programs, has been in "The Desert Song" and "Follow Thru" on the stage. Meader has been a leading tenor with the Metropolitan, appeared as soloist with principal American symphony orchestras and has appeared on the concert and opera stage in Europe. Two years ago he took a role in "The Taming of the Shrew," starring Lunt and Fontanne, and remained with the pair in "Idiot's Delight," which was seen at the American Theater here several weeks ago.

Miss Hopple has achieved distinction in concert, operatic and oratorio singing, and was a discovery of the late opera star, Mme. Schumann-Heink. In New York she has appeared in stage operetta productions, including the leading feminine roles in "Robin Hood," "Die Fledermaus," "The Vagabond King" and "La Vie Parisienne." She is cast for "Music in the Air," "The Mikado," "Robin Hood" and "Babes in Toyland."

Miss De Jarnette, a native of Akron, O., has been featured in recitals and radio work since her tenth birthday. Her first New York appearances took place on the concert stage two years ago, when she was 17. She will appear only in "Music in the Air."

Miss Carlson, comedienne, will come direct to St. Louis from London, to play in "Wild Violets," a Robert Stolz work. She created the role of Gretchen in Sigmund Romberg's "The Student Prince," and played the part for two consecutive years.

Miss Ring has been famous on the American stage for many years. She has been starred in more than 50 productions, including "No, No, Nanette," "Once in a Lifetime," "As You Were," "The Cradle Snatchers," "Strike Up the Band," "Stepping Sisters," "Dinner at Eight" and "De Luxe." She will be brought here to play the character role of Mme. Kirschner in "Music in the Air." Miss Scheff will come to the outdoor theater for the character comedy role of Mrs. Crocker in "The Prince of Pilsen." She also has long been a favorite of the stage.

Among the newcomers who have been signed for the entire season are Howard, Porterfield, Miss Urban, Parker, Miss Zaranova and Miss Dickey. Parker played at the Garden Theater here some years ago.

RADIO NEWS AND CURRENT PROGRAMS

Rudy Vallee's Program From London Thursday

KSD Star to Use British Cast —Sports Reviews by Roy Stockton on KSD.

THURSDAY night, Rudy Vallee will put on KSD and the WEAF network from London the first of two programs featuring British entertainers. He plans to act as master of ceremonies as in his regular broadcasts in this country. A substitute program, built around Edgar Bergon and several American stars, will be in readiness in the NBC New York studios for broadcasting in the event of failure of radio service from England.

Jack Benny expects to celebrate this afternoon his fifth anniversary as a radio comedian. He has deferred repetition of his most popular 1936 sketch until later in the season.

Jean Dickenson, the young Canadian coloratura soprano, is to become permanent woman soloist with Frank Munn in KSD's Album of Familiar Music concert tonight.

A new weekly Vocal Varieties program will start on KSD at 9 o'clock tonight. It will be one of the high grade transcriptions, and will feature singers and instrumentalists of note.

Here and There On the Air

Walter O'Keefe to Replace Fred Allen in July—Town Meeting of Air to Resume in Fall—One Man's Family Author to Broadcast Story of His Airplane Flight to China and Return.

By J. L. S.

A COMEDY variety Show, headed by Walter O'Keefe, is to replace Fred Allen's Town Hall Tonight on Wednesdays in July when KSD's comedian will start on a vacation.

The Town Meeting of the Air broadcasts, which were concluded last Friday night, will be resumed in the fall. Coming from the forum on issues of public concern, held in Town Hall, New York City, these programs, which have been broadcast on a non-commercial basis through cooperation between the NBC and the League for Political Education, have been accepted as among the most valuable of radio features. They have not been carried locally.

Definite assurance has been given to the writer by the NBC that the Toscanini concerts next winter will not be scheduled to conflict with those on Sunday by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra, and that every effort will be made to avoid conflict with other radio fine music features. No arrangements have been made as yet for the proposed radio series by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra. In this case, also, listeners are expressing hope that the CBS network will make the competition with the Toscanini concerts one of excellence, not of time scheduling.

Carleton E. Morse, author of KSD's Wednesday evening One Man's Family serial, plans to broadcast from the China Clipper on its flight to Hongkong three times this week. Morse, who will be the first person to make the round trip by air from this country to China, is to broadcast at 10:05 a. m. tomorrow from Manila; at the same time Tuesday from Hongkong, and at 3:45 p. m. Tuesday, May 11, from San Francisco. Tomorrow, he will describe the flight from San Francisco to Hawaii via the islands of Midway, Wake and Guam to the Philippines, and Tuesday, the jump from Manila to the Portuguese island of Macao and then to Hongkong.

The Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, which is well known to listeners, is waging a $300,000 expansion fund campaign, and plans to engage Otto Klemperer, Walter Damrosch, Georges Enesco, Eugene Goosens and Carlos Chavez as guest conductors. Antonio Modarelli, conductor of the orchestra, is to take the post of associate director.

Ann Harding of the movies, who is the wife of Werner Janssen, the symphony conductor, will be a guest on the program set for 6 p. m. next Sunday which will replace on KSD the Do You Want to Be an Actor series and will feature Janssen; Don Ameche, the radio and movie actor, who will be master of ceremonies, and Edgar Bergen, the ventriloquist.

Another addition to the cast of Ameche's show is Betty Jaynes, the 16-year-old opera and concert singer, who is to be its permanent featured singer.

John L. Lewis, president of the C I O, is to discuss the labor situation in an address on the CBS network the night of May 14.

Quality of NBC remote control broadcasts will be raised to the level of studio programs this week when 70 field amplifiers of a new type will replace those hitherto used with portable apparatus. The amplifiers, which will be distributed throughout the country, are said to insure virtually perfect fidelity, covering a tone range of 30 to 15,000 cycles, to provide twice as much gain as the old ones, and to weigh 30 pounds less.

Carrie Jacobs Bond, the 75-year-old composer, has been auditioning a radio show built around some of her best known songs. . . . Robert Simmons, the Missouri tenor of the KSD Friday night concerts featuring Lucille Manners, has been voice and screen tested by a movie producer.

William Miller, top tenor of the quartet which sings in KSD's Friday night Frank Black concert, will be soloist with the Chicago Symphony Orchestra May 8 in the music festival at Mount Vernon, Ia. . . . Given full charge of his Monday night program, Richard Himber will feature guest stars in shows written around them. He has billed Howard and Shelton for tomorrow and James Melton, tenor of KSD's Saturday Night Party, for May 10. . . . Kate Smith began her seventh year in radio the past week. . . . Grace Moore's Saturday night concerts will come from Hollywood.

COMING ON KSD

WERNER JANNSEN, THE SYMPHONY CONDUCTOR, WHO WILL HAVE A LEADING PART IN THE PROGRAMS HEADED BY DON AMECHE AND EDGAR BERGEN, THE VENTRILOQUIST, WHICH NEXT SUNDAY WILL REPLACE THE "DO YOU WANT TO BE AN ACTOR?" SERIES ON KSD.

Wednesday Billing.

WEDNESDAY programs will include: a talk by Yvon Delbos, Minister of Foreign Affairs, speaking in Paris, at 3:45 p. m. on the WJZ net; the first appearance of the President's daughter, Mrs. Anna Eleanor Roosevelt Boettiger of Seattle, on her mother's radio program at 5:15 p. m.; a trumpet solo by W. C. Handy, composer of "St. Louis Blues," during the Cavalcade program dramatizing the development of Negro folk song; singing by Lily Pons of "The Last Rose of Summer"; Jessica Dragonette in "The Merry Widow."

Scheduled Friday.

A DESCRIPTION of the launching of the destroyers, Jarvis and Patterson, at the Puget Sound Navy Yard at Bremerton, Wash., will be carried at 1:35 p. m. Thursday by the CBS chain.

A series of spelling bee broadcasts will replace the Town Meeting of the Air at 7:30 p. m. Thursday on the WJZ net. The first will be a match between girls from Wellesley College and men students of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Thomas L. Thomas, the baritone born in Wales, who recently won first place for men in KSD's Metropolitan Opera auditions and an opera contract, sang 90 auditions for radio program directors and sponsors before he got his chance. His story will be dramatized by Floyd Gibbons Thursday night.

High School Debate.

THE U. S. Marine Band concerts are not set for 10 a. m. Fridays on the WJZ net.

The finals of the National Championship Debate for high schools, the climax of a progressive elimination contest involving more than 7000 schools, will be broadcast from St. Louis from 2 to 4 p. m. Friday on the CBS net.

Jerry Cooper will take over the Hollywood Hotel program as master of ceremonies Friday night.

Kentucky Derby.

CLEM McCARTHY, the NBC turf expert, will describe the running of the Kentucky derby in a broadcast Saturday scheduled to begin at 4:15 p. m. on the WJZ net and KWK.

Gypsy songs and music performed by leading artists of the race will be heard in a broadcast from Budapest at 11:30 a. m. next Saturday on the WEAF net and KSD. The program will celebrate the 500th anniversary of the death of King Siegmund, who granted the Gypsie a permanent asylum in Hungary.

Gertrude Niessen will be Ed Wynn's guest Saturday night when the comedian is scheduled to conclude his current series.

The opening of the Mellon Institute for Industrial Research in Pittsburgh will be covered in three broadcasts on the WJZ net—at 12:30 noon Wednesday, at the same time Thursday and at 10:30 a. m. Friday. Speakers will include Andrew W. Mellon and Richard K. Mellon, representing the founders, and scientists and educators of note.

From Kentucky Hills.

ANTONIO MODARELLI, conductor of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, will be the Magazine of the Air speaker tomorrow.

Because of the isolation of the region, portable microphones and amplifiers will be taken into the Lott Creek district, in the Southeastern Kentucky hills, for a CBS net broadcast at 2:45 tomorrow descriptive of mountain life. The program will come from the community listening center, one of 25 established in the hills country by the radio department of the University of Kentucky to enable mountain folk to hear educational programs.

Claudette Colbert, Joel McCrea and Walter Pidgeon of the movies, will be featured in a Radio Theater performance of "Hands Across the Table" tomorrow.

An adaptation of William Maxwell's novel, "They Came Like Swallows," will be performed at 6 p. m. tomorrow on the WJZ net. An innovation will be the use of two voices for one character in such a way as to maintain the illusion of a single personality. The two voices are essentially alike, but differ slightly in tone and pitch. The struggle to obtain the constitutional right of habeas corpus will be dramatized in the Let Freedom Ring period at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow on the CBS net.

A new KWK program at 10 a. m. Monday through Saturday is called the Home Makers' Music Hall. It features Clark Morgan, organist; Allan Dale, singer, and an instrumental trio.

For Tuesday.

"HAVE YOU HEARD?" the United States Department of Education program, now is carried by KWK at 1:45 p. m. Tuesdays.

Lord Hailey, formerly governor of the Punjab, will speak on "The King of England as Emperor of India" at 4:20 p. m. Tuesday on the WJZ net.

Frank Munn, tenor on KSD's Sunday night Album of Familiar Music, will be interviewed at 3 p. m. Tuesday by Nellie Revell. Billings for Tuesday include Charita Bower, child star of the Broadway production of "The Women," with Ted Hammerstein; Al Jolson in an episode from "Viva Villa"; Ethel Shuta singing with Ben Bernie; Eb and Zeb with Al Pearce and His Gang; Edward Everett Horton with Jack Oakie.

Broadcasting Of Coronation To Set Record

Eight to Ten Hours of It on Networks—BBC Lays 472 Miles of Pick-up Wires.

MOST extensive and comprehensive of all broadcasts will be the covering of the coronation on Wednesday of next week. Listeners in this country can hear seven hours of it continuously, with an hour or two in addition. Listeners all over the world will be able to do the same.

KSD will cancel all other programs so that it may carry everything about the coronation put on the air from Great Britain.

According to plans as formed thus far, the Associated Press reports, the United States and Canada will be able to listen to everything that is carried by the British Broadcast Co. The schedule calls for a start at 3 a. m. St. Louis time, to continue until about 10 o'clock. Thereafter other features, such as the King's address, will be put on as they take place.

Origination of the transmission will be entirely through the BBC facilities in London. The American network, NBC, CBS and MBS, will depend on short waves to bring the signals over here. The experts' forecast for the day is: "Good trans-Atlantic reception."

To make every possible detail available, BBC is installing 472 miles of wire for pickup purposes, 58 microphone positions and five special control rooms in Westminster Abbey, scene of the ceremonies, and along the London streets over which the coronation procession is to proceed.

Of the microphones, 32 will be for the ceremonies in the Abbey, 11 for crowd effects and 15 for English and foreign language observers. For the parade, the microphones will be stationed approximately 800 yards apart.

The radio equipment required makes a pile weighing 12 tons, of which seven tons are batteries. The staff on the job will comprise 60 engineers, seven English commentators and 10 foreign language speakers.

All of the 23 directional transmitters at Daventry, including the five empire stations, will be in operation the full 24 hours of the day instead of their usual 18. It is these stations which will make the programs available to any place in the world. One or more will be sending specially for America those transmitters best heard on this side at the hours of the broadcast.

But the United States and Canada will not be the only countries considered in the rebroadcasting. The list includes Argentina, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Norway, Sweden and Yugoslavia, all of which will get the word pictures in the language of their own lands.

In a recent demonstration of progress toward sending electric power by radio, Dr. W. G. Swann, director of the Bartol Research Foundation of the Franklin Institute, Philadelphia, lighted a small electric light bulb at one end of a room by power transmitted by a high frequency radio transmitter at the other end. The chief difficulty, Dr. Swann said, was to put enough power into the transmitter to broadcast it in large amounts. So he warned that there was little reason for conclusions as to practical possibilities of lighting homes by radio.

Irene Wicker's Singing Lady musical play at 3:15 p. m. Friday will be "The Princess Who Couldn't Dance."

Opera Broadcast Saturday

"The Bartered Bride" From The Metropolitan at Noon —Tibbett, Jepson and Swarthout Sing Tonight.

A METROPOLITAN OPERA spring season performance in English of Smetana's "The Bartered Bride," which is billed for the St. Louis Municipal Opera season, will be broadcast at 12 noon next Saturday on the WEAF network.

Mario Chamlee, George Rasely and Hilda Burke will sing the principal roles. Others in the cast will be Natalie Bodanya, Anna Kaskas, Lucille Browning, John Burney and Norman Condon, all of whom have sung in network broadcasts, and Wilfred Engleman, Louis d'Angelo and Ludwig Burgstaller. The conductor will be Wilifred Pelletier.

Part of a performance of Beethoven's great "Missa Solemnis" will be broadcast from the Cincinnati May Music Festival at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday on the WJZ network, with Kirsten Flagstad, Frederick Jagel, Kathryn Meisle and Ezio Pinza, all of the Metropolitan Opera, as the soloists. Eugene Goosens will direct the Cincinnati Symphony Orchestra and a 200-voice chorus. A broadcast from the festival at 8:30 p. m. Saturday will bring the second act of "Lohengrin," with Lauritz Melchior, Elisabeth Rethberg, Kathryn Meisle, Julius Huehn, Ezio Pinza and Theodore Webb as soloists.

Broadcasts of the Boston Symphony Orchestra's "pop" concerts from 6:30 to 7:30 Thursday nights on the WJZ net will begin this week. KWK will pick up the concerts at 7 o'clock. Arthur Fiedler will be the conductor. Friday night's concert, at 8 o'clock, will be played by the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Radio concerts are scheduled as usual for today—the Walberg Brown ensemble at 8:30 a. m. on KWK. The Radio City concert at 10:30 a. m. on KWK. Everybody's Music, led by Howard Barlow, at 1 p. m. on the CBS network with Amparo Iturbi, sister of Jose Iturbi, the pianist, conductor, as soloist. A performance in English at 2:30 p. m. on KMOX of excerpts from Gian-Carlo Menotti's new one-act opera, "Amelia Goes to the Ball," with Margaret Daum in the title role. Marion Talley's concert at 3 p. m. on KSD.

A concert at 4 p. m. on the WJZ net by 225 pianists playing 125 pianos simultaneously at the Wilking Foundation Festival at Butler University, Indianapolis. Helen Traubel at 5:05 on KWK. The Fireside recital at 5:30 p. m. on KSD, inaugurating a change in policy whereby instrumentalists will take part in the concerts.

Lawrence Tibbett and Helen Jepson of the Metropolitan Opera, at 6 p. m. on KWK in Erno Rapee's concert. The Greenfield Village settlement's children's chorus and a symphony orchestra conducted by Eugene Ormandy at 7 p. m. on KMOX. Gladys Swarthout and Frank Chapmann at 8 p. m. on KSD. An organ recital by George L. Scott at 10:15 p. m. on KMOX.

TALKS ON EUROPEAN AFFAIRS

Donald Grant to Appear Twice at Washington, U.

Donald Grant, member of the Institute of International Education, will discuss "The Present Dangerous State of Europe" tomorrow night at 8 o'clock in Brown Hall at Washington University. The following day at 11:30 a. m. he will address students in the same hall on "What Is Happening to Britain, Nationally and Internationally?"

Grant, a graduate of the University of Edinburgh, helped to organize the International Student Relief, which later became the International Student Service. It aided destitute students in Europe after the war.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY OUTING

Service on Concordia Seminary Grounds This Afternoon.

The forty-first anniversary of the Students' Missionary Society of Concordia Seminary will be observed with an outdoor service on the grounds of the seminary at 3 o'clock this afternoon. Dr. Walter A. Maier, faculty adviser of the society, will speak.

Members of the society conduct services in 17 hospitals and welfare homes in St. Louis and maintain several mission homes in neighboring towns. The aim of the organization is to give students practical experience in pastoral work and to assist Lutheran ministers of the area.

DR. CLOPTON NAMED TO HEALTH BOARD

St. Louis Surgeon Succeeds Dr. Fred Bailey as Member of State Body.

Dr. Malvern B. Clopton, president of Washington University Corporation, was appointed a member of the State Board of Health yesterday by Gov. Stark. A Democrat, Dr. Clopton succeeds Dr. Fred Bailey, Democrat, of St. Louis, whose term expired April 18.

Since becoming a member of the board of directors of Washington University in 1927, Dr. Clopton, a surgeon, has made large gifts to the university. In 1930 he donated the operating floor of the Johnson-Rand surgical wing of Barnes Hospital, construction of which cost about $100,000.

He lives in Clarksville, Mo., and has offices at 3720 Washington boulevard. Formerly he was president of the Missouri Association of Occupational Therapy.

His term on the Board of Health will be four years.

Gov. Stark said two other appointments to the board will be made soon to fill vacancies created by expirations of terms. The terms of Dr. W. T. Elam of St. Joseph and Mrs. P. T. Bohan of Kansas City expired April 18.

The Governor reappointed Sam E. Trimble of Springfield a member of the board of regents of Southwest Missouri State Teachers' College, Springfield.

ART MUSEUM DISPLAYS FLOWER PAINTINGS

55, Most of Them by Masters, and 66 Prints Put on Exhibition.

An exhibition of 55 flower paintings, most of them by famous masters, and of 66 flower prints opened at the City Art Museum yesterday. It will continue through May, when the convention of the Associated Garden Clubs of America will be held here. On May 16, delegates to the convention will visit the show in a body.

The show traces the development of flower painting through the past three centuries. All but one painting, owned by the Museum, were lent by 22 dealers and private collectors. In addition to strictly floral subjects, a few garden pictures have been introduced for variety and to show the connection with the parallel development of landscape.

Pointing out that collections of fine flower paintings, even in public museums, are comparatively rare, the museum management expressed the hope that the exhibition would "serve to call attention to the charm of this somewhat neglected field." The work chiefly is of the Netherland schools of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries and of the late nineteenth and twentieth centuries, chiefly among the French impressionists, emphasizing that these were the most important and prolific periods in the history of flower painting.

A Ruysch Painting.

A "Vase of Flowers," by Rachel Ruysch, who lived from 1664 to 1750, was offered as an example of the style of perfect rendering of the individual flower forms achieved by the masters of the low countries in the seventeenth century. Its realism is meticulous in its accuracy, yet the work is saved from dryness by subtle tone relations and skillful use of planes of light and shadow.

The changes about 1700 from the dark background which characterized most of the work of the previous century to lighter and more atmospheric settings and a raising and softening of the color is illustrated in two "Vase of Flowers" by Jan Van Huysum (1682-1749). His influence lasted well into the nineteenth century in the northern countries and affected the followers of Jean Baptiste Monnoyer, leader of the French school, who died in 1699.

Two still life paintings by Monnoyer in the exhibit show the elegance and uniformity used by him and his pupils, who were extensively employed in the decoration of the royal palaces of Louis XIV.

Works of two other flower painters outside the Dutch and Flemish schools are shown. One is "Mushrooms and Carnations," by the Spaniard, Jose Ribera, who died in 1652. It contrasts sharply with contemporary northern work in its unstudied arrangement, the emphasized lights and its modernity in feeling, although it is more somber in key than modern flower paintings. An arrangement of flowers and a parrot by the Hungarian, Jacob Bogdani, who did most of his work in England, is an example of the Italian decorative style.

Some French Flowers.

Illustrative of the revolt of the French romantics and the revival of flower painting as a means for the artist to express his own joy in color and form, is "Woman Arranging Flowers," by Gustave Courbet, who died in 1877.

"Garden at Versailles" and "Lilacs and Roses," by Edouard Manet (1832-1833), and "Water Lilies," by Claude Monet (1842-1926) which are included in the show, are examples of the French impressionists, who liked clear bright hues, and were less interested in detail than in bringing out a spirit of freshness and color. Only in Henri Fantin-Latour, one of the leading French realists, two of whose paintings are shown, does painstaking accuracy return.

In "The Bouquet," by Vincent Van Gogh, painted about 1888, the artist's turbulent vitality is projected into the flowers, with Oriental color and flatness of field, and short definite brush strokes. A pastel by Odilon Redon, the Frenchman who died in 1916, expresses a mystical concept of the flower, influenced by oriental ideas of imagination and color. An Auguste Renoir, "House and Garden at Cagnes," brings out his genius as a colorist. There is a study painted by Pablo Picasso in 1932, two paintings by Camille Pissarro and "Bowl of Flowers," by Andre Derain.

The paintings are in Galleries 30 and 31 and the prints are in the basement.

BOY SCOUTS TRAINING FOR BIG CAMPOREE

About 2000 Expected to Take Part at Tilles Park May 21 to 23.

Boy Scouts of the St. Louis area have started training for a Camporee to be held at Tilles Park, Lay and Litzsinger roads, St. Louis County, May 21 to 23. About 2000 are expected to participate.

District campmasters will meet tomorrow night at Michael School to assign camp space to troops that will take part. Judges will meet next week to decide on methods of judging and scoring.

For the first time since the outdoor programs have been staged by the St. Louis Council, participation in the various events will be on a troop rather than a patrol basis. The program, as planned, amounts to tests and contests constituting a resume of the scouting program.

Seascouts will continue their competition for points this afternoon at 2 o'clock at Creve Coeur Lake. The ship having the largest number at the close of the sailing season will be given an award.

Heading today's program is a race between seven X-boats and there also will be contests between moth boats and four-oared gigs. Racing last Sunday was confined to contests between X-boats because of high winds and the rough condition of the surface of the lake. Gusty blasts of cold wind gave the scouts in attendance a taste of ocean weather and provided a more severe test than usual of their seamanship.

TROOP NOTES.

West and Midland districts will send a joint troop to the National Jamboree in Washington June 25 until July 11.

Four troops have registered for two-week sessions at Camp Irondale. They are Troop 2, Pilgrim Congregational Church; Troop 275, German Protestant Orphan's Home; Troop 122, St. Philip Neri Catholic Church; Troop 92, Samuel Cupples School. Troop 227 of Lafayette Park Baptist Church and Troop 250 of Corcordia Gymnastic Society have signed for six-day sessions at Lion's Den Camp.

Instead of scouts appearing at a Board of Review as is customary, Midland District has arranged for candidates for first and second-class advancement to make arrangements for a personal interview with a member of the district board. The plan previously had been adopted for Star and Life Scout applicants and the new arrangement will be extended to all districts in the Council.

William V. Sweeney has been selected skipper of Sea Scout Ship Polaris.

Courts of honor will be held this week by Troop 328, Valley Park; Troop 158, Holy Innocents Church; Troop 329, Pacific, and Troop 333, Lyndover School. Court of honor was held Friday by Troop 133, St. Alphonsus Church.

Illustrated Talk on Shaw's Garden.

Dr. George T. Moore will give an illustrated talk on Shaw's Garden, of which he is director, at 8 p. m., next Friday at a public meeting of the St. Louis Horticultural Society in Washington University Medical School auditorium, Scott and Euclid avenues.

What the Depression Has Done To 'Middletown'—A Late Recheck Against the Conditions of 1925

BY MARQUIS W. CHILDS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 1.

TWO American sociologists, using the scientific method, have taken the lid off an American town in order to see what is beneath the surface of community life. The report of their observations, contained in the book, "Middletown in Transition" (Harcourt, Brace, New York, publisher) makes as fascinating reading as a study of some strange South Seas tribe. Here are the current folkways of America; but far more, there is an insight into the state of mind of an average American community, its doubts, its fears, the hopes it clings to in spite of everything.

In "Middletown in Transition," the authors, Robert S. Lynd and Helen Merrell Lynd, his wife, apply the method of anthropology to an American community. Prof. Lynd and a group of five assistants studied for more than a year every phase of the life of the community he has called "Middletown," seeking in their approach the same detachment and objectivity that a party of anthropologists would give to the study of a primitive culture.

Moreover, the Lynds had the overwhelming advantage of a background acquired through an earlier and similar study of the same community. On this earlier study the Lynds based a book, published ten years ago, called "Middletown."

Study of Depression Changes.

This time they went back to find out whether the depression and the world-shaking events of the last decade had made any fundamental difference in Middletown's way of life.

Most commentators pointed out that the findings in the earlier book would apply not only to the Lynds' particular Middletown but to all Middletowns—to America in general; and that is even more true of the present book, which is in many respects a more mature and a more complete work if only because the authors began with a rich background of knowledge.

Middletown is a manufacturing community of nearly 50,000 inhabitants. It is easily identified by external evidence despite the fact that the Lynds are careful to preserve its anonymity. It was chosen after long deliberation because it was felt to be a typical Middle Western town.

The Lynds first studied this Middletown in 1924 and 1925. It was against the background of the boom of the 1920's that they contrast the present town. Outwardly they found little change. By 1935 the "official front had recovered its flawless exterior" and there was little surface trace of the profound shock to which the town had been subjected. "In the main, a Rip Van Winkle, fallen asleep in 1925 while addressing Rotary or the Central Labor Union, could have awakened in 1935 and gone right on with his interrupted address to the same people with much the same ideas.

Twinges Under the Surface.'

"Such changes as are going forward in Middletown are disguised by the thick blubber of custom that envelopes the city's life. The city is uneasily conscious of many twinges down under the surface, but it resembles the person who insists on denying and disregarding unpleasant physical symptoms on the theory that everything MUST be all right, and that if anything really is wrong it may cure itself without leading to a major operation. The conflicts under the surface of Middletown are not so much new as more insistent, more difficult to avoid, harder to smooth over."

While most people in Middletown preferred to ignore it, the Lynds and their assistants found a distinct trend away from the old, homogeneous, "classless" community toward a sharp class differentiation. The levels of society in this town of 50,000 are becoming more and more clearly marked off by class demarcations, the Lynds found.

"This was particularly true of what is rapidly becoming an "upper class" as distinct from the middle class. In fact, the Lynds could identify more or less roughly a middle class that included small trades people, clerks, the lesser professional people and the next above this class a group of business and professional men of superior status and finally the controlling economic group made up almost entirely of the members of one family and their economic satellites.

A close relationship exists between this top group and the one next beneath it, but the Lynds found an ever wider divergence between these two strata and the middle class beneath them. In the course of their interviews the Lynds found many in the middle class who felt they were forever closed off from the upper strata, that the "American dream" of equal opportunity was definitely a dream which had come to an end.

X Family Patriarchy.

The controlling patriarchy, referred to throughout the book as the "X family," who own the largest industry in Middletown. But their "control" only begins at this point. In their own industry and their other business enterprises in the town they have held to a policy of fixing wages themselves, and of course, opposition to unionization. At the same time they have been extremely philanthropic, having made several large outright gifts to the town for public institutions as well as supporting community centers such as the Y. W. C. A. and the Y. M. C. A. It is in part through these philanthropies that they exert their dominance over the community. At least one philanthropy, a gift to a college, was used in such a way that it resulted in a handsome profit for the "X family" through an improvement in real estate held by the family.

The Family's Influence.

"If one aggregates the portions of Middletown's population that are directly or indirectly dependent upon the X's the total becomes a sizeable bloc among Middletown's 12,500 families. It includes the families of the approximately 1000 employes in the X's factory, five large floors of managerial and sales personnel in their department store, the staffs of the local college, hospital, community fund agencies, Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A., of the banks and the leading newspaper, and a long list of political, religious, real estate, retail and industrial units, which 'cannot afford to offend' the X's.

"It cannot be too often reiterated that the X control of Middletown is for the most part unconscious rather than deliberate. People are not, when one gets beyond the immediate army of direct employes of the family, dictated to. It is rather the sort of control that makes men hesitant about making decisions of importance unless these are in harmony with X policies. Here we are witnessing the pervasiveness of the long fingers of capitalist ownership."

In the way they live this "controlling" group is more and more set off from the rest of the community. Instead of golf, which has become rather common, with a public course, they have gone in

Senate Would Smother President's Court Proposal in Secret Vote

Illustration of 'Boss' Pendergast's Concept of Politics as 'Business'

Why Roosevelt's Radical Move Seems Likely to Succeed, Despite Private Opposition of an Overwhelming Majority.

Personal Conviction Outweighed in Many Cases by Gratitude or Obligation for Favors Received or Yet to Come.

"This masterpiece of the Constitution makers (the Senate—ed.) was in fact a happy accident."—Bryce.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 1.

IF THE 96 Senators could vote in secret, without fear of reprisal or hope of reward, as the ordinary voter did last November when he cast his presidential ballot in a polling booth, President Roosevelt's plan to remake the Supreme Court would be overwhelmingly defeated. Informed political opinion here is convinced, however, that, if the roll were called tomorrow, the proposal would be approved by a reluctant Senate followed by a docile House.

The uninitiated may well ask: "Why do Senators vote against their personal convictions? Why do they say one thing in their private conversations and the exact opposite when addressing the Senate or speaking on the radio?"

The realistic answer is that politics is a business, just as Tom Pendergast said last June at the Democratic National Convention when interviewed by the Post-Dispatch. What the Missouri boss observed then is pertinent now if the word "Congress" is substituted for "convention."

"All this ballyhoo and showmanship at the convention is all right," he said. "It's a great show. It gives the folks a run for their money. It makes everybody feel good. But the man who makes the organization possible is the man who delivers the votes and he doesn't deliver them by oratory. No, he's got to keep everlastingly at it. It's no part-time job. It's a business like anything else."

Senators Have Been Instructed to Deliver.

For most of the 76 Democratic Senators, keeping the Democratic party in power and their own seats in the Senate, is a business. The party is a continuing institution. The present head of the establishment, Mr. Roosevelt, made it what it is. Now he has demanded an extraordinary thing and the Senators have been told to deliver.

These Senators were not asked for advice in advance. Postmaster General—Democratic National Chairman—Farley announced that support of the President's proposal was a question of party loyalty.

The Roosevelt-Farley order gave the Democratic organization the toughest job it has had since the League of Nations debate split the party following the war. A group of Democrats, including some heretofore loyal Roosevelt supporters, openly revolted at once and several publicly declaimed that they would rather be defeated for re-election than vote for the President's scheme. A larger group, headed by the party wheel horses, Majority Leader Robinson and Chairman Harrison of the Finance Committee have ranged themselves behind the President.

Many in this latter group do not conceal their lack of enthusiasm and not a few would like to kick over the traces and join the revolters. But party pressure is stronger than personal conviction. And they know that defeat of the President, who in popular imagination, is more than the head of the party, would be a devastating blow to party prestige.

Defeat at this session would be catastrophic for him and the goals he has personally set for himself for his second term. Retreat is politically unthinkable, although an ultimate compromise would not have such destructive consequences; he has thus far ridiculed all talk of concession. Unlike members of Congress, he does not have to face the prospect of re-election. He can concentrate on his personal achievements for the next three and a half years. On this one bold stroke depends the success of his second term.

Garner Goes Along With the President.

Vice-President Garner, who ranks next to the President in the governmental structure, also is in the enviable position where he does not have to worry about re-election. He will be 71 years old in 1940, and, while he has not announced his retirement from public life after his present term expires, he presumably will return to his Texas farm, to hunt, fish and enjoy a well-earned rest after a busy life of national and party service. His present concern is the future of the Democratic party. He has been a loyal Roosevelt supporter in the past, and while his personal independent views have been heard in the inner councils, he has "gone along" with the President. It is conceivable that Garner may have to cast the deciding vote in the Senate should the Senators tie, and it would be one of the most embarrassing votes he ever cast.

Garner was far from enthusiastic for the plan when it surprised Congress and the country and it is no secret in Washington that he likes it less and less as time goes on. His whole political background and training incline him against the President's purpose and the Roosevelt strategy for its adoption. But he has made politics a business since coming to manhood and he takes pride in his "practical" outlook. In the House and in the Senate, as a leader of the opposition and as a leader of the Administration, he has been a Democratic stalwart, intent on getting and keeping the party in power.

In the welter over the court plan he has taken a long-range view. Just now his principal concern is understood to be to have it disposed of one way or the other so that Congress can get along with imperative legislative work, especially Governmental economy, which he believes overshadows the court plan in importance.

Why Other Senators Support the Plan.

Entirely aside from the merits or the demerits of the plan, it has given the student of politics and government an intimate insight of the real motives which compel Senators to take one side or the other on a fundamental issue. The dramatic announcement at the White House, the Judiciary Committee hearings and finally the debates and roll calls in the Senate will be topics for histories. Political text books may portray the legal, social, economic and geographic groupings produced by the bill as geology pictures the stratifications of rocks.

But of the forty-odd Democrats supporting the White House bill, a large number are going along for the following reasons:

1—They are party men, first, last and always, and once a party decision has been reached, they support the administration. The group includes such leaders as Robinson, Harrison, Byrnes, Ashurst of Arizona, McKellar of Tennessee, Pittman of Nevada and Shephard of Texas, all chairmen of important committees. They may wish that a question had never been raised, but once raised, they follow the administration orders.

2—They came into the Senate on the Roosevelt landslide in 1932, 1934, or 1936. Had it not been for the Roosevelt popularity, they would not be in the Senate today. Such men as Brown of New Hampshire, Brown of Michigan, Herring of Iowa, Hitchcock of South Dakota, Hughes of Delaware and Smathers of New Jersey are wondering how much they owe to the President and whether they should show their gratitude on the court bill.

3—They want something from the administration—judicial appointments or support for localized legislation or are beholden to political bosses who want favors from the administration.

4—They are fearful of four "conservative" Justices, and sincerely believe that something must be done to limit the power of the courts or to increase the power of Congress. These men, such as Black of Alabama, Schwellenbach of Washington and Wagner of New York, would have preferred a constitutional amendment, or at least presentation of the plan before the national election, but, considering it a step in the direction they are looking, they are willing to support the President's proposal. They are joined in this view by Norris, La Follette and Lundeen and may have the vote of Shipstead.

5—They are impressed by the support of organized labor and the general popular support Roosevelt has received from the less favored classes. The referendum in the Georgia counties, the election of a procourt representative in Texas and unofficial polls among the wage earners indicate that the Roosevelt popularity has not waned in these classes. The A. F. of L. and the C I O have indorsed the plan and recent elections have demonstrated that organized labor can at last deliver a sizeable vote.

Motives of Some Of Plan's Opponents.

If the motives of some of the supporters of the plan are dubious, the same can be said of some of the opponents. Political bedfellows are proverbially diverse. The divisions among the opponents can be explained by the political, legal, social, economic and geographic backgrounds of the individual Senators.

The Constitution, besides being the fundamental law of the land, has been a useful

VICE-PRESIDENT GARNER.

How Spanish Government Encourages Peasants to Grow Enough Food for the Country

"Hoe As Valuable As Gun," One Poster Proclaims — Their Hard Lot Under Old Regime.

From the Manchester Guardian.

VALENCIA, April.

SPAIN is chiefly an agricultural country, and it is generally admitted that the plight of the peasants under former governments was as bad as it ever was in Ireland, in Russia, or in Mexico—and for much the same reasons. Land reforms were promised by the republic, but only in certain districts, and there only timidly attempted.

The power of vested interests was too strong for the widely scattered, unorganized, and inarticulate peasants. The peasant could not pay for legal advice nor deal unaided with the clever lawyers who ensnared him in the "agreement" which he probably could not even read.

The Peasant's Contract.

The tenant found himself at the mercy of such clauses as the following (I have before me a copy of one of these old contracts):—

1. The payment of the said rent must be made punctually . . . and the corn must be paid every year, and must be of good quality, clean, well dried, and measured by the person appointed by the landlord.

2. In case the rent falls into arrears . . . the landlord has the right to seize and dispose of the corn to repay the amount owing.

3. . . . the landlord may cancel the contract if it suits him, and all improvements and work done by the tenant remain to pay the arrears, and the tenant has no right to claim any reduction for them.

4. The tenant cannot for any reason ask for a reduction in rent.

6. The said lands must be sown with corn during the first year, but subsequent years one-third of the land may be sown with other crops.

8. All the property, present and future, of the tenant is to be regarded as security for the rent.

9. Non-fulfilment of any of the stipulated conditions gives the landlord the right to cancel the contract, eject the tenant, or hand him over to the district court of Carmona for legal proceedings to enforce the observance of the contract, and he will then be deprived of his privileges and obliged to pay the legal expenses.

Workers Evicted by Rebels.

Such reforms as were instituted by the Popular Front Government, elected in February, 1936, lasted only a few short months in the lands that fell into rebel hands in July or August, as may be seen from the following well-established examples.

La Golondrina is an estate in Torremocha (Caceres) owned by Gonzalo Montenegro, president of the Landed Proprietors and chamberlain of the Alphonso XIII Association. This estate has only been under cultivation for 24 years. After the elections of February, 1936, judgment was given in favor of handing it over to the workers, who divided it up. When the rising took place the workers were ejected, the majority imprisoned, and the leaders shot.

Valero, at Torrejon el Rubio (Caceres), is a hunting enclosure owned by the Duke of Arion. It is over a thousand hectares in extent. The deer and wild boars from this enclosure used to destroy the crops throughout the neighborhood, but were, of course, preserved as game and could not be shot by the farmers The wolves were also a serious danger to cattle. This preserve could be of the greatest value, providing employment in clearing the wood and making charcoal.

In one part the forest consists of wild olive trees, which, by grafting with the fruit-bearing variety, might be converted into a fine grove. More than 700 hectares could easily be watered, as they lie between the Tagus and a small stream called Rio Vinagre. As in the surrounding vilages there were more than 3000 persons unemployed, this preserve was therefore handed over to the villagers by the Popular Front Government.

The Fascists have now returned it to its former owner, who, with his friends, visits it twice a year. The majority of the leaders of the workers' organizations have been shot and others are awaiting execution, among them Antonio Palomo, of Jaraicejo, who is principally blamed for declaring this estate to be of public utility.

In Reublican territory, on the other hand, great efforts have been made to improve conditions for the peasants. The amount of land already distributed to them for its immediate cultivation was 2,532,438 hectaers up to the end of February. This amount is being rapidly increased as cases are settled concerning lands which have been abandoned by their owners.

Co-Operatives Organized.

The peasants have organized themselves into different forms of co-operatives and have received credits to the amount of 43,003,854 pesetas. The lands have been distributed along with the farm machinery, live stock, and other means of production belonging to the old owners, some in accordance with legislation existing prior to July 18 and others according to the decree of Oct. 7, 1936, which abolished rents.

Credits have been granted to provide the necessary means of production where they are lacking and to support the agricultural workers and their families until the new enterprises show a profit. Administration councils conduct the afairs of these co-operative estates, the workers being elected on democratic lines As a general rule the following principle has been applied: "To collective exploitation of the land should be encouraged but never enforced," but where individual cultivation has been preferred plots of land have been given to families for a liimted length of time, with the stipulation that those things which are more suitable for exploitation on a large scale, such as cattle raising and rural industries, must be worked in common.

Aid for Farmers.

The Institute of Agrarian Reform is undertaking all kinds of work to assist the collective farmers and others. With the intention of creating stations of agricultural machinery for their needs, all available machinery is being collected, classified, and repaired, and dreams of workers are being trained to operate it. The institute also undertakes the development of irrigation systems, the clearing and preservation of fertile lands, and the construction of houses, stables, barns, and villages where the former owners have left the rural population living under subnormal conditions. In addition, the institute is studying a land code in which the rights and obligations of men on the land are defined so as to protect what they have gained.

Last February a service for agricultural teaching was created, with a free information bureau for peasants to which they are welcome to take all heir technical, economic, and social problems.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles; that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare; never be satisfied with merely printing news; always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Mississippi County's State of Suspense.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

MY county is strictly agricultural. We have been far removed from the path of beneficent (or predatory) industrialism. We are amazingly ignorant of industrial practices and trends. But we are feeling our oats. Not even the flood could dampen our spirits. We are rich just now because our soils are productive, labor has been cheap and farm prices for some years past have been greater than production costs. We are wonderful spenders and offer at this time the rosiest market for the manifold products of modern industry. We are singularly untroubled.

We know very little about modern industry, but every once in a while we get to wanting some of it very badly. At the moment, we are wanting a shoe factory. We are just now in the exciting process of getting (or not getting) a shoe factory which is to make over our county seat into the kind of town that it really ought to be. Heretofore, retail buying has somewhat abated between crop selling periods. The steady flow of wage payments to the 400 shoe workers is to fill in all the dips in retail sales and make the town a complete answer to a merchant's most florid dream.

The $60,000 honorarium which the shoe manufacturers require in order to feel themselves perfectly welcome in our midst, is no obstacle at all. We have money to burn and the $60,000 is to be paid back anyway, out of a 10 per cent deduction from payrolls. It is not expected that the factory workers will kick about the 10 per cent deduction, because they will be properly grateful for their jobs, and the wage scale is to be at a conservative level so that the 10 per cent of the individual worker's weekly payment will amount to very little, actually.

Negotiations with the shoe magnates are not going altogether smoothly. Our people have perhaps erred in asking for certain assurances in writing. The shoe captains have countered with requests for exemption from taxation and guarantees against future demands for wage increases and against union activities of any kind among the workers.

Our state of mind is such that we will agree to almost anything to get a factory. We would gladly promise to run John L. Lewis out of town in the event he came personally, but how can we undertake to prevent him writing letters to our future shoe workers which might turn their minds toward unionism.

Our progressive spirit, however, does not lead us into grabbing at just anything. A new enterprise involving the expenditure of a million or so has crept upon us almost unawares and is to be ours without bonus or bond—a project of the Resettlement Administration. Down in New Madrid County a colony for the "whites" was started a year ago. But ours is to be a colony for the "blacks." And we will have none of it. We are aroused against this colony project as hotly as we are aroused for the shoe factory. This shows that we are not just "fur" things indiscriminately.

There are, of course, deep-lying reasons why we are against the proposed Negro colony. We are a cotton country and Negroes do our work. They do it cheaply, unless they catch us in a pinch at cotton-picking time. They know their place and keep to it pretty well in the daytime. Who knows what fool ideas might be generated in the "resettlement" and overflow the whole countryside? It requires no process of reasoning at all to know that this colony is dangerous business. Even the women and children are talking about it.

So here we are in a delicious state of suspense, grasping blindly at one new enterprise and blindly repelling another. What if we get the one and lose the other? And what if what we want is what we don't get, and vice versa.

THAD SNOW.

Charleston, Mo.

Never in the Red.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE action of the Senate on the bill to increase the Athletic Commission's "take" from gate receipts probably won't arouse any particular interest with the majority, but it does present a very clear picture of the need of some agency which will supply accurate information with regard to fiscal conditions of the various state agencies.

The proponents of this measure asserted that the increase was purely a revenue measure, necessary to make the commission a self-sustaining agency and that failure to increase the "take" would make it necessary to dip into the general revenue.

Aside from the fact that the Legislature has no authority to "dip into the general revenue" for that purpose, no matter how much the commission may fall short of revenue, the records of the commission will show that in the eight years of its existence it has not only supported its own activities but has also paid the expenses of a service officer in the Adjutant-General's office, the cost of bands and drum corps for the American Legion and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and has contributed $50,668.34 to the general revenue fund. It has never been in the red in its entire existence and its yearly balances have run from between $2050.41 at present to as high as $49,006.69.

AN EXPONENT OF ACCURACY.

Jefferson City.

SHALL WE STANDARDIZE EDUCATION?

Senators Harrison of Mississippi and Black of Alabama are sponsoring a bill to appropriate $100,000,000 in Federal funds toward the support of education in the states during the next fiscal year. The plan is to increase the appropriation $50,000,000 each year for five years, over which period the total would run to $1,000,000,000.

Various educational organizations are on record in favor of the measure, including the National Education Association, the National Association of State Superintendents and Commissioners of Education and a large number of state organizations of teachers and parents. The American Federation of Labor, the American Legion and the American Farm Bureau Federation have also entered formal approval.

With all due respect to the good intentions of the individuals and organizations who have indorsed the bill, we have no hesitation in saying that what the measure proposes is bad in principle and would be bad in practice. It is clear that much of the thinking about the bill has not gone beyond the immediate prospect of getting funds for schools which are in financial need.

Assume that the goal of the bill would be realized—that educational opportunities would be equalized, so to speak, over the union by taking Federal revenue from the wealthier states, such as New York, for the support of schools in states with less income. What effect would this have on the American system of government and on American life?

It would mean, first, further abdication of their duties by the states and more leaning on the Federal Government—less willingness to foot local bills locally and more reaching into the Federal treasury—all in the mistaken notion that Federal funds can be had without cost to anyone.

It would mean not only a long step toward a completely centralized government, but that long step would be taken in a field which has always been under local regulation. The Constitution gives Congress no power to regulate or control education in the states. Congress has in certain specialized fields, such as agricultural training, extended grants-in-aid to the states, but these are the exceptions that prove the rule of local support and control. As a matter of fact, the regulation of educational policies has been guarded so jealously by individual communities that it has been difficult to overcome the opposition to merging local school districts in the interests of economy and efficiency.

Let Congress begin to appropriate great sums of money for the upkeep of the schools and the way will be open for the federalization of education. Federalization would inevitably mean standardization, and that would not only strike at the very healthy experimentation which characterizes the public school system, but would have a crippling effect upon private and denominational schools. It is said that such a subsidy can be kept under control, that it could be checked so as to prevent a fundamental change in the basis of education. Experience sets up a warning. The camel asked only to warm the tip of his nose, and before the Arab knew it the beast's whole body was in the tent.

So it would be with education. The states would begin by accepting relatively moderate grants to enable them to raise the salaries of teachers and improve facilities. Inevitably there would be certain regulations. These regulations would just as inevitably mean greater conformity; to obtain more and more funds the states would agree increasingly to adhere to Federal rules, just as they now are bringing their social security statutes into line with the Federal requirements.

There is no denying that there are thousands of school districts which cannot support adequate educational facilities. That, however, is a problem for the states. Let the states overhaul their outmoded, costly, wasteful small district systems and apply sound business methods over areas that correspond with modern transportation methods. Let them not run, tin cup in hand, to Washington for the upkeep of their schools.

What we have said thus far takes no account of the present compelling need for checking the flow from the Federal treasury—a need vividly pictured by the President in his recent message on the budget. Even in these days of astronomical government expenditures, a billion dollars is a staggering sum. It is still a staggering sum when spread over five years. In the fifth year of the bill's operation, the outlay would be $300,000,000, or practically half as much as it cost to run the entire Federal establishment a generation ago.

But even if no reason existed for holding down current expenses, the Harrison-Black bill should be beaten. It seems incredible that it should have advanced to the stage of a favorable committee report in the Senate. Fundamentally bad in itself, it would accentuate a trend which, unless halted, will in time completely wipe out the states as self-governing units.

THE LASS WITH THE CAPABLE AIR.

Few professions have more intimate contact with human woe than that of the nurse, and particularly is this true of the visiting nurses, because in their work other elements of distress are added to that of illness. No one knows in how many homes these capable young women have bridged the gap between anxiety and peace of mind.

It is gratifying, therefore, to know that there are 131 of these nurses at work in St. Louis, some under private auspices and some under municipal supervision, the latter group having just issued its annual report showing a total of nearly 79,000 visits.

Their ministrations along the highways and byways of the city invest their simple garb with something of the aura surrounding a Sister of Mercy.

IT WAS RATHER MOIST.

We concur in the official weather report that the April through which we have paddled was the wettest since 1929. Had the summary read 1829, there would have been no dissent. This latest of all the Aprils soaked the rich, soaked the poor, soaked the grave, the gay and that "solemn brood of care" that William Cullen Bryant spoke of. Just and unjust, it pelted us all.

But the calm, unruffled matter-of-factness of the weather man's survey somehow irritates us. Such a splashing phenomenon, we submit, deserved an emotional tribute: not necessarily an angry good riddance, but at least a touch of drama to indicate that the performance had rambled off the beaten path. Assuming, if we may, that Mr. Guedalla were our meteorologist, a different farewell to April had been intoned.

As the world of 1937 waited for the May day, rain stippled the Mississippi. Along Lindell boulevard, rain mellowed the glare of electric lights to the soft glow of demure candles. In the green distances of Forest Park, rain bathed the mornings. Farther to the west rain tumbled vagrantly along stretches of Clayton road, and in the gardens of the county rain filled the jonquils' cups to overflowing. Through the forbidding gates of Huntleigh Village rain swept with cosmic impudence. From his front yard in the Ozarks a Marcus Aurelius of the hills remarked to a weeping world, "It's sure raining."

THE PENDERGAST BILL.

The Pendergast permanent registration bill—hurriedly drafted by St. Louis members of the House after the boss gave the signal—is not acceptable to John B. Edwards, vice-chairman of Mayor Dickmann's committee, which drafted the original bill. It is not acceptable to City Budget Director Arthur C. Meyers, a member of the same committee. It is not acceptable to the League of Women Voters, which has campaigned for years for a good permanent registration law. It is not acceptable to the public.

Boss Pendergast and his legislative flunkies at Jefferson City, feeling that the public demand for this obvious reform could no longer be ignored, have decided to pay off—but in counterfeit money. Their bill is a fraud and a sham. It would give us a system of permanent registration worse even than the system we have now. Under it, St. Louis would be jumping from the frying pan into the fire. The ballot box stuffers, the ghost voters and all the rest of the scurvy crew who have been stealing elections in St. Louis could continue to do so under the Pendergast bill.

The heart of any decent permanent registration bill is the requirement that voters sign their names at the polls, in order that their signatures may be compared with those on the registration cards. No such requirement is in the Pendergast bill.

It is an essential feature of permanent registration that a biennial census be taken of all citizens over 19 years, to purge the rolls of all who do not belong there. No such provision is made in the Pendergast bill.

One of the greatest powers of the Board of Election Commissioners, according to Mr. Edwards—and he should know, for he was chairman of the board from 1921 to 1925—is the authority to appoint precinct judges and clerks employed or engaged in business in the ward, instead of being required to confine these appointments to residents. This is of tremendous importance in downtown wards of floating population, because it makes it possible to man the polls with employes of banks and business houses. The Pendergast bill has deprived the board of this authority.

But it is hardly necessary to go on. The Pendergast bill is so defective and so dangerous that the most ardent advocates of permanent registration are now advocating its defeat. They have worked for years for a reform which would prevent fraud, minister to the convenience of voters and save huge sums in election expenses—but they would rather have no permanent registration at all than the thing cooked up over night by the political tricksters of the Legislature.

How much longer is Missouri going to take it on the chin? How much longer are the people of this State to permit their wishes to be flouted and their aspirations contemptuously denied by the machine politicians?

Harlan County, Kentucky, has its coal mines, but the Sheriff's office, as operated by Middleton, is a gold mine.

MORAL VICTORY FOR THE NORRIS PLAN.

Although the Wisconsin House of Representatives has rejected a resolution to amend the State Constitution so as to establish a one-chamber legislative body, the vote was in effect a moral victory for the Norris plan. The division was 46 against to 38 for, and this means that with a change of only five votes the resolution would have carried. In Nebraska the old two-chamber Legislature rejected the proposal repeatedly; it was only when Senator Norris took the issue to the people by means of the initiative and referendum that it was adopted.

Missourians should keep their eyes on the experiment in Nebraska. Something must be done about the sorry pass of State Government in Missouri, and when the time comes to do it familiarity with Nebraska's experience in its first term may prove helpful in making a decision.

The administration proposes to cut all Government expenditures 15 per cent. Is this on top of the 25 per cent cut promised in the 1932 platform?

A SORRY DECISION.

A new and startling standard for parenthood has been set up by New Jersey's highest court in denying to Mrs. Mabel Eaton the custody of her two children. Mrs Eaton is not "a proper person to be entrusted with her children's upbringing" because, it is alleged, she is a Communist and an atheist. According to her attorney, no proof of atheism was shown, and Mrs. Eaton is, in reality, "deeply religious." Mrs. Eaton herself denied she was either a Communist or an atheist; nevertheless, the children go to her divorced husband.

Now, the courts usually lean backward in awarding the children of divorced parents to their mothers, and it is only on the strongest showing of immorality or shiftlessness that this is not done. We know of no previous case where it has been seriously argued that the political views of a parent are a proof of unfitness, and for a court actually to entertain such an argument is a shocking commentary on justice.

If Communistic views are held to corrupt a child's mind, the state must then logically, in cases where both parents hold such views, invade those households and take away the children. And if one court holds that Communistic views are a bar to proper parenthood, what is to prevent another from holding the same to be true of Socialism, or to heed the plea of a Democratic father that because his divorced wife is a Republican, she is not "a proper person."

Is this America, where free thought and free speech are guaranteed to every citizen, or a totalitarian state where everyone must accept the official philosophy? Has it come to pass that mother love is something that must be conditioned by orthodox thinking on political questions? A pox on that decision!

Van Sweringen securities, purchased two years ago for $3,121,000, have been sold for $6,325,000. That's the record of the Indiana capitalist, Mr. Ball, who, you might say, knows his way around.

THE VERY LATEST.

American Business: New Model

Widespread acceptance of unionization is an indication of new temper now prevailing among business men, writer says; unruly element has discredited competent firms, but at last is realizing need of applying laws of economic justice and fair dealing; recognition of relation between mass production and buying power is welcomed.

J. George Frederick in the Forum.

BLOSSOMING this spring, the harbinger of definitely hopeful economic developments, is the new attitude of our leading business men. Even before the last election, it was here and there to be found in bud by poking under the frost and snow of the winter of their discontent, but, when, early in March, Myron C. Taylor of United States Steel reversed the ironbound policy of that industry by recognizing unions, fixing a 40-hour week and setting a $5-a-day minimum for even common labor, the bud really opened, and the new temper of American business genuinely arrived.

Business men are group-minded and have always followed the lead of Steel. Taylor's action was instantly and accurately hailed as the burgeoning forth of decisive, permanent change, not merely as the sour, grudging, belated "conceding of Roosevelt's election," which a few cynics maintained.

It is a fact and not a hope that American business leaders are sufficiently re-educated in fundamental economics to admit the need of broad new policies. The long period of debate, bitterness and strife is almost over, as far as basic principles are concerned. It will henceforth be unfashionable in business to take the truculent attitude toward labor, government and the new standards of business economics. The new temper of business is a reality and needs only intelligent application to lay the foundation of a new period of American economic welfare.

Business in general has awakened to realization that one of the main reasons for the 1929 crash was a lack of demand for the type of goods, at the price, that it was making in such quantity. That demand, it now knows, will not rise until greater purchasing power enables it to do so.

It does not really degrade American business to say that never before has it had a quite effective enough birching and that therefore it grew up to a spoiled adolescence. The Sherman anti-trust law proved abortive, and Teddy Roosevelt's birching was not severe, despite his shouts about the Big Stick. America, on the whole, has always been surprisingly humble before business, even while business was making serious economic mistakes.

The youth of American business has been stormy and willful. The antics of many of the country's economic and financial notables for the past century certainly make embarrassing reading for any responsible person who would like to defend them.

The first used the miser technique, then the land-grabbing technique, then the promotion technique, then the sharp-practice technique, then the corporation-bludgeon technique, then the monopoly and political-corruption technique, then the consolidation and stock-speculation technique, then the holding-company technique. In each of these they went to marked extremes.

Meantime, the general run of business men, honest and hard-working, stood by and watched and even covertly admired them for what they "got away with" and believed the new era nonsense, invented by hired economists, that economic law was transcended by American business genius.

Thus they missed a great opportunity to separate the sheep from the goats. The wayward brothers of business and finance were emotionally and morally immature and they were uninterested in the goals of really able industry. They brought grave discredit on all competent business and finance, which have a splendid record, the result largely of the application of the scientific temper both to materials and to industrial and consumer relationships.

First, it recognizes that, under modern closely interrelated economics in this huge, unified country, a greater measure of initiative, control and regulation by the Government is inevitable and advisable, not only to make democracy work better but also from a broad business point of view. Business itself benefits from these regulations and controls; indeed, it needs them badly.

Second, it recognizes (as England did 20 years ago) that unionization and collective bargaining, as means of clarifying the voice of labor and making its leadership responsible, are constructive steps forward, greatly reducing industrial waste and strife. Labor must no longer be bought as a commodity.

Third, it recognizes that business economics itself is now better understood in regard to the relation between mass production and mass purchasing power. More money in more purses, more time to use and enjoy goods, lower prices and lower distribution costs are seen to be not only good but imperative for sound prosperity. The skim-the-cream era is gone.

Fourth, it recognizes that special social steps are inevitable to aid the under-privileged, the unfortunate, the old, the inefficient, the unemployed. Our business civilization must either employ them or give them some aid and security.

Fifth, it recognizes the justice and need of greatly sharpened fiduciary responsibility, so that more conscientiousness in handling other people's money may be developed; so that legalistic loopholes, loose corporation and stock techniques, security manipulations, nepotism, misleading statements, managerial monopoly, salary and bonus grabs and other questionable practices will be curbed—and really curbed.

Sixth, it recognizes the obligation to deal more frankly with the public and the Government, with more truthful sales representation; more informative labels; less bombastic, ambiguous claims; more careful adjustment to consumer needs; manufacturing for genuine use and service rather than for tricky sales and price psychology. This again is a well-known, first-class business principle.

There are only two clouds on the horizon—the threat of sit-down strikes, which in my opinion will disappear as soon as the rank and file of business men (as in England) accept unionization and collective bargaining as inherently wise and sound, and, second, the threat of runaway prices, whose outcome again depends on industry's wisdom and restraint. The law of supply and demand is still implacable, swift and sure. Raising wages 5 per cent and prices 12 per cent (as some have done) is only an invitation to another session in the woodshed.

The Time Is Ripe

From the New York World-Telegram.

ATTORNEY - GENERAL CUMMING long-threatened suit to dissolve the Aluminum Co. of America, and his reorganization of the Justice Department's anti-trust division under able young Robert H. Jackson are heartening signs that the Government proposes to do something about a situation against which economists have been crying alarm for months. We refer to the danger of unwarranted price rises and a threatened boom-and-bust finale to recovery.

The Mellon company, long under fire for alleged control of aluminum resources and prices, as charged with "oppressive and unreasonable price-fixing" in having raised prices despite an increase in earnings from $9,571,000 in 1935 to $20,866,000 in 1936. If that is true, it is important to aluminum consumers. But it is more important that in acting now in this single case, the Government acts also against a tendency toward price-fixing.

Too long the Government has looked upon the doings of monopolists as acts of God. We have had an anti-trust policy, to be sure. But the courts have bedeviled the Sherman Act by confusing decisions for so long that a successful suit is a gamble, particularly since such suits are costly affairs. Now that the Supreme Court has broadened the definition of interstate commerce and applied it to manufacturing, at least in basic relations, chances for success appear better.

But one, or even a number of anti-trust actions, are not enough to protect our future against a runaway price boom. The Government's drive should be both intensive and extensive. Every available Government weapon should be invoked to curb profiteering. We have monetary, fiscal and tariff as well as anti-trust controls. If all these are not powerful enough, then Congress should create new powers.

As the matter stands, certain monopolistic industries spreading across state and even national lines have within themselves the power to set prices at will. It could be said of them, as Justice Stone said of the Supreme Court, that the only check upon the exercise of power is their "own sense of self-restraint." Today strong influences, such as higher wage pressure and foreign buying, tax that self-restraint. Some have yielded to temptation. Unless the Government steps in, the yielding may become epidemic.

There is only one power that can prevent another calamitous 1929, and that is the Government.

ROBBING THE AUTO GRAVEYARDS

From the New Yorker.

OLD, dead automobiles, moldering in roadside graveyards, have long been a very risome sight in this country. We peer into glade and glen, and find bodies decomposing there, stripped of tires and batteries. Foreigners, visiting us, are appalled at the spectacle, and write letters home to their papers about American wealth and waste.

But today these carcasses lie uneasily in their burial grounds, preyed upon by grave robbers of a new sort. The price of scrap iron and steel has risen tremendously. It seems there is a European demand: iron is wanted for the wars, and the stealthy junkman arrives to pluck the ancient Overland from the caress of raspberry vine and nettle. At his approach, field mice flee the nest in the cushions. Iron for the war!

Somewhere a peasant saves his bronze spade for the government collector; somewhere a bride melts down her wedding ring for God and country; somewhere some old family sedan goes to its great adventure. The iron we could not quite dispense will serve destruction yet. Scrap iron, scrap steel, scrap gold. Scrap life.

ULSTER, ENGLAND COOL TO VALERA NEW CONSTITUTION

Free State Plan, Including Northern Ireland Severing Ties With Britain, Faces Fight.

'EIRE' NEW NAME FOR THE COUNTRY

Dublin Press Says Proposals Do Not Change Status in Association of Commonwealths.

By the Associated Press.

DUBLIN, Irish Free State, May 1—President Eemon de Valera's new constitution, declaring all Ireland a "sovereign and independent democratic state" and leaving the door open for union with Northern Ireland, appeared headed tonight for determined opposition from Ulster and England.

Ulster, in Northern Ireland, separated politically from the Free State, received the proposal coolly. English newspapers were unsympathetic.

"We definitely prefer our position as citizens of the United Kingdom," said the Ulster Commerce Minister, John Milne Barbour. Some newspapers of Ulster termed the new Constitution a "challenge" to the British Government.

Ulster, which has a Government named by the King, has a Parliament separate fro mthe Free State; although for Ulster certain elgislative and fiscal powers are reserved to the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

The Free State, under its present Constitution, is a co-equal member of the community of nations forming the British Commonwealth of Nations. The English Governor General for the Free State, last executive link with the crown, last December signed a Free State bill abolishing his job.

In the Free State the Dublin press generally regarded De Valera's proposal today as not changing the existing association of the Free State in the British Commonwealth of Nations.

The new Constitution, which will be put up to the voters ltae in June, declares the "inalienable" right of the Irish people to choose their own form of government and provides for election of a President for a seven-year term by direct vote. Makes no mention of Great Britain or the British King, and designates Gaelic as the national language. Previously Irish and English had equal status.

The proposed Constitution proclaims the national territory as "the whole of Ireland, its islands and territorial seas." It is designed to require no alteration should Northern Ireland join with the Free State.

De Valera designtaed "Eire" (pronounced like "Erie") as the new name for his country. "Eire" is the ancient Gaelic name for Ireland. The Constitution prohibits titles of nobility.

Englishmen pointed out that a recent external relations act in Ireland recognizes the King in external matters. The change of the name of Ireland to "Eire" was interpreted in London as meaning all Ireland was united spiritually although actually separated.

LANGUAGE OF OSAGES PRESERVED ON RECORDS

History and Folk Lore Read Into Machine by Tribesmen at Tulsa, Ok.

By the Associated Press.

TULSA, Ok., May 1.—To make sure the language of their dwindling race will not die, leaders of the Osages have made a permanent record of the lore of their tribe.

John Joseph Matthews, author who lives among his tribesmen near Pawhuska, prepared the history and folk lore, which the most important members of the tribe read into a recording machine. Records are to be preserved by the American Indian Exposition here, Smithsonian Institute and Yale University.

Foremost of the band which came here from the reservation this week was Chief Fred Lookout, dignified, blanketed, two long rolls of black hair hanging down over his white man's coat.

"It is good," he said in high-pitched Osage monotone.

"Long after I and my people have passed away men may say, 'That is the voice of an Osage; that is the language of a great people who lived there before we came.'

"There are many roads for the people of the earth. There is the Osage road and the white man's road. We try to follow our road but it is dim. We could follow the road of our fathers if many things did not pull at our shirts as we pass along."

Matthews, brown of skin, Oxford of manner, presented the Indians, old men in business suits, their hair braided, Indian women in bright flowered dresses, each with the blanket that knows no season.

There was Fidelis Che-shewa-kepah, handsomest man of the tribe. He wore tiny gold earrings, around his hips was a red blanket, about his neck an orange silk scarf.

Truly Indian was Pasatopa, beaded and feathered, the oldest of all. Deaf and dumb, he conversed animatedly with his fellows in the graceful Indian sign language.

What the Depression Has Done to "Middletown"

for horses and smart horse shows. They live in a suburb of estates and many of them have their private airplanes. "It is the new note of a more self-conscious leisure built upon endowed wealth, and obviously expensive, that the younger generation is bringing to Middletown."

But what is more important, this group—the members of the top two strata—know exactly what they want. They are opposed to everything that may interfere in any way with the system that has permitted them to make satisfactory profits. The Lynds point to a curious irony. It is this:

"The chance for the mass of the population to 'go up in the world' to affluence and independence appears to be shrinking noticeably. It so happens, however, that those who still retain the best chance to rise in the world, to skim the cream from the economy, also control the press, the radio, the movies and the other formal media of diffusion of attitudes and opinions. They are thus in a position . . . to tell the cityful of people largely living off the skimmed milk of the economy what to believe."

So far, according to these students of Middletown, there is little evidence of any tendency on the part of the mass of the workers to question the opinions and attitudes dictated from above. Here and there they found resentment, and bitterness, a sympathy with what Father Coughlin and Huey Long were saying over the radio; but for the most part through the depression Middletown workers clung to their cars—symbol of leisure and independence—and hoped desperately for a job.

The Roosevelt Exception.

The outstanding exception to this generalization was, of course, the re-election of President Roosevelt last November. The "controlling" group sought in every possible way to bring about Roosevelt's defeat. Middletown is in a county that has repeatedly rolled up Republican majorities, but when the votes were counted last November, the President had received 59 per cent of the total cast. The newspapers and other reflectors of the opinions of the "controlling" group tended to play down the significance of the election, according to the Lynds. What is more, a member of the "family" regarded as Republican by long tradition and inheritance, had prominently identified himself with the Democratic party after the victory of 1932. As one observer put it, "they miss no bets, playing both parties."

Primarily, what the depression did to the people of Middletown, according to the Lynds, was to shatter a sense of cultural coherence that still had been strong in 1925. Even though the religious tenets of 50 years before had lost their hold, people in 1925 still believed that some guiding force determined the course of the community which was inevitably in the direction of progress. Now that is gone. While publicly they profess the same resounding credo of the 1920s, many business men confessed to the observers that "we're still scared out of our wits."

No Concrete Predictions.

The Lynds refrain from making any concrete predictions as to the future. But they see in certain attitudes and reactions the potentialities of Fascism. Chiefly this is in the latent desire of the "controlling" business group for a "strong man" as unifying force that might restore their troubled world to its old simplicities, resolve their universe once again into its primary elements. And lying at hand like "tinder" are certain latent racial and religious prejudices that could be inflamed overnight, the Lynds report.

The Old Formulas Still.

"On the surface, then," they conclude, "Middletown is meeting such present issues and present situations as it cannot escape by attempting to revert to the old formulas. We must always believe that things are good and that they will be better, and we must stress their hopeful rather than their pessimistic aspects. This leads to the stating of such social problems as may arise defensively and negatively—rather than to engaging in a positive program for social analysis and reconstruction. It is still true in 1936 that, to Middletown, such things as poverty or a depression are simply exceptions to a normally good state of affairs; and anything that goes wrong is the fault of some individuals (or collectively of 'human nature') rather than anything amiss with the organization and the functioning of the culture. The system is fundamentally right and only the persons wrong; the cures must be changes in personal attitudes, not in the institutions themselves. . . ."

Habit and routine are strong forces in Middletown. If there is no major impact from the outside, Middletown may go on adjusting painfully and awkwardly to change when it cannot be avoided; but if there should be some drastic change outside the community itself, then a sudden shift might occur, the Lynds suggest with the "controlling" group moving by any means whatsoever to consolidate their control. This is only to suggest the barest outline of a long book which is singularly rich with material on the state of America in the year 1937.

300 U. S. ARMY PLANES CALLED TO WAR GAMES

To Concentrate in California During Navy Maneuvers in Pacific.

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., May 1.—While the United States fleet continued its maneuvers in the Pacific today, 300 Army Air Corps planes headed for California to participate in the largest concentration yet held on the coast by the Air Corps.

For more than three weeks, army aviators from all Air Corps bases in the country will be divided into defense and attack groups and engage in extensive war maneuvers. Some 350 officers and 2000 men will participate. Most of the planes are due tomorrow and Monday at various base points from March Field, at Riverside, to Hamilton Field, near San Francisco.

No connection between the Navy and Air Corps maneuvers has been announced, but the air forces are massing in California just at the time the fleet is in the midst of its Pacific games. The six-week navy meneuvers are now in the third week.

In ordering the Air Corps units recently to start for California, officials at Washington said the speed with which the planes could reach their destinations from their home bases would be a major factor in the maneuvers.

Center of the war practice will be Muroc Dry Lake in the Mojave desert, which has served for some time as an Air Corps bombing and gunnery range. The great dry lake bed will be cast in the role of an attacked city.

The Sixty-third Coast Artillery will participate in the mock battles, having headquarters at both Muroc Lake and Hamilton Field.

In charge of the maneuvers is Major-General F. M. Andrews, commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force. Directing the attacking force is the first wing commander, Brigadier-General Delos C. Emmons of March Field, and in charge of the defending force is Brigadier-General G. C. Brant, Langley Field, Va., commander of the second wing.

Gen. Andrews and his staff of 13 are scheduled to arrive at March Field Monday afternoon from Langley Field.

The units will be distributed in California as follows:

March Field — Fourteen officers and 30 men from Langley Field plus 10 officers and 63 men permanently stationed at March Field.

Hamilton Field—Seven officers and 30 men from Langley Field.

Fresno — Seventh Bombardment Group, 43 officers, 244 men and 13 bombers from Hamilton Field.

Stockton — One bombardment squadron, 30 officers, 163 men and 13 bombers from March Field.

Merced — Two bombardment squadrons, 30 officers, 162 men and 13 bombers from Hamilton Field.

Bakersfield—Third attack group headquarters and one squadron, 42 officers, 255 men and 33 attack planes from Barksdale Field, La.

Delano—One attack squadron, 30 officers, 177 men and 28 attack planes, from Barksdale Field.

Visalia—One attack squadron, 30 officers, 177 men and 28 attack planes from March Field.

Muroc Dry Lake—First pursuit group headquarters and three pursuit squadrons, 102 officers, 505 men and 89 pursuit planes from Barksdale Field and Selfridge Field, Mich.

Senate Wants Secret Vote on Court Proposal

stage prop for many a political harangue, as effective as the post-Civil War bloody shirt. The Southerners have made its rhetorical defense a fixture on their campaign tours as they orated on the glories of states' rights and the dangers of Negro suffrage. Such men as Bailey of North Carolina, Smith of South Carolina, Byrd and Glass of Virginia, Connally of Texas, want no change in the Constitution either by amendment or by interpretation.

Then there is the legalistic view taken by a group of opponents, Senators like George of Georgia, Van Nuys of Indiana, Clark of Missouri and Wheeler of Montana, who fear the possibilities of the precedent to be set. These men voted for much of the New Deal program during the first Roosevelt term, but consider the court plan a step toward dictatorship by the executive.

A third group of opponents can be classified by their own economic background and that of their constituents. Such men as Gerry of Rhode Island, Copeland of New York, Moore of New Jersey and Tydings of Maryland have little in common except the Democratic label with such geographic Democrats as Connally of Texas and Overton of Louisiana.

The 16 Republicans against the proposal have about the same objections to the bill as the Democratic opponents, plus purely partisan reasons. The positions of Minority Leader McNary of Oregon, White and Hale of Maine, Austin of Vermont, Bridges of New Hampshire, Gibson of Vermont, Lodge of Massachusetts, Townsend of Delaware, Davis of Pennsylvania, Vandenberg of Michigan and Steiwer of Oregon can be explained by political and geographic reasons and perhaps the same may be said of Borah. The prospective votes of four others, Johnson of California, Capper of Kansas and Nye and Frazier of North Dakota occasioned no great surprise although they had supported most of the New Deal economic legislation. Their position is like that of Wheeler of Montana and Burke of Nebraska, both of whom had been classed as New Deal Democrats during the first terms.

This exposition leaves out the Democratic Senators who are noncommittal on the court plan. Their plight was discussed in this correspondence two weeks ago. Since then the number has dropped from 13 to 12 through the death of Bachman of Tennessee, who was listed as one who probably would vote reluctantly for the White House bill.

Bachman's successor will be appointed by Gov. Browning, who was in Washington this week. While here he conferred with President Roosevelt, but before the White House meeting he told reporters that he personally favored the court plan. It is assumed here that his appointee will reflect his own and the President's views.

The prospective gain here has been offset by the announcements of McCarren of Nevada, Hatch of New Mexico and O'Mahoney of Wyoming, that they were against the President's plan to appoint six new Justices, but would look favorably on a proposal to increase the court by two Justices. Each has his own amendment before the Senate Judiciary Committee, of which they are members.

An adverse report by the Judiciary Committee would be a hard dose for the Democratic regulars who are personally against the bill, but who had hoped to explain their vote for it by saying that they had supported the committee's recommendation. It is doubtful, however, whether the Roosevelt forces will maintain their confident attitude of "no compromise." Even if the committee failed to agree on a committee bill, amendments will be offered on the floor. The President has proved himself an able horse trader, and has repeatedly asked Congress for more than he expected to get.

Correspondents' "Book."

It is on this basis that newspaper correspondents in Washington have made their "book" on the Senate vote. The betting at the National Press Club on the final administration bill would allow for modification of the White House bill which accompanied the President's special message asking for authority to appoint six new Justices. The "book," which is now closed, permitted each participant to select the number of votes he thought the administration bill would receive on the final roll call—announced pairs to count as positive votes. The range is from 51 to 66 votes for the bill. No one was willing to wager a dollar on a number less than a majority.

If the President's plan is defeated it will be by the narrowest of votes. Should division be equal, Vice-President Garner would have to break the tie. He has friends in the opposition camp, such as Glass of Virginia, Connnally of Texas and Clark of Missouri. But he has been allied with the Democratic leadership for years, and knows that personal views frequently must be subordinated to party decisions and discipline if the Democratic organization is to continue to do business at the same old stand.

Tom Pendergast at Philadelphia said:

"The successful politician is the man who keeps his word and lets his friends, and his enemies, know where he stands."

Would "Grin and Bear It."

The Democratic leaders of the Senate, Garner's closest personal and political friends, have come out unequivocally for the President's plan—Robinson, Harrison, Sheppard and Byrnes. They cannot change their position now. Garner has attended the White House strategy session on the bill. By casting the deciding vote against the proposal, he would be turning his back on his President and his warmest friends.

A Vice-President cannot procrastinate when the time comes for him to cast a deciding vote, as Vice-President Dawes learned when he arrived too late at the Senate to vote favorably on President Coolidge's nomination of Charles B. Warren for Attorney-General.

Garner has made no public statement of his possible position.. But those who know him are convinced that should John Crockett, the reading clerk, put him on the spot with the announcement that the roll call showed the Senate evenly divided, he would "grin and bear it" for the good of the party and save the situation for Mr. Roosevelt.

CLARENCE E. CARTER HEAD OF HISTORIANS

Elected at Close of Convention of Mississippi Valley Association.

Clarence E. Carter, editor of the Territorial Papers, a publication of the State Department in Washington, D. C., was elected president of the Mississippi Valley Historical Association which closed its thirtieth annual meeting yesterday at the Coronado Hotel. Unable to leave Washington, he was not present at the convention.

In all, 247 persons registered at the gathering, the largest number at any convention of the association.

Three new members elected to the executive committee were Theodore C. Blegen, superintendent of the Minnesota Historical Society; W. B. Hesseltine of the University of Wisconsin, and Elmer Ellis of the University of Missouri.

Three new members also were added to the board of editors, which publishes a historical journal. They were Miss Grace L. Nute, librarian of the Minnesota Historical Society; John D. Hicks of the University of Wisconsin, and Beverley W. Bond Jr. of the University of Cincinnati.

Speaking on "Vicissitudes of Early Reconstruction Farming in the Lower Mississippi Valley," B. L. Wiley of Hattiesburg (Miss.) State Teachers' College, described the Northerners who came South in the wake of the Federal army during the Civil War to assume the role of farmers as in general "an unsavory lot."

Their chief motive was the desire to acquire qnick and easy fortunes, he continued. Many of them were unscrupulous adventurers, gambling at great risk for high stakes, having little regard for either the freedmen they employed or for the Government whose protection they vociferously demanded, he added.

A difficulty peculiar to planters residing in areas lying on the outskirts of Federal-controlled portions of the Mississippi Valley was the constant danger of raids originating in the Confederacy, he said. Some plantations were visited as many as three or four times a year by marauding parties of soldiers or guerrillas.

The Southerners seemed to derive particular pleasure from pillaging the establishments of Northern lessees, he said. But sometimes the victims of these depredations were native planters who had incurred the wrath of the soldiers by taking the oath of allegiance to the Union Government and accepting the system of free labor.

She incursions from "rebeldom" were usually destructive in nature, he pointed out. Poultry and livestock were killed or stolen, Negroes were seized, crops were destroyed and houses were burned. Sometimes planters and overseers were murdered. In 1864, the frequency and violence of guerrilla raids caused an abandonment before the sumemr was over of one-third of the land originally leased in the Vicksburg district.

Other speakers yesterday discussed the progress of curriculum making in Missouri, the political significance of the Missouri Controversy from 1819 to 1821 and historical implications of early marriage records of Jackson County, Missouri.

CONGRESSIONAL CONFEREES AGREE ON AIR MAIL FUND

Compromise Reached on Item in Treasury-Postoffice Appropriation Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, May 1. — Congressional conferees reached agreement today on the $1,505,000,000 Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill by compromising increases voted by the Senate for domestic air mail service.

The Senate had added $537,000 for domestic air mail service. It was forced to give way because the total exceeded the limit fixed by law for carrying air mail.

Members of the conference group would not disclose the details of the compromise, but said it would permit most of the extensions of service contemplated in the Senate bill. The specific extensions were not written into the bill.

Senate increases of $640,000 for ocean air mail also were approved by the conferees.

WOMEN VOTERS' DELEGATES

Missouri to Be Represented at Washington Meeting.

Missouri delegates to the General Council of the League of Women Voters, which convenes at Washington tomorrow for a three-day session, will be Mrs. Roscoe Anderson of Webster Groves, Miss Jeanne Blythe, St. Louis; Mrs. George Gellhorn, St. Louis; Mrs. J. Hardin Smith, Clayton, and Mrs. Charles S. Demaree, Kansas City.

Subjects to be discussed at the council meeting will include proposals for court reform, collective bargaining between employers and employes, food and drug legislation, foreign affairs, methods of eliminating the patronage system, and general governmental problems.

COCHRAN WINS AGE LIMIT RISE FOR ESTATE TAX EXAMINERS

Seeks to Give Middle-Aged Persons Chance for Government Jobs.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 1.—At the insistence of Representative John J. Cochran of St. Louis, the Civil Service Commission has raised the age limit for applicants for jobs as estate tax examiners in the Internal Revenue Bureau from 45 to 53 years. Cochran's action, caused by the commission's announcement that applicants must not have reached their forty-fifth birthday, was part of his campaign to give middle-aged persons equal opportunities with younger applicants for governmental positions.

"If you could read the mail my constituents are writing," Cochran told the commission, "stating corporations are telling them, men and women in the forties, that they are too old to apply for a job, you would realize the situation that confronts this country."

The commission replied that as a result of Cochran's objections, the Treasury Department had agreed to increase the age limit.

In announcing the commission's response to his letter, Cochran told the House yesterday that he hoped other Government agencies would not ask the commission to place age limits under 55 years.

MOUNT HOLYOKE CENTENNIAL TO BE OBSERVED THIS WEEK

Hundreds of Alumnae to Return to Women's College for Celebration of Founding.

SOUTH HADLEY, Mass., May 1.—Mount Holyoke College alumnae will return here next week to help observe the centenary of one of the country's pioneer institutions of higher learning for women.

Hundreds of graduates will assemble Friday and Saturday to honor the memory of Mary Lyon, New England feminist who founded the college a century ago, and to pay tribute to Dr. Mary E. Wooley, college president who retires this year.

A highlight of the observance will be a garden party historical skit in which costumed students will depict the seminary opening day of 100 years ago.

Dr. Wooley, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Dr. Helen Munchow, of Chicago—the latter two Mount Holyoke alumnae—will speak at a symposium Friday morning.

ZIONIST SPEAKER AT PUBLIC MEETING TONIGHT AT Y. M. H. A.

Four From Chicago, One From Kansas City to Discuss Achievements in Palestine.

Four Jewish leaders from Chicago and one from Kansas City, Mo., will speak tonight on the Zionist movement at a public meeting at 8:15 o'clock in the Y. M. H. A. auditorium, Union boulevard and Enright avenue. The meeting is sponsored by the Zionist Organization of St. Louis and three other Jewish societies.

The visiting speakers are: Max Shulman, Chicago lawyer and vice-president of the Zionist Organization of America; Rabbi A. E. Abramowitz of Chicago; William M. Katz, president of the Chicago Zionist District; H. Steinberg, president of the Chicago Jewish National Fund Council; and Harry Friedberg of Kansas City, also a vice-president of the national Zionist organization.

They will discuss the cultural and economic achievements of the Jewish people in Palestine.

VENETIAN PAINTING DISCUSION AT ART MUSEUM THIS WEEK

Miss Jaquelin Ambler to Talk; Miss Mary Powell Will Speak on Medieval Galleries.

Miss Mary Powell will speak on medieval art galleries at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning at City Art Museum. Miss Jaquelin Ambler will discuss design in the contemporary world at 2:30 p. m. the same day.

Other activities for the week include a discussion of Venice and Venetian painting by Miss Ambler at 1:30 o'clock and museum games at 2, both supervised by Miss Betty Greenfield. Miss Powell will conduct the story hour at 2:30. Miss Ambler will speak to older boys and girls on Corot and the Barbizon painters at 2:30 o'clock, and Miss Powell will conclude the week's activities with a talk on eighteenth century rooms and their furnishings at 3:30 o'clock.

How Spanish Government Spurs Peasants

in the Levante, where a course of practical agriculture will be given in the months of April, May and June. The agricultural co-operatives and peasant syndicates will select the workers to attend the course. Other model farms are to be started in the districts of Albacete, Ciudad-Real, Cuenca, Jaen and Madrid. They will not only teach but do experimental work to find the best crops and manures for the district.

Difficulties Caused by War.

At present, with war going on, a great deal depends on the activities of the rural workers. The troops must be fed, and with exchange difficulties in the way of buying abroad as well as the risks run by food ships coming to the Spanish Government ports, Spain must be more self-supporting than ever before. Substitutes for foods that were formerly imported must be found at home; more wheat must be sown, since some of the former wheat supply is now in rebel territory (Estremadura), and production must be intensified.

The Minister of Agriculture, Vincent Uribe, is doing everything possible to assist and protect the peasants, furnishing them with seed and fertilizer and encouraging them to feel that their interests are at one with those of the Republic.

As always, the country people are naturally conservative and afraid of innovations and must be gradually educated. But every consideration for their projudices is shown, and, above all, they are made to feel that the town workers are their brothers and in no way their enemies. The town workers are also being taught that the peasants are never to be molested, and, far from being considered inferior, must be treated as honored citizens. There are many pro-peasant posters, with slogans, such as "A hoe is as valuable as a gun."

WOMAN, 26, WINS SWEDISH RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP

Miss Ella Rolvaag One of Five Chosen by American-Scandinavian Foundation.

NEW YORK, May 1.—A 26-year-old woman who teaches languages at St. Olaf College in Northfield, Minn., is one of five American-born persons to receive fellowships in Scandinavian universities from the American-Scandinavian Foundation. She is Miss Ella Valborg Rolvaag, daughter of the late Ole Edvart Rolvaag, who wrote the book, "Giants in the Earth."

Miss Rolvaag will search for hitherto unpublished material on the early life of Ibsen at the University of Oslo.

Fellowships were awarded also to Albin T. Anderson, 26 years old, San Jose, Cal., a candidate for a Ph.D. in the University of California, who will do research work on the life of Axel Oxenstierna, the Swedish diplomat of the early seventeenth century, in the Riksarkiv at Stockholm and in the university library at Upsala.

Lester E. Hanson, 24, Graceville, Minn., graduate assistant at Cornell University, who will survey Danish breeding centers, feeding stations and marketing methods of animal husbandry.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

THREE BOOKS ON SPAIN AND THE PRESENT WAR

INVERTEBRATE SPAIN. By Jose Ortega y Gasset. (W. W. Norton & Co., New York.)

UNHAPPY SPAIN. By Pierre Crabites. (Louisiana State University Press, Baton Rouge, La.)

NO PASARAN! By Upton Sinclair. (Published by the Author, Pasadena, Cal.)

PUBLICATION of three more books has been inspired by the war in Spain. As listed above, the first two attempt to explain the causes of the conflict, one in terms of the people's character, the other by an historical approach. The third is a short novel setting forth the Government's case.

The author of "Invertebrate Spain" is a distinguished Spanish philosopher, educator and editor, whose "Revolt of the Masses" was widely praised. A supporter of the Republic, he left Spain because of illness soon after the war began. His book consists of essays published in Spain several years ago, most of them pertinent to the conflict, but others of only remote bearing.

Ortega holds a most unflattering opinion of his country and its people. He sees Spain as a disintegrating nation—"except for a few fleeting moments, the whole of Spanish history has been the history of a long decay." He elaborates the point in many a striking passage. One reason for Spain's weakness, he says, is the trend to regionalism and separatism, the absence of national unity. Another is the scarcity of leaders and the incapacity of the few who have developed. The people are a mass of individualists, who reject any leadership that does appear. And the Spaniard's pride, "our national passion, our greatest sin," refuses all innovation and progress.

As a result, he says, Spain is a sick nation, in both its political life and in its social forms; "the people as a people are disarticulated and invertebrate." The footnotes by the translator, Mildred Adams, point out that the war now bears out all that this prophet of doom has said.

The second writer, for 25 years American member of the international court in Egypt and now a lecturer at Louisiana State University, also finds Spain menaced by stagnation and spiritual torpidity, but his thesis is mainly historical. The greater part of his book is given to tracing the country's turbulent history since the restoration of King Ferdinand VII, in 1814. In a few chapters at the end, he draws his conclusions.

One strong unsettling influence, Judge Crabites finds, has been "Grand Orient" Masonry, described as a political and anti-religious order, which the writer is careful to distinguish from British and American Freemasonry. Its century and more of machinations paved the way, he says, for the Communists, whom he considers the arch-villains of Spain's tragedy.

Upton Sinclair, on the other hand, sees the conflict as a struggle between democracy and Fascism. With his usual adeptness at presenting a political or economic tract in fiction form, he creates a hero, a young American, who listens to all the arguments, pro and con, on the war, th reaches his decision and goes to fight for the loyalists at Madrid, and to shout their slogan, "No Pasaran" (they shall not pass).

Had Lung Power And Agility

MIRABEAU was the orator of the French Revolution. His distinction rests on his golden voice and persuasive powers. He was, too, a patriot, a statesman of parts, if the parts may be picked, and something of a rascal. He was a notorious squire of dames, no more or no less moral than his contemporaries, but possibly more than commonly successful. When he achieved his brief power in the Assembly he had behind him a record which even the France of 1789 accounted bad, but he was hardly accountable for what his upbringing and the times made of him.

It would seem he was born to be a rebel. His father was an aristocrat who liked to call himself "Friend of Mankind," but was less than friend to his own family. For what was little more than boyish spirits the Marquis put his son in prison with a lettre de cachet, the first of a series that ultimately ran to 60. A great part of Mirabeau's first 28 years was spent under formal restraint. Between whiles, and even in prison, he was able to find obliging women. He married an heiress for her money—he had none—and betrayed her and was betrayed by her. Both soon found other company.

Surprising indeed if high principles were to be found in a man with such a background! Nevertheless he had a right feeling of protest against a wrong system, he had sympathy for the victims; he rode the crest of revolution. But while he was president of the Jacobins, he was taking the pay of Louis XVI. While speaking against the King in one way, he was striving to save him in another. There is no telling just where he did stand—he once sent word to Louis that he hoped to be able to preserve to him his absolutism. While Mirabeau lived, he was able to maintain his equivocal balances with lung power and agility; after he died, the Reign of Terror put an end to all refinements of philosophy. There was no middle of the road then. The issues were direct. They always are at a showdown.

The new account of this man, by Pierre Nezelof, a Frenchman, is a fine piece of biographical writing, lucid and objective. Nezelof forbears to rewrite the history of the French Revolution except narrowly as it touches his subject. He tells the story well. He has, however, omitted his authorities, a fault, even though there is no reason to doubt the accuracy of any significant detail of the presentation.

The translation from the French is by Warre B. Wells.

Loses the World To Save His Soul

BY DAY AND BY NIGHT. By Johan Bojer. (D. Appleton-Century Company, Inc., New York).

JOHAN BOJER writes again of man's destiny, of his search for the meaning of Christianity in a self-seeking world.

Lief Sund, a peasant, becomes a millionaire through the invention and sale of a machine gun, then realizes the significance of his invention and returns to his native town to seek expiation for his crime against humanity. By night he is haunted with dreams of the faces of men dying on battlefields and with the pleas of a wraith-like laypreacher for his promise to stop perfecting the gun. By day these promises are forgotten in the desire to help his town by constructing a munitions factory and to establish himself with the citizens who snubbed him when he was a poor errand boy.

The story of his attempts to escape these conflicting forces is sympathetically conceived and skillfully worked out. At length he destroys his perfected gun, divorces his second wife and tries to build his life again as a humble carpenter. But the citizens who once honored him with a torchlight parade cannot let him rest in peace and poverty. At his trial on a fiendishly conceived charge against him and his sister, the people give vent to all their feelings of jealousy and disappointment. This time he seeks a sure escape in death.

There is more than a touch of Ibsen in this powerful story. The clarity and simplicity with which it is told, the spiritual conflict and social problems to which it gives rise attune it to the traditional Scandinavian genre. Those who enjoyed Bojer's former works will not be disappointed in his latest, and those who are unfamiliar with his writing will thrill to the discovery of one of the most sensitive and skillful contemporary novelists.

Tales by Werfel

TWILIGHT OF A WORLD. By Franz Werfel. Translated by H. T. Lowe-Porter. (The Viking Press, New York.)

IN a thoughtful preface Mr. Werfel explains that he has joined these eight stories in one volume because they all reflect, in some way, the spiritual catastrophe experienced by those who saw the fall of the old Austrian Empire. At first the reader, impressed with the author's study of the individual, cannot see this wider implication. Gradually, however, it becomes clear. There is about all these stories a suggestion of the rebellion, the bitterness, and the numb despair of the lost.

Without exception they are profound psychological studies. The same theme is repeated in a dozen variations—the struggle of the sensitive soul with the dark forces of his own subconscious. There is the guilty man whose guilt destroys not his enemy, but himself, the father who repels the son he loves, and the forger-of-pictures whose cleverness poisons his own genius.

In the hands of a lesser writer these stories could have been only so many abnormal case histories. But Franz Werfel is no ordinary writer, and he offers here a collection of genuine artistic merit. There is one exception. "The House of Mourning" is vulgar, even indecent, in a shallow, cynica' way, that is not worthy of its author.

The little introduction which precedes each tale is unnecessary, giving one the disillusioned feeling of having been taken backstage before the show.

An Artistic Historian

ANDRE MAUROIS

Some More Marital Difficulties

OF GREAT RICHES. By Rose Franken. (Longmans, Green & Co., New York.)

"OF GREAT RICHES" proves Rose Franken, who wrote "Another Language," to be a better dramatist than novelist, for its excellence lies in isolated scenes, in extraordinarily witty dialogue and clear-cut characterization; its weakness in the connective tissue. This weakness is so obvious at first that the reader who doesn't care for the woman's magazine type of literature may abandon the book after 10 pages,—and so miss a deeply-moving and soundly conceived drama of married life.

After a most informal introduction, Denny and Theodora are married and, in spite of Denny's silly mother, live happily together in a crowded Manhattan apartment. Timmy is born; they take a house in Westchester for the summer; they laugh and quarrel lightly and lead the quiet, confidently joyous existence of the happily married. But the stream suddenly deepens, for they have a baby girl who dies after a few months. So great is Theodora's grief that she finds no thrill in a magazine's acceptance of a little skit she had written and Denny had secretly submitted, and only for lack of anything to do, begins a novel. No one is more proud of its overwhelming success than Denny, but Theodora, gradually losing her perspective, sees in his disapproval of her sudden change to a pseudo-sophisticated authoress of extravagant coiffure and doubtful associates, merely jealousy and pettiness.

Seemingly they grow miles apart, and Theodora is considering divorce when she learns that Denny has been ordered to Arizona for his health. The sudden weakness in her knees and palpitation of her heart tell her just how far they have drifted, which is merely to the end of the unbreakable tether which binds them to each other.

The minor characters are rendered tenderly human, and the conventional ones, satirically amusing. But clear as they are, they are no more deftly depicted than their moods. For herein Miss Franken truly excels. She has created an emotional richness, even a spiritual grandeur, despite an engaging but trivial coating of delicate horseplay and too-clever wisecracking.

—Sophia Fox Kenamore.

"Bounty" Fans Take Notice!

BEAT TO QUARTERS. By C. S. Forester (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

READERS of the "Bounty" saga will welcome this story of H. M. S. Lydia which sailed from England at the beginning of the nineteenth century on a secret mission to the Pacific Coast of Central America. Her master, like the famous Bligh, was a man up from the ranks, without influence at the Admiralty, and therefore strictly obedient to the letter of his orders. In captain Hornblower Mr. Forester has drawn a striking portrait of a good man resolutely subordinating every human impulse to a stern and selfish concept of duty.

The narrative of "Beat to Quarters" is simple but effective. It has to do with mutiny, sea-fights, barbarity, intrigue, chivalry and love. The Lydia's adventure is imagined by the author as forming a tiny part of the great Napoleonic wars. In his two major adventures the captain does not dare to be a man, but takes refuge from personal responsibility behind Admiralty orders. Once he lets a mad half-breed tyrant practice cruelty, unreproved, for the success of his mission. Once he cannot accept the love of the beautiful Lady Barbara because of apprehension for the safety of his career. Hornblower is brave with bull-dog bravery, true with round-head loyalty. It is his tragedy that he lacks the clear-eyed, cavalier independence that comes from a gentleman's self-respect.

Mr. Forester must have studied naval warfare very carefully before writing the splendid account of the Lydia's duel with the Natividad. He is thoroughly conversant with the vocabulary of the sea, and has remarkable power of description.

From the Britons To Mrs. Simpson

THE MIRACLE OF ENGLAND. By Andre Maurois. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THE English scene still holds its fascination for M. Maurois. His interest runs back to the days of the war, when, because of his understanding of the language, he became attached, as French liaison officer, to the British troops. Out of his war experiences came his two novels about thoroughly English Col. Bramble. Since then he has written lives of Byron, Shelley, Disraeli and Dickens, and a volume on some of the later English poets and prophets.

It has taken him six years to pen answers to the self-propounded questions: "Why did a small island which, after all, is very unimportant, invent new institutions and a new form of freedom; and how is it that, since the Greeks, this has been the only new form of human society?" Also, how is it "that the people who live on that small island have conquered one-fourth of this planet?"

The answer to the first question is found in the continuity and flexibility of English civilization. Progress was by compromise and the deliberate, disciplined system of trial and error. The slowly growing institution lasts, the spurting one passes. "There has never been a real revolution in England."

Some of us would amend all this by saying that by somehow "muddling through" today's English democracy has been evolved rather than invented. It cannot, however, be denied that English statesmen, even the muddlers, always seem to be following freedom's single star.

Constant, tenacious experimentation with the forms of even greater freedom have actually created a new society, imperfect, of course, but ever on the march and headed courageously for the distant and perhaps unattainable star.

The second question the author answers by saying that because of England's isolated, easily defended geographical position she has been able to concentrate so much of her resource upon her fleet and thus control the seas. She has been able to hold her conquests by her moderation toward conquered peoples. He seems to think England's greatest present problem, the tremendously difficult one of India, will be met by a progressive rather than a sudden solution.

Deftly hitting the high spots with the torch of clarity, M. Maurois lights the whole English pageant, from the dim days of Stonehenge to the feverish times of Mrs. Simpson. His real achievement is that, in a single volume, he enables us to see the picture and understand its lessons, something that has usually required a small shelf of tomes. His book is the most satisfying and artistic piece of historical skimming that has appeared in a long, long time.

—Frederic E. Voelker.

Very Depressing But Powerful

WHEEL OF FORTUNE. By Alberto Moravia. Translation by Arthur Livingston. (The Viking Press, New York.)

REMARKABLE chiefly for its painstaking and relentless analysis of minds tortured by envy, lust and malice, this novel by Alberto Moravia—the young Italian writer who became prominent in 1929 with his "Gli Indifferenti," deals with a strange, depraved group of people in modern Rome.

Not one member of the two families with which the story deals is a normal individual; they are all writhing and struggling in the grip of unsatisfied ambitions and passions. Maria Luisa, the wealthy, aging marchesa who has left her husband because of his affair with Andreina, a woman of bad reputation and lowly birth, tries to overcome her dissatisfaction with her situation by making advances to Pietro, the fiance of her unattractive sister-in-law. Pietro, repulsing Maria Luisa, deserts his fiancee for Andreina, suffering torments of conscience over his decision; while Andreina herself, around whom the "wheel of fortune" turns for all the other characters, while cold, unscrupulous and conscienceless, is nevertheless tortured by her ambitions and her doubts as to how best to achieve her ambitions.

So involved do the relationships of the various characters become and so filled are their encounters with hatred, jealousy, cruelty, lust, that the atmosphere of the book becomes unbearably oppressive and stifling.

The climax of the story—the murder of Maria Luisa—is a startling piece of horror—terrifying in its cold-bloodedness.

—Doris Talbot Hetlage.

Famous Newspaper's Century of Life

THE SUNPAPERS OF BALTIMORE. By Gerald W. Johnson, Frank R. Kent, H. L. Mencken and Hamilton Owens. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York.)

THIS is the history of two distinguished newspapers, the Baltimore Sun, founded by Arunah Shepherdson Abell on May 17, 1837, and its offspring, the Evening Sun, whose first issue was published April 18, 1910. Its authors are members of the Sunpapers' staff, all of them newspaper men of the first constellation. Mr. Johnson is an editorial writer for the Evening Sun, the author of several historical works and a frequent contributor to national magazines. Mr. Kent is vice-president of the A. S. Abell Co., which publishes the Sunpapers, and author of a syndicated column on national affairs. It may be news to some that Mr. Mencken has been on the staff of the Sunpapers since 1906, retaining that connection through his tenure as co-editor of the Smart Set and editor of the American Mercury. He writes a weekly article for the Evening Sun and plays an important advisory role in the Sunpapers' affairs. Hamilton Owens is the brilliant editor of the Evening Sun, and director of one of the gayest, sauciest and most trenchant of American editorial pages.

The reader who expects this volume to reflect the vivid personalities of its authors will be disappointed. It is a painstaking and, in large part, pretty boring account of the Sunpapers' long life—a handbook, no less, with detail of circulation figures, advertising rates, business experiences, and numerous biographies of men associated with the papers during their long careers, along with the more interesting record of the Sun's great newsgathering exploits, its philosophy of public affairs and its tremendous contributions to the public service.

Not until Mr. Kent's contribution begins does the book take on interest for the general reader. His account of the Sun's fight for a clean judiciary in the 1880s and of its fierce struggle with the corrupt Maryland machine of the 1890s is engrossing. It is not a very promising commentary on democracy that Missouri today is confronted with the same problems the Sun encountered many years ago. Except for the story of Charles H. Grasty's remarkable career as an editor, Mr. Mencken's contribution is chiefly for persons who happen to be interested in the intimate history of the Sunpapers' career. The concluding chapters, by Mr. Owens, concerning the later history of the Sunpapers, while following the chronicle form, give an insight into the workings of the modern Sunpapers that whets the appetite.

Now that the laborious job has been done, can't we have another volume on the Sunpapers' magnificent achievements and contributions to pure journalism, with generous quotations from their scintillating pages?

—Ralph Coghlan.

Sardonic Kidding By Ernst Toller

NO MORE PEACE! A Thoughtful Comedy by Ernst Toller. Translated by Edward Crankshaw. (Farrar & Rinehart, New York.)

PEACE plays or war plays—the difference in approach matters little—are such a particular and prolific manifestation of the thought of our day that a new one in the list is not likely to create any stir. Yet Ernst Toller's comedy, which the Vassar Experimental Theater brought out in February, has such unusual delight, such sardonic wisdom that it will bear close study by groups seeking a propaganda play of its nature.

The German Communist playwright shows a world devoted to peace but so enthusiastic over it that, up on Olympus, Napoleon and St. Francis of Assisi are arguing over its validity. In time they agree to test it out. Napoleon sends a fake telegram announcing a state of war to the prosperous little country of Dunkelstein, on the very day of a peace celebration. The change of community spirit from peace celebration to war hysteria is not very encouraging to St. Francis and peace advocates in the audience.

One may not sympathize with Toller's means of presentation, but there is no doubt of the play's effectiveness in situation, or in such discerning speeches as these: "You see, Francis, mankind loves adventure, romantic uncertainty. There is none of that in peace." "All that is needed to turn a lie into the truth is to give it official support."

Harry Franck's Latest Roving

ROAMING IN HAWAII. By Harry A. Franck. (Frederick A. Stokes Co., New York.)

EVER since Harry A. Franck made a bet with some of his friends that he could make a vagabond journey around the world without spending any money on the project, and not only won the bet but wrote a fascinating and widely read book about his experiences, he has been covering new lands for vicarious travelers. Although he no longer lives on the country, as he did in his early wandering days, his accounts, while perhaps a trifle less adventurous, are more interesting and comprehensive.

Sometimes he seems a bit unsympathetic with the peoples who are his hosts and too "American" in his attitude toward local customs, but one finds nothing of that in his Hawaiian travelogue. In fact, he seems more sympathetic with the Polynesian natives and the polyglot non-American settlers, than with the inhabitants from the "mainland," as our insular territorials refer to the rest of the United States.

Franck moved from island to island, and on each island from shore to mountain top, from native shack to great plantation. He discusses labor, capital, politics, language, legend, geology, crops, fauna and flora. He even gives elementary instructions in "pidgin," a sort of inter-racial language widely used in the islands.

Life in Hawaii Territory, Franck informs us, is delightful; but the islands are not a tropical paradise, he warns, for everyone is industrious, and indigent wanderers would find a poor welcome. Nor should one expect to see too many hula dancers or husky native swimmers and fishermen. Of the 393,277 inhabitants of the islands (1930 census) only 21,594 are pure Hawaiian, and 37,608 part Hawaiian, while the predominating Japanese number 149,886. Incidentally, two-thirds of the islands' population are Asiatic in origin, by far the majority of whom are American citizens.

This makes about the nineteenth travel book by Harry Franck. His fans will find it the equal of any, and quite superior to several, of his others.

Russia Disappoints Monsieur Gide

RETURN FROM THE USSR. By Andre Gide. (Alfred A. Knopf, New York).

ANDRE GIDE, one of the greatest French novelists, went to Russia for the first time last summer.

Politics and economics, in themselves, did not interest him. Man's spirit, from which, after 20 years of Soviet rule, he expected rare flowering, is what he wished to observe and evaluate. He resolved, in advance, to put down exactly what he found, to take the "long view," even if it gave comfort to the conservative and Fascist groups in his country, who despised him while bestowing grudging recognition of his gifts.

Gide found, not the "good and the bad" that he had expected, but "the best and the worst," and the best, it seemed to him, could not cover up the worst, which appalled him. The Soviet youth and children, while he thought them the best cared for and the happiest in the world, impressed him as being vain of their country's achievement and indifferent to the rest of the world. The attitude of Russian critics to art and letters dismayed him. Walking through the Moscow streets, he found everybody wearing the same clothes and wondered, with bitter humor, to which sex each might belong. The Stakhanovites, the wonder-workers of kolhoz and factory, seemed wonder-workers only in relation to the rest of the workers, who were incompetent and slow by Western standards. He decided that these could not be the people who had made the revolution, but the uninspired second generation who had inherited it.

What conclusions emerge from the book are both bitter and sweet, half blame and half praise.

As in all of Gide's work, the writing has the utmost delicacy in shading and felicity of image and word.

FORESEES DOWNFALL OF CIVILIZATION

TRUMPET OF JUBILEE. By Ludwig Lewisohn. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

THE path between the novel and the pamphlet is sometimes a difficult one. The writer who has no passionate convictions, who writes from an emotional vacuum, is likely to find his most polished paragraphs and his most striking concepts crumbling into nothingness, as post-war American literature has abundantly demonstrated. On the other hand, the novelist with something to say may be overwhelmed by the importance of his message; he may let his characters degenerate into talking-machines which enunciate his gospel, his plot structure turn into a series of flaming arrows which point his moral. The latter tendency is illustrated in this book.

Lewisohn's message is that the decaying civilization of Western Europe and America can be saved, if it is to be saved at all, only by a return to the symbolic form and spiritual content of religion. The first half of the book is set in the Germany of Hitler and the pogroms, where there is evidence enough that "the depths have opened and the black waters are covering the earth," that primordial savagery and ferocity have reappeared among men. Repeatedly, Lewisohn makes his point that under such circumstances the outer garments of civilization, poetry and music and patriotism and learning, are no protection; only the hard core of religion can insure survival.

The second part of the book ventures into the future. The liberal forces of the world have united in a last desperate attempt to save the values of civilization. But the masses, determined to destroy, possessed of the most ingenious scientific devices for destruction, cannot be stopped. At last comes the great conflict; the champions of liberalism, consisting in the main of the English-speaking peoples, meet the Fascist-Communist-barbarian hordes at Har Megiddo in Palestine, the Armageddon of Biblical prophecy, in a battle that is to decide the fate of mankind. But there is assurance that whatever may be that fate, groups of the Chosen will yet survive to cherish a seed of culture, of morality, of humanity, until the world may again be ready to receive and nurture the seed.

Lewisohn's seriousness of purpose is so evident, his imaginative achievement so remarkable, that any criticism seems like shooting at an elephant with a popgun. Still, one is curious as to exactly what kinds of people constitute these dread masses. One wonders why they should be less potential of evil in a superficial, uncultured America than in a stable, presumably civilized Germany. One has serious doubts as to just what control the handful of lecture-going, book-reading American liberals could maintain over aroused mass passion. Is Lewisohn too optimistic or too pessimistic?

Leaves the Reader Refreshed

THE FRIENDLY TREE. By Cecil Day Lewis. (Harper & Bros., New York.)

THE three "new" English poets whose appearance created a great stir a few years ago, and whose work might almost all have been written by the same man, are beginning now to show differences. W. H. Auden, with his latest volume of poems, "On This Island," is unmistakably the poet of the group; Stephen Spender, with his "Forward from Liberalism," seems temporarily at least to have become a political writer; and C. Day Lewis, in his "The Friendly Tree," gives promise of becoming one of the first-rank novelists of his generation.

This, his first novel, tells the story of four characters: of Anna and Steve, two perfectly natural and unsophisticated young people, and of Richard and Evelyn, who are civilized almost to the point of decadence. Mr. Lewis describes the development of a "first love" between Steve and Anna, with the hesitations and joyousness that usually accompany it, and shadowed by the economic difficulties that surround them. In addition, he reveals the extremely subtle and complex interrelationships that spring up between these two and their friends. These ties and jealousies are never allowed to reach the surface of consciousness, or at least formal statement, but are nevertheless strong conflicting forces that are only resolved at the end, with a complete break between the two couples, and Steve's and Anna's marriage.

But plot, as the commercial writers and professors of short-story technique understand it, is not the prime factor in this book's excellence. Mr. Lewis has achieved his ends by other means: by the extraordinary exactness of his perceptions, with regard to subjective mood as well as to natural objects; by the brilliant imaginativeness of his style and metaphor; and particularly by a quality, peculiarly his own, of honesty and balance. Somehow, on putting down the book the reader is left feeling refreshed, as though by an active week-end in the country.

Modern Marriage

SEVERAL of these tales are about middle-aged husbands (of "nice" conventional wives), who chase the phantom of youth, in the mistaken idea that happiness will follow, only to be disillusioned, and to learn that happiness was within reach all the time; and so they end the chase and resolve simply to "be their age." A character in one of the stories, "The Better Man," says: "I suppose it is a question of what is enduring in life, isn't it? What we really want out of it at the end. If we want one thing at one age, and another at another, there is nothing enduring in it. We can't go on building up, and then tearing down. There has to come a time when we can't build any more. We are too old or too tired."

There is a decided O. Henry flavor in one or two of the tales, where the conclusions are unexpected; notably in "Sanctuary," which is concerned with a drab, middle-aged nurse, who relives her own tragedy in that of her daughter; and also in "The Tinsel Star," wherein a wonderfully wise husband encourages his wife to follow her conscience, leading to the lasting happiness of both.

In the two stories of "Officer Hogan" there is a faint trace of Mrs. Rinehart's rollicking Letitia Carberry spirit, but in none of the others is this old, gay note found. There is no longer the snappy, racy, mystery-thriller style in evidence. Mrs. Rinehart seems to have grown more serious and philosophical, although she treats her characters with great sympathy and understanding.

Further Elaborates Original Theme

NEIGHBOR TO THE SKY. By Gladys Hasty Carroll. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

IN her first novel, "As the Earth Turns," Mrs. Carroll celebrated man's enduring relationship to the soil and the seasons. In "A Few Foolish Ones" her theme was the same, the central idea being emphasized by contrast in a story that dealt with the rapid spreading of urban influence after the introduction of the automobile. In "Neighbor to the Sky," she further elaborates her original theme in terms of the present.

The vital import of her three volumes is the ancient Antaean wisdom: Our strength is in the Earth, our mother, and it is fatal to forget her.

The present tale begins and ends on a Maine farm. Luke Gilman, son of a sturdy family, firmly rooted in the soil for generations, is contented with his lot until he marries Margery Lee, the school teacher. He exemplifies the quiet strength and simple virtues of men wholly in harmony with natural forces. Margery, a small bundle of nervous energy, is all for "progress." She must be a great actress; Luke must leave his native hills and become important in the world.

Suppressing a deep-seated doubt as to the ultimate importance of being important, Luke accepts Margery's life-plan, leaves the farm and goes in for advanced education. After hardship and struggle he graduates from an Eastern university and procures an assistant professorship in a Middle Western college. The coming of a baby, at first resented by Margery, effects a complete change in her world-view, and she comes to see, as Luke had seen, that 'the pearl of great price is still to be realized only in harmonious adjustment to the ancient and enduring relationships between earth and man and woman. They return to the old Maine farm.

Truly the implied homily seems a bit old-fashioned, and there are tremendous social difficulties to consider. But surely in this simple story there is something that lies deep in human nature and "yields no foam to any squall of change."

THE SECOND SEVENTY. By Lyman R. Powell. (Macrae-Smith Co., Philadelphia.)

DR. POWELL, a retired Episcopalian rector of New York City, has made a valuable contribution to the modern shelf of books telling us how to live more happily. While it is directed to the elderly, it makes good reading for any age.

The divisions of the book are entitled "Coming In," "Being In," "Looking Out" and "A Program." In the first two Dr. Powell reflects upon the pleasures of his retirement from active ministry at 70. "Looking Out" discusses life and death, recognizing honestly the universal fear and reluctance to meet death, but telling how "to enjoy the last of life, for which the first was made" with loving memories and tempered joys. "The Program" is a practical aid to the fine art of living with serenity and confidence in the fulness of maturity.

Simply and sincerely written, the book is recommended as delightful reading and for its worthwhile suggestions.

HANGOVER 1936. By James Stuart Gillespie Jr. (The Galleon Press, New York.)

A FAST-MOVING novel, by an author who knows intimately the social set about which he writes. It does for the present generation what F. Scott Fitzgerald did for the post-war youngsters.

SOUTHWEST CROP REPORTS BASIS OF WHEAT RISE

Corn Futures Have Setback of as Much as 2 Cents; Argentine Corn Arrival Expected.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, May 1.—The flow of favorable crop reports from the heart of the winter wheat belt was enough to send wheat prices about a cent a bushel higher in a comparatively quiet trade.

Moisture deficiency in important winter growing areas, particularly in Kansas and Oklahoma, is becoming more serious, according to a variety of crop advices.

One Chicago statistician lowered his prediction of winter wheat production 7,000,000 bushels compared with month ago figures to 670,440,000 bushels. The official estimate on April 1 was 656,000,000 bushels. Other private crop estimates will be released Tuesday.

Wheat closed ⅛@⅞c higher than yesterday's finish, May $1.32⅝@1.32⅞; July, $1.19⅞@1.20; September, $1.17@1.17⅞. Corn lost ⅞@2¼c; May $1.30¼@1.30⅝; July, $1.17½@1.17⅝; September, $1.08⅜@1.08⅞. Oats were ¼c up to ¼c down. May 50⅛@50⅛. Rye was 1c off to ¼c up. May $1.13⅜ and lard gained 5 to 13 cents.

Wheat dipped fractions when the market opened but selling pressure soon eased and the market rallied about 1½ cents from early lows, from there on prices fluctuated nervously, moving up again just before the close. Liverpool wheat closed 1⅛c to 2 cents higher, or about as due, and this served to influence some buyers here.

Absence of moisture in the Canadian West and fair strength at outside markets, coupled with some short covering here, kept the market above the previous close.

Approximately 355,000 bushels of wheat were delivered on May contracts and some of this was redelivered. Notice of intention to deliver 270,000 bushels Monday was received.

The corn market was under pressure throughout the session and May corn led a decline that reached a maximum of about 2 cents a bushel at the close. Selling was associated with anticipated arrival over the weekend of four steamers with approximately 700,000 bushels of Argentine corn. A cargo of 90,000 bushels, the first to arrive in Chicago this spring, was unloaded last night.

Oats were unsettled by corn action. Weakness in rye accompanied a private estimate that 58,000,000 bushels may be produced in this country. This was well above month ago estimates and compared with 25,554,000 bushels harvested last year.

Some traders attributed strength in provisions to steadily declining hog marketings.

Provisions were 3 cents lower to 5 cents higher after the first hour.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday, 41,134,000; corn, 9,300,000. Open interest in wheat was 96,800,000 bushels and in corn, 32,534,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE.

May 1.—Wheat was higher today. July closed at $1.19, up 1c, while September was offered at $1.17¾, up 1½c. July corn closed ½c lower on offer of $1.22½. July oats was ⅜c higher at 41½c.

Liverpool wheat closed 1⅛@2d up after opening 1⅞@2d higher.

Winnipeg wheat opened ¼@1c higher and early was ⅝@1⅛s up. Tha close was ⅜@1c higher.

The Argentine market was closed.

Local wheat receipts, which were 10,500 bu, compared with 34,500 a week ago and 30,000 a year ago, included one car local and six through. Corn receipts, which were 27,000 bu, compared with 51,000 a week ago and 51,000 a year ago, included 18 cars local. Oats receipts, which were 14,000 bu, compared with 12,000 a week ago and 30,000 a year ago, included four cars local and 3 through. Hay receipts were three cars through.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was nominally 1@1½c higher and hard wheat 1c higher. There were no offerings, but due to the advance in futures the nominal prices were pushed up. Corn was unchanged to ½c higher. Demand improved and a quick clearance was made. Mills, feeders and glucose plants were the buyers. Oats were unchanged. Demand was fairly active and a clearance was effected. Mills and feeders were the purchasers.

DOWNFALL LIZATION

The second part of the book ventures into the future. The liberal forces of the world have united in a last desperate attempt to save the values of civilization. But the masses, determined to destroy, possessed of the most ingenious scientific devices for destruction, cannot be stopped. At last comes the great conflict; the champions of liberalism, consisting in the main of the English-speaking peoples, meet the Fascist-Communist-barbarian hordes at Har Megiddo in Palestine, the Armageddon of Biblical prophecy, in a battle that is to decide the fate of mankind. But there is assurance that whatever may be that fate, groups of the Chosen will yet survive to cherish a seed of culture, of morality, of humanity, until the world may again be ready to receive and nurture the seed.

Lewisohn's seriousness of purpose is so evident, his imaginative achievement so remarkable, that any criticism seems like shooting at an elephant with a popgun. Still one is curious as to exactly what kinds of people constitute these dread masses. One wonders why they should be less potential of evil in a superficial, uncultured America than in a stable, presumably civilized Germany. One has serious doubts as to just what control the handful of lecture-going, book-reading American liberals could maintain over aroused mass passion. Is Lewisohn too optimistic or too pessimistic?

Anxieties Affecting Financial Markets Generally Bring About Irregular Stock Trends in Week

Sharp Drop in Prices Is Followed by Half-Way Recovery, Another Abrupt Downturn and Rebound Led by Steels and Rails.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The stock market bogged down this week but met support in some sectors as the period drew to a close. Price swings were irregular. The first part of the week was given over to a sharp drop, a halfway recovery and another abrupt downturn. The latter part saw quiet recovery led by steels and rails.

Numerous reasons were advanced by analysts for declines. Prominently mentioned were the recurrence of fears the Government would adopt measures to stem the swift inflow of gold and the speculative nervousness in London, Paris and other foreign financial centers.

This case of nerves abroad was in some circles diagnosed as the aftermath of too fulsome a gorging of speculative appetites for both "war" commodities and securities generally.

Another factor cited was the warning of President Roosevelt against margin trading in stocks. Chief effect of this was sentimental, anaylsts said, stressing that it presaged possible further tightening of Government control in security markets.

Among Tangible Facts.

In the matter of strictly tangible facts and figures on trends of business and finance, news was mostly to the good. Earnings of industrial companies and railroads were encouraging.

Steel output again hit a weekly tonnage peak never before equaled. Retail trade improved. Motor output and electric power consumption moved forward. Freight carloadings improved.

The bond market found rails in demand, aided by swelling traffic and improved income. Industrials with stock conversion privileges were shaken down abruptly at times. Utility and foreign descriptions drifted down. Low yield obligations were about even late in week.

United States Government issues improved, moving forward for sizable gains on limited turnover. Government bond dealers said they look for a sizable amount of potential demand from banks with idle funds.

Commodities slumped on the average for the fourth consecutive week, with grains along resisting the general downturn.

Sales during the week amounted to 9,989,560 shares, compared with 6,381,379 a week ago and 10,187,760 a year ago. Total sales from Jan. 1 were 194,424,795 shares, compared with 220,276,313 a year ago and 75,-210,993 two years ago.

Irregular Week-End.

Farm implements and specialties took another step forward in today's stock market but many of yesterday's buoyant leaders stood still or backed down moderately.

The news generally was interpreted as satisfactory. There was only a dribble of foreign selling and the gold price specter appeared to have all but vanished. The inflow of favorable corporation statements continued and business prospects were at least fairly cheerful.

Traders, on the whole, exhibited an exceptional amount of discretion in expanding commitments in either direction. Some, it was said, thought Friday's upswing had been a little too sharp. Others decided neutral territory was advisable while awaiting what will happen on London's settlement date next Thursday when some British financial houses, heavy losers recently in commodity speculation, will have to step up to the paying window.

Dealings were on the quiet side throughout, transfers totaling 551,-450 shares, compared with 807,640 last Saturday. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 68.2.

Growing production in the automobile field spurred Chrysler on for a time, but this issue slipped later and finished with a net advance of ½ point at 113¾. General Motors was down ¼ at 58. Electric Auto-Lite held a gain of 1 at 38.

Oils Do Better.

A handful of oils responded to reports of larger consumption, although crude output has been establishing a succession of new peaks. Standard Oil of New Jersey at 66½ and Standard Oil of Indiana at 44¾, finished up fractionally. Texas Corporation, Barnsdall and Continental Oil were unchanged after being ahead most of the session. Seaboard dropped 1⅜ at 45.

Upward estimates of agricultural income this year brought buyers for the farm machinery group. Up fractions to more than a point were J. I. Case at 136½, Deere, 133½; International Harvester, 106⅝, and Oliver Farm, 70.

Sloss-Sheffield Steel was up 7 points on a transfer of only 20 shares. Others with modest gains included American Telephone at 164¼, Atlantic Coast Line, 48; Illinois Central, 31¼; Woolworth, 49¾; Continental Can, 53⅜; du Pont, 154½, and National Cash Register, 32.

The major steels were backward most of the time. United States Steel was off ¼ at 101 and Bethlehem yielded ¾ at 85½. Others in arrears were Westinghouse at 139; General Electric, 53⅝; Santa Fe, 87⅝; New York Central, 46½; Southern Pacific, 56; Electric Power & Light, 19⅝; Anaconda, 51¼; American Smelting, 85⅛; Kennecott, 54; Sears, Roebuck, 86½; Douglas Aircraft, 54; Goodyear, 41¼, and United States Rubber, 98⅝.

Amusements were not too depressed by the Hollywood moving picture strike, although Loew's at 76¼, Warner Bros., 13¼; Paramount, 21⅞, and Twentieth Century-Fox, 27¾, dipped a trifle.

Bonds were a little better in most cases. Commodities were uneven and leading foreign currencies lower in terms of the dollar. Wheat was up ⅛ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel and corn was down ⅞ to 2¼. Cotton lost 45 to 60 cents a bale. Sterling was 15-16 of a cent lower at $4.93 13-16. The French franc was off .00⅛ of a cent at 4.47⅝ cents.

Day's 15 Most Active Stocks.

Sales, closing price and net change of the 15 most active stocks: Houston Oil, 30,400, 16⅝, up ⅛; Republic Steel, 14,200, 38½, down ¼; U. S. Steel, 11,800, 101, down ¼; N. Y. Central, 11,500, 46½, down 1¼; Radio, 8700, 9¼, unchanged; Socony Vacuum, 7700, 19⅜, unchanged; Chrysler, 6900, 113¾, up ½; Curtiss Wright, 6800, up ¼; General Motors, 6300, 58, down ¼; Anaconda, 6200, 51¼, down ⅜; International Nickel, 6000, 59⅛, unchanged; Paramount Pictures, 5800, 21⅞, down ¼; Yellow Truck, 5500, 24½, down ½; Standard Brands, 5400, 13¼, up ⅛; Northern Pacific, 5000, 33½, down ⅛.

LEADING CURRENCIES MOVE AGAINST DOLLAR

Heavy Gold Engagements and Foreign Selling of U. S. Stocks Among Factors.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Heavy engagements of gold for shipment to this country, some foreign liquidation of American Securites and a reported mild repatriation of French capital caused leading European currencies to mount against the dollar during the week.

Of the $48,546,000 in the yellow metal taken for United States account, up to close Friday, $39,380,000 was engaged in England. Japan contributed $6,230,000, Canada $2,546,000 and India $490,000. Bankers said much of the gold nominally reserved in England was in transit from Soviet Russia. No fix in the preceding week the total of engagements was $26,-136,000.

Traders expressed the opinion the return flow of funds to France was due to a combination of the shakeout in the securities markets and a lessening of French internal political tension due to a continuation of Premier Blum's "breathing spell" in social legislation.

The upward movement of sterling and continental currency units was most noticeable in the early part of the week, with the pound nearing its gold export point. The pound, at one time was at its high since last September.

Netherlands guilders jumped several points when the Central Bank lowered its purchasing price for the dollar in an effort to keep the Dutch unit in line with the British. Swiss francs were likewise in sympathy with the French currency. Canadian dollars were a little higher toward the end of the period.

Reflecting the European liquidation of American Securities lifted pressure from the dollar today and leading currencies declined somewhat in foreign exchange dealings.

The pound sterling made the widest move, receding 15-16 of a cent. French francs were down 00⅛ of a cent lower. Swiss franc dropped .01 of a cent and the Canadian dollar yielded 1-32 of a cent. Netherlands guilders held unchanged from their previous close.

In the London market the dollar picked up ⅜ of a cent at 4.94 11-16 to the pound when compared with the previous night's New York rate of $4.94¾. Paris markets were closed for the Saturday holiday.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Foreign exchanges closed as follows: (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents). Great Britain demand 4.93 13-16; cables 4.93 13-16; 60-day bills 4.92 13-16; France demand 4.47⅝; cables 4.47⅝; Italy demand 5.26¼; cables 5.26¼. LONDON, May 1.—Further improvement was registered by the United States dollar in the foreign exchange market today, the quotation of 4.94 1-16 to the pound was ⅜6 better than yesterday, and compared with an overnight New York rate of 4.94¾.

BAR GOLD, SILVER AND MONEY

LONDON May 1.—Money and discount rates unchanged.

LONDON, May 1.—Bar gold gained 4½ pence at 140s 8d. (Sterling price equivalent to $34.77.)

LONDON, May 1.—Bar silver firmer, ⅛ higher at 20⅜d. (Sterling price equivalent to 45.29 cents.)

MONTREAL, May 1.—Silver futures opened steady, 10 higher. May, 44.85b; July, 44.75b; September, 44.65b.

NEW YORK, May 1.—Bar silver nominal; no quotations.

MONTREAL, May 1. — Silver futures closed steady, 10 higher. No sales. Closing bids: May, 44.85; July, 44.75; September, 44.65.

The St. Louis Clearing House Association reported clearings for May 1, 1937, $13,-200,000; corresponding day last year, $15,-100,000; this year, $1,606,400,000; corresponding period last year $1,410,000,000. Report of debits for April 30, 1937; debits to individual accounts $28,400,000; total to date $2,348,700,000; debits to banks and bankers accounts $14,100,000; total to date $1,139,800,000. Combined debits to individual and bank and bankers accounts $42,500,000; debits to date $3,488,500,000.

BOARD TO DECIDE ON SUPERHIGHWAY ROUTING MAY 10

Final Decision on County Problem to Be Made at Monthly Meeting in Jefferson City.

FOUR PRINCIPAL PLANS CONSIDERED

Commissioners End Two-Day Session Here After 100 Mothers Object to Use of Clayton Road.

The State Highway Commission, adjourning a two-day special meeting here yesterday, announced it would make a final decision on the route for the superhighway, between Lindbergh boulevard and the express highway in Forest Park, at its regular monthly meeting in Jefferson City, May 10.

The session here was devoted to consideration of the controversial question of where to put this new location of U. S. Highway No. 40 in the populous suburban district.

Four principal routes under consideration were inspected by the commission and some of its executives Friday. Yesterday morning a conference was held at Hotel Statler by the commissioners—Chairman George F. Olendorf of Springfield, Robert B. Brooks of St. Louis and H. G. Simpson of Charleston. The commission, having reached no conclusion yet, had no statement, except that it had been giving the problem careful study.

Among the things it examined was a long aerial photograph of the terrain through Ladue, where the principal controversy has centered over two outstanding routes. It also received a petition signed by about 100 mothers objecting to use of Clayton road for the superhighway, in behalf of their children.

Routes inspected by the commission were:

Clayton road, from Warson road to Forest Park.

Southern route through Ladue, swinging to a maximum of about 3600 feet south of Clayton road, from Warson road to the vicinity of North and South road, thence using Clayton road to the park.

Combination of Deer Creek and River des Peres valleys, cutting south of Manchester road, from Clayton and Warson roads to the express highway in the eastern part of the park.

Extension of Delmar boulevard to Lindbergh or farther west, with a cutoff to Clayton road at North and South road.

Many residents and property owners in southern Ladue have opposed a location in that section and favored use of Clayton road direct. On the other hand, a group of Clayton road residents and property owners have objected to having the thoroughfare put there. It has been doubtful whether the Delmar route would be considered seriously by the commission because at Lindbergh it would be two miles north of the existing superhighway location.

Status of the entire 36-mile new route for No. 40 is as follows, by sections, starting at the junction with U. S. Highway No. 61 at Wentzville, St. Charles County:

Wentzville to Missouri River at Weldon Springs—13.3 miles of two-lane concrete pavement laid, to be opened to traffic some time in June, when the State's three-lane bridge over the Missouri is completed.

River to Bellefontaine, St. Louis County—6.5 miles of new three- and four-lane concrete pavement in use.

Bellefontaine to Mason road—4.1 miles of new right-of-way laid out, with the intention of starting grading this year.

Mason road to Lindbergh boulevard—3.4 miles of grading under contract on a new right-of-way midway between Clayton and Conway roads, and work started on grade separations at Mason, Ballas and Spoede roads.

Lindbergh to Forest Park, at Skinker boulevard — 5.5-mile stretch yet to be settled.

Skinker to Kingshighway—1.8 miles of five-lane express highway in use, with night illumination.

Kingshighway to Vandeventer avenue—1 mile of five-lane depressed express highway completed, except for lights; to be opened when lights are ready. The State Highway Commission will receive bids May 15 for 43 sodium vapor lamps of 1000 candlepower each, as designed by the city, with estimated cost of $17,600. The city will install 21 ordinary electric lights standards, costing about $3000, at the various bridges crossing this stretch of the highway.

Vandeventer to Chouteau avenue viaduct—Work started on a viaduct about .2 of a mile long.

Traffic on No. 40 will use either Chouteau avenue or Market street between Vandeventer avenue and Municipal bridge. There has been discussion of the possibility of an elevated road on or near Chouteau to avoid congestion in this stretch, but no action has been taken. No. 40 crosses East St. Louis between Municipal bridge and the Ninth street subway, and has a four-lane pavement from the subway to the northeastern corner of Collinsville, skirting the latter town.

TRAINING FOR VOLUNTEER SETTLEMENT HOUSE WORK

Course to Be Offered at Wesley House, 3035 Bell, Starting Tuesday Evening.

A training course for volunteer settlement house workers will be conducted at Wesley House, 3035 Bell avenue, starting Tuesday evening. L. C. Gardner, Miss Mabel Butler and Miss Inez Green will speak at the first meeting.

At subsequent meetings speakers will discuss the mechanics of a club, relation of volunteers to a group and social activities for club meetings.

The need for volunteer workers has been increasing because of the development of recreational outposts in various sections of the city. Purpose of the outposts is to provide recreation under trained leadership in underprivileged districts which have no community center. One is at Wells Playground and others are at Marquette, Penrose and Walbridge schools.

HEADS ST. CLAIR SUPERVISORS

Thomas J. Corrigan Elected Chairman of County Board.

Thomas J. Corrigan of East St. Louis was elected chairman of the St. Clair County Board of Supervisors at an organization meeting yesterday at Belleville.

Incumbents in other board offices were re-elected. Corrigan succeeds William Albert of Millstadt.

ST. LOUIS N L R B DIRECTOR TRANSFERRED TO CHICAGO

Leonard C. Bajork Named Acting Regional Chief There; to Assume Duties Next Saturday.

The transfer of Leonard C. Bajork, regional director of the Nation Labor Relations Board, to Chicago as acting regional director there was announced yesterday by Bajork, who said he would assume his new duties next Saturday at an increase in salary.

Bajork, whose home is in Chicago, came here about a year ago as an examiner and succeeded Harold Garvey, also of Chicago, as director. Since the Supreme Court decision in the Wagner Act he has arranged negotiations in the Emerson Electric, St. Louis Car Co. and other strikes.

WAITRESS DIES OF BURNS

Cigarette Fired Her Night Clothing in Hotel Room.

A lighted cigarette, which ignited a rug, caused burns from which Mrs. Jennie Wakefield, a waitress, died at City Hospital Friday night.

The fire started at 3 a. m. April 19 in a room she shared with her sister at the Blackstone Hotel, 4040 Olive street. The flames ignited her night clothing. Her screams attracted her sister, Mrs. Katherine Scott, who was in a corridor outside the room.

Mrs. Wakefield, 35 years old, was separated from her husband.

JOINT MEETING OF PROVIDENT AND CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETIES

Boards and Staffs to Discuss Progress in Service Co-ordination at Session May 13.

Progress made during the last year in co-ordinating the services of the St. Louis Provident Association and the St. Louis Children's Aid Society will be discussed at a meeting of the boards and staff members of both agencies, May 13, at Hotel Jefferson.

A joint administrative plan adopted March 15, 1936, contemplated as great a degree of co-ordination of the services of both agencies as could be achieved without impairing the values which have grown out of the separate experience of each.

The plan provided th eseparate identity of each agency and board, as well as its budget relationship to the Community Fund, were to be maintained. The services of the two agencies were to be gradually drawn together.

THOUSANDS NOW GETTING OUT OF THE "ALL THREE" CLASS!

THIS GREAT BIG NASH NOW JUST A FEW DOLLARS MORE*

HERE'S THE LOWDOWN ON BRAKES! Almost all cars have hydraulic brakes today! But did you know this—Nash gives you hydraulics with greater braking area. You stop quicker. They stand up longer. You save on brake relining jobs.

GET THE X-RAY STORY ON STEEL BODIES! Almost all cars have all steel bodies . . . but Nash gives you the strongest type of one piece, seamless all steel body construction in the industry. Stronger. Safer. Specially reinforced. Built to last for years.

HAVE YOU SEEN THE "SLEEPING CAR"! Only Nash gives you this exclusive feature. You can turn the rear compartment of any Nash Sedan into a big six-foot double size bed. You can lock the door. Ideal for vacationists, fishermen, trailer-owners.

Actual photograph of Nash LaFayette-"400" 4-Door Sedan with trunk

Surprise YOUR family with this much bigger car—it costs a lot less than you think!

● See that man smiling at you from behind that stylish radiator? He almost bought one of the "all three" cars. But he saw Nash . . . got to making comparisons . . . here's what he found out.

He found that the new 117-inch wheelbase Nash LaFayette-"400" is much bigger than any of the "All Three" cars. He found it has a 90 horsepower six cylinder engine, larger hydraulic brakes, a stronger all steel body, extra wide seats, a lot more headroom and legroom. He learned it rode like a "$1500 automobile."

He bought a Nash. And here's the biggest thrill in the story. His much bigger Nash LaFayette-"400" cost him just a few dollars more than he'd have paid for one of "All Three" cars. Actually—just a FEW!

See Nash for value. The new Nash Ambassador Six is now a big 121-inch wheelbase car—even bigger than cars costing $200 more. The Nash Ambassador Eight is one of the world's real "luxury cars." 125-inch wheelbase. 105 horsepower "Twin-Ignition" engine. Come in. Let us tell you the whole amazing story. Come in—TODAY!

*FOR AS LITTLE AS $1 OR $2 A MONTH EXTRA YOU CAN GET OUT OF THE "ALL THREE" CLASS. A check-up recently made in ten representative cities shows that the Nash LaFayette-"400" 4-Door Sedan with trunk DELIVERS for just a FEW dollars more than the similarly equipped 4-door sedans of the "All Three" small cars. In many places, the SLIGHT difference in price amounts to just $1 or $2 a month extra on your time payments.

$25 A MONTH! Ask your nearest Nash dealer about the convenient terms and low rates available through the new Nash C. I. T. Easy Budget Plan. In most places, you can actually pay as little as $25 a month on your time payments. Automatic Cruising Gear now available on all Nash models at slight extra cost.

The Rediscovered Rembrandt That Was Finished to Pay a Debt

Masterpiece That Was Recently Bought at Auction for Less Than $300 Now Being Displayed in the United States.

HARMEN BECKER, the money lender, wanted his 537 gilder, and harassed Rembrandt Harmensz van Rijn, desperately in debt, turned with a sigh to a half-finished canvas against the wall of his shabby studio. He was an aging man, Rembrandt, approaching 60, eccentric, crotchety, but a genius from whose brushes immortality flowed in eternally lustrous colors.

"Finish it and I'll take it in full payment," Becker said.

Rembrandt completed the painting and turned it over to Becker, only too glad to thrust one more creditor away from his door. He could not know 272 years ago that he was liquidating a debt of about $325 with a painting that will command several hundred thousand dollars, perhaps more than half a million dollars—when it is sold by the Schaeffer Galleries in New York where it now rests.

For weeks a reverent procession of art students, teachers, artists and connoisseurs have moved slowly through the galleries to view "The Lost Rembrandt," which is reproduced above and which was displayed in lone grandeur in a gallery all to itself. To exhibit it otherwise would be akin to sacrilege in the eyes of art lovers.

They have marveled at its warmth and composition, wondered whether the head was really that of Hendrijke Stoeffels, companion of the artist in his later years, and discussed its remarkable history since Becker lugged it away in triumph in 1665, four years before the master's death.

When Becker added the painting to his collection—he was an art patron too—it disappeared from the art world and was known to later connoisseurs only through documents giving details of its acquisition from Rembrandt. For nearly 200 years nothing more was heard of it, then, in the middle of the nineteenth century, it turned up in the Stanley Collection at Palmerston House, Turnbridge, near Sheffield, England. From there, it apparently went to the collection of Otto von Wesendonck, a Swiss; at least, in 1888 it was listed in Berlin in a catalogue of the Wesendonck Collection.

A few years later the Wesendonck collection was stored in a provincial German museum at Bonn, and for more than 30 years the great Rembrandt painting lay uncared for gathering the dust and dirt of three decades. Last year two Dutch dealers attended an auction of the Wesendonck collection at Cologne and bid for the begrimed picture. It was knocked down for 700 marks, less than $300.

The dealers gave the picture a routine cleaning. Under their hands appeared a work of such compelling majesty that they knew at once they had stumbled on one of the great artistic mysteries of the centuries. Excited and jubilant they called experts who confirmed that the painting was indeed the long-lost Rembrandt.

Among the experts who hurried to see it was Dr. William Valentiner, curator of the Detroit Institute of Art and an authority on Rembrandt. He said it was undoubtedly "among the great artist's best," and described it thus:

"The painting is a grandiose composition, brilliantly executed in glowing warm brown and golden lines, somewhat reminiscent of the late Titian, whom Rembrandt seemed to have admired greatly.

"The figure is seen in the three-fourths length 'en face,' which is characteristic for the last works of Rembrandt. An extraordinary effect is created by the mass of shimmering jewelry on the costume and the golden crown of 'Juno.'

"The execution of the painting is unusually careful compared with other late Rembrandts, perhaps on account of the complaint of the creditor, who did not quite understand the freedom of technique in Rembrandt's late works, which now is especially appreciated.

"The 'Juno' was one of the most remarkable discoveries in the field of Rembrandts,

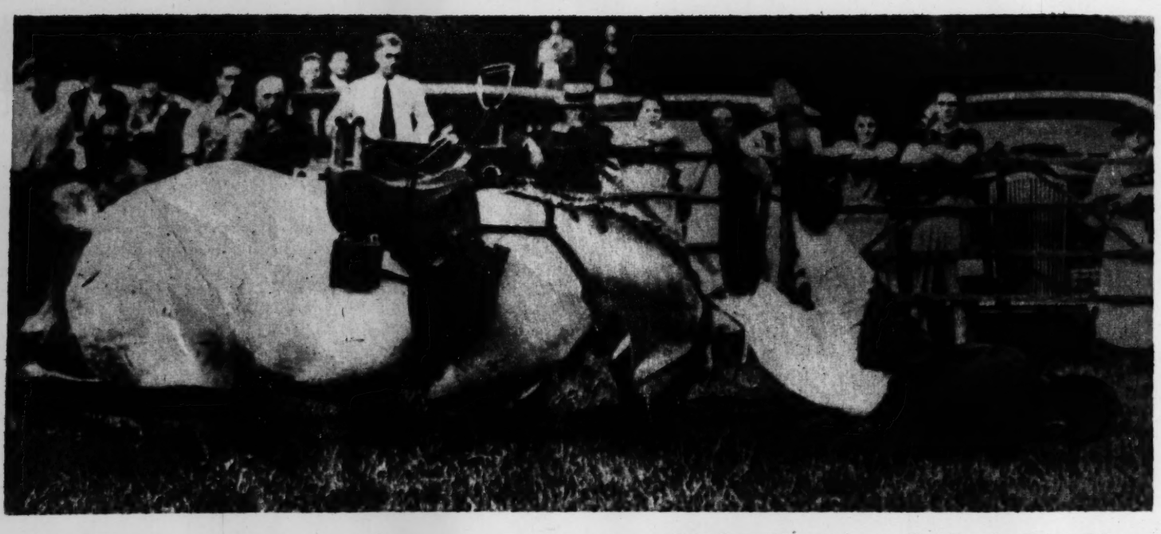
The Strike that Threatened America's Most Sumptuous Hunt

Richard K. Mellon.

Cup donated by the former King Alfonso of Spain and redonated by Mellon for the International King's Cup Races.

Richard Mellon's Farm Hands at Rolling Rock Wanted Higher Wages and the Neighboring Farmers Were Sympathetic — But the Merchants Stepped in and Settled Things.

The start of a Rolling Rock hunt.



Richard K. Mellon, down at the Greensburg, Pennsylvania, horse show.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PITTSBURGH, Pennsylvania.

THE settlement of a strike of indignant farmers, which threatened for a minute to result in the abandonment of the proudest hunt and steeplechase in America, harks back to the fable of the lion and the mouse. The dramatis personae of this grimly humorous little comedy are as follows: The Lion, played by Banker Richard King Mellon, owner of Rolling Rock Farms and landlord of Rolling Rock Hunt. The Thorn, 36 indignant farm hands at Rolling Rock and 240 sympathetic neighbors who promised to close their farms to the hunt unless the strikers' demands were met. The Mouse, Ed Grombach, a small harness merchant in the town of Ligonier, hard by the 12,000-acre estate where the Mellons preserve with fitting sentimentality the memory of their Ligonier antecedents, who were also small merchants.

This drama of how a patient retailer of horse collars and saddle soap came to the aid of the president of Forbes National Bank and vice-president of Mellon National Bank and director of a round dozen of America's great corporations, differs from the original fable in one important respect. Ed Grombach wasn't inspired by any purely altruistic motives when he plucked the thorn out of Dick Mellon's paw. He simply represented the best interests of the Ligonier Board of Trade, of which he is secretary. Presumably the thorn got something out of the operation as well, though the terms on which Mellon settled haven't been made public.

There was a stubbornness in the behavior of both parties to the incident. The farm hands felt bitterly certain that they weren't getting their fair share of the $120,000 a year Mellon is reputed to spend on his sumptuous hunts and races. Perhaps they resented this the more for knowing that their squire was able to spare $20,000 for the Republican National Committee's campaign against the New Deal only last fall. Mellon, equally stubborn, seems to have felt that he was being ruthlessly imposed upon by the farm hands. It wasn't the money, he implied; it was the principle of the thing. In other words: This hurts me more than it hurts you.

This was a hard logic for working men drawing only 30 cents an hour to swallow. When Mellon flatly refused to consider giving them 50 cents an hour, they went out and talked freely among the numerous farmers in the neighborhood. Since the Rolling Rock hunt rides over 75,000 acres of neighboring land, these mustered a good deal of weight in the argument. Mellon was still obdurate. He told the farmers in no uncertain language that if they didn't like the way he was running his place and continued to brandish their ultimatum (to raise wages or keep off their land), he'd simply close down Rolling Rock Farms, abolish the steeplechase and give up the hunt. By a curious coincidence and to the delight of collectors of rural Americana, the same day Mellon's hands went out on strike, 10 of Charles Schwab's hired men locked themselves in the potato cellar of his equally imposing farm at Loretto, Pennsylvania, announcing that they were on a sitdown strike. They were getting two and a half cents less per hour than Mellon's people drew.

The stir all this made in the community may readily be imagined. Farmers were for and against the decision to boycott the hunt, but they were unanimously certain Mellon was bluffing. They guessed what Rolling Rock meant, in the way of prestige and sentimental attachment to the Mellon family. His talk of discontinuing the hunts didn't feaze them one bit.

NATURALLY the whole situation was aggravated by the inherent tendency of farmers whose land is ridden over by stylish huntsmen to resent it—no matter how well they are paid for the damage to their fields and fences. This is a chronic discontent that exists in every hunting community and is invariably heightened every time a fox gets into a chicken house or a farmer takes revenge on all foxes, hunters and hounds, by blowing some fat animal to pieces with his shotgun. The business men of Ligonier naturally don't share this animosity. For them the hunt is a colorful and sentimental occasion and the steeplechases —which they are permitted to attend —are not only very gala, but highly profitable.

Now, in order to catch the full flavor of this episode of bucolic temperaments and explain the injured innocence both parties displayed to the world, it is necessary to look into the background of the proud overlord of Rolling Rock.

The late Richard Beatty Mellon, Richard King's father, founded the farm. He was one of the two brothers of the Honorable Andrew W. Mellon, late Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to Great Britain. Richard Beatty seems to have had the same passion for building his more distinguished brother had for collecting. Some of Pittsburgh's finest public buildings were his gift and he established Rolling Rock as the playground of all the Mellons, by now a numerous (and prosperous) brood.

Rolling Rock Farm began as a nursery for fine crops, sleek stock and prize-winning farm produce in general. Soon after its establishment it began to be a consistent winner at country fairs all over the region—as well it might. Mellons were not inhibited by any of the ills that keep the average dirt farmer out of the blue ribbon booths. It was the present Dick Mellon and his cousin, Paul Mellon, Andrew's son, who turned the farm into the horsiest estate in Pennsylvania—and the smartest establishment of its kind in America. Both were keen riders and fond of racing.

Throughout the development of Rolling Rock Farm into a racing farm, a race course and so on, the Mellon boys have been extremely hospitable. For years they paid all the bills and their friends had a good share of the fun. In 1934, carrying the hospitable function still further, the board of governors of the Rolling Rock Club decided to assess members $25 a year. Naturally this wasn't expected to defray any significant part of the upkeep. The assessment was slapped on just to make members "feel more independent." Dick Mellon even went so far as to give up some of his proprietary rights. The board announced that henceforth he was to be regarded as simply a "regular, dues paying member."

The clubby good fellowship was further established by the founding, that same year, of Rolling Rock Hunt Steeplechase. Although this institution was avowed a memorial to Dick's late father, three other hunts were to contribute to its support—Indiana, Sewickley and Fox Chapel. It required a whole army of workmen, oxen and tractors, to construct this course, which has since come to be regarded as the model for steeplechase courses throughout the country. Its brush course was a beauty and the whole run was so expertly designed (by William Almy Jr., of Boston) that its entire length was visible from a central hillside. This gives it an advantage over virtually every other

JACKSON, Kentucky.

IT WAS court day in Jackson. Johnnie Shepherd and his brother, Noah, were to have their examining trial for the Christmas eve killing of Harvey Gabbard. As the tower clock of Breathitt County's historic courthouse told the hour, the street idlers and the mountain men who had come by mule-back from the creeks shuffled inside and took seats for such drama as the day might bring. The rising sun sent slanting rays through high windows into the dingy room that has been the scene of hundreds of murder trials.

Mrs. Viola Wickline, mother of Harvey, was there, sitting at the right within the rail. Judge George W. Little came on the bench and without ceremony the day's business was begun. The buzz of conversation subsided. Late comers, at a warning glance from the Judge, softened their steps. The two defendants were brought in by Jailer William Combs and Deputy Sheriff John Rice and given chairs at the left of the railed enclosure. Mrs. Wickline, sitting facing them across the open space in front of the bench, glared at them. They shifted uneasily and averted their eyes. Johnnie Shepherd, a cripple since childhood, laid his crutches on the floor.

Mrs. Wickline furtively watched Chief of Police Albert Sizemore, sitting near her, facing the bench. Sizemore arose and went into the consultation room. Jailer Combs was standing at the end of the bench. Deputy Rice was busy. There was nobody between Mrs. Wickline and the two Shepherds. Her moment had come. She sprang to the center of the clear space, flipped away a handkerchief that had covered the .38 pistol that she held in her right hand and leveled the pistol.

"You killed my boy and I'm going to kill you," she screamed, and began firing.

Noak ducked and the first bullet, aimed at him, missed him, but struck George Shouse, 27 years old, sitting behind Noah, mortally wounding him. Mrs. Wickline, apparently thinking that she had hit Noah before he crouched, turned the weapon on Johnnie, and fired two bullets into his body. She fired a fourth shot before Jailer Combs could reach her, wounding Moss Noble, an attorney, in the leg.

There was panic in the courtroom. Attorneys and others within the rail scattered and the spectators stampeded. Mrs. Wickline, disarmed, stood panting in front of the bench, incoherently declaring her right to revenge for what the Shepherds had done.

"Take her to jail," Judge Little commanded and Jailer Combs led her away.

"Bill," she said to Combs, "my boy had to go, let them go too."

Johnnie Shepherd, who had slumped to the floor, was placed in a chair and carried to the nearby hospital, where he died shortly after noon. The Christmas eve killing that led to the courthouse killings was at Andy Deaton's Yellow Cat Cafe. Harvey Gabbard, Mrs. Wickline's 17-year-old son by a previous marriage was there. Luly Bee Haynes, 17 years old, of Troublesome Creek, was there and the Shepherd boys, Johnnie, 21, and Noah, 23, were there. Luly Bee is pretty and capricious. Noah Shepherd and Harvey Gabbard were rivals for her favor. Both were dissatisfied because she would not decide between them. They quarreled and Luly Bee went away. Her going enraged them the more. They started to fight inside the restaurant and, still fighting, went into the street.

Photo-diagram showing the positions of Mrs. Wickline and the two Shepherd brothers after she had ceased firing.

Johnnie Shepherd, swinging out behind them on his crutches, drew his pistol from its holster and waited until Gabbard, lashing out at his older antagonist, shifted his position, presenting his back. Sagging his weight on his crutches, Johnnie raised his pistol and fired and Harvey Gabbard crumpled to the ground and died. His body was taken home to his mother and the two Shepherds were locked up.

Through Christmas day and until Sunday Mrs. Wickline kept her boy's body, brooding, and on Sunday she took it to the Gabbard burying ground on Puncheon Creek. She heard with seeming stoicism the clods that fell on his coffin and turned away, hiding a purpose to take two lives for the one that had been taken. Until the court met on Tuesday she held to her purpose and perfected her plan. The court, beginning its slow process of fixing guilt, would give her the chance of avenging her son in a more speedy and a more certain way.

Tuesday morning, on a pretext, she tarried behind at home when her husband and other members of her family were starting to the courthouse, and secured her husband's revolver. She wrapped a handkerchief about it and held it under her coat when she entered the courtroom and took her seat in the front row of chairs at the right of the enclosure, eyeing the brothers when they were brought in and awaiting her chance.

There was suspicion that Mrs. Wickline had had accomplices in planning and carrying out her plan. Her husband, William Wickline; Mrs. Mattie Downs Haddix and Buck Gabbard were arrested on warrants charging the four with murder. There appeared to be more feeling against Mrs. Wickline than is ordinarily aroused over a killing where killings are common, and as the Jackson jail is insecure, she was taken to the new jail at Hindman after she had waived examining trial and had been denied bail. It was also deemed prudent to remove Noah Shepherd and he was taken to Winchester. The three accused with Mrs. Wickline had their examining trial a few days later under precautions to prevent a similar occurrence. All witnesses and others were searched for weapons as they entered the courtroom. After hearing eight witnesses Judge Little decided that the three had not been implicated and they were set free.

Following the shooting in the courthouse it was the turn of the Shepherd family to mourn, but Johnnie Shepherd was not survived by a mother to brood and plan revenge. His mother had died three years before when the family lived on Lost Creek. He was buried beside her near Clayhole.

Following the slaying of Harvey Gabbard and with Noah Shepherd in jail, Luly Bee Haynes felt free to encourage the attentions of other men and so it came about that on the very day when Shepherd was brought from Winchester to go to trial on the charge of complicity in the killing of Gabbard, Luly Bee was in jail as a material witness in the killing of Ira Southwood, 30 years old, of Fugate's Fork, by Charlie Kazee of Nick's Branch, on the waters of Troublesome.

Harvey Gabbard.

The day before had been Sunday and Luly Bee, like all the mountain girls since the hard road came up North Fork of Kentucky River, changing the mountain life, was out walking along the concrete, watching the automobiles go by, finding diversions that she did not have before. Toward the end of the day she was with Southwood and Kazee and Kelly Sanders along the highway beside Troublesome, near where Clayhole voting house formerly stood, the scene of an election day battle more than 10 years ago in which four were killed and 17 wounded. After nightfall they still were strolling along the road. Kazee and Southwood had been drinking from the two pint bottles of moonshine liquor that Kazee had brought along.

Then, as much on account of the liquor as on account of the girl, they fell to quarreling. Southwood had a revolver. He took it out of his pocket and fired a shot into the swiftly flowing current of Troublesome. Kazee took the weapon away from him and they quarreled some more about that. Kazee became enraged and threatened to kill Southwood.

"Charlie," said Southwood, "you are going to kill your best friend."

Kazee had no particular objection to killing his best friend. He fired one shot over Southwood's shoulder and then sent a bullet through his body. He and Kelly Sanders ran away, but Luly Bee stayed with Southwood until he died.

Because of her second appearance in what looked like a triangle killing, Luly Bee was arrested along with Kazee and brought to jail and the next morning, when Noah Shepherd was in Circuit Court for trial Luly Bee was in County Court testifying in the examining trial growing out of the killing of Southwood. Shepherd's trial was continued on account of the absence of some of the witnesses.

LULY BEE told a straightforward story and was released, but will be a witness when Kazee is tried for murder.

The girl is convinced that she would not have been here to testify if Southwood had not fired a bullet into Troublesome before Kazee took the weapon away from him, for when Kazee had shot Southwood he snapped the gun at her, only to discover that there were no more cartridges. "If I had more cartridges," he said, "I would kill all of you."

Before Luly Bee figured in the two tragedies that caused the death of four men, her brother, Harrison Haynes, was killed. He was employed at a wayside eating place on Troublesome near the mouth of Clayhole and was murdered in his bed and robbed of $75. Clinton Sanders was killed at the same time.

After Mrs. Wickline was taken to Hindman jail she still sorrowed for her son and worried over the killing of Shouse and the wounding of Noble. She had no regrets, she said, for killing Johnnie Shepherd and was only sorry that she had not also killed Noah, but she was sorry that she had killed Shouse. Brooding over that she began to act queerly and after a while it was brought to the attention of the Court that there should be an inquiry into her condition. Physicians appointed to examine her reported that she had become insane and recommended that she be committed to the State Hospital at Lexington and this was done. It is not believed that she was insane at the time of the courtroom shooting and if she recovers her reason she will be tried.

Luly Bee, who was christened Lulu Belle, but is never called that, is capricious still and does not spend much time at the home of her mother, Mrs. Steve Haynes, whose new log cabin, replacing the home that was burned not long ago, stands a quarter of a mile up Clayhole Creek from where it empties into Troublesome. Of one thing, though, she is sure. She is not going to have men fighting over her if she can help it, because she never wants to go back to the jailhouse at Jackson.

PHILADELPHIA, Pennsylvania.

A SQUAD of Federal agents and detectives slipped into the suspected house at 6 o'clock in the morning. On the second floor they forced a door and entered a room where a woman was asleep. There were keys on a table there, and with one of these they unlocked a door into a rear room. It was a steel door, six inches thick. The windows of this room were covered with heavy steel screening. The heavy brick wall separating it from an adjoining house was, it was discovered, lined with steel netting. In the room were three Chinese men.

In a hurried search the raiders found three tins of opium, several opium pipes and lamps, a quantity of yen shee, which is opium residue, and three pints of yen shee suey, an alcoholic beverage made from yen shee. Later they found three more smoking sets in a wall behind a bookcase. The police took the woman, the three men and the confiscated material to headquarters.

The woman was the proprietor of the place. She was Mrs. Florence Jung. For years she had been a resident of the district, known commonly as Flossie and often called "The Queen of Chinatown." Despite the facts that her two husbands had been Chinese, her associates were Chinese and it was in Chinese that she screamed her protests when she was hustled into the police station, this "Queen of Chinatown" was a white woman. Now an opium addict and accused of operating an opium dive, she had come to Chinatown 35 years before as a lay missionary, zealous to uplift its residents—particularly eager to win them away from opium smoking.

Something of her life during those years and before—how the time came when she could not save herself from the insidious adversary she had been fighting on behalf of others—she told the other day after the hysterical outburst occasioned by her arrest had subsided. Her narrative supplemented the story written on her yellowed face; at 56 she is an old woman, haggard and worn, all beauty gone.

Florence was an English girl, healthy, fresh-faced, daughter of a Yorkshire innkeeper. She fell in love with a Chinese. "I was only 17," she said, "when I met—I won't tell you his name. He was an ace. He is why I have always loved the Chinese. I was going to medical school and so was he. I was wildly in love with him and he with me. My family did not object. They don't feel about the Chinese in England as you do in America.

"HE CAME to America, to Philadelphia, to be a doctor. I followed—to visit my sister, but really to be near him, and we were married. And I loved him so much. We had four children. I have buried three of them. Only a daughter now is with me and she has seven fine children. One is in college. (The daughter also married a Chinese.)

"My husband died. I hadn't much money. That is where this opium all started." Rather incoherently she spoke of pain and of doctors giving her morphine. "I couldn't stand the pain without the morphine. But I wanted to stop taking it. Opium, that is better than morphine. That is easier to take. I only took it because of the pain. . . . I had to take it . . . I had to take it!"

Not long after the death of her first husband, she continued, she married another Chinese, Sui Jung, an importer and exporter. Twelve years ago, she said, Jung went back to China to visit relatives, and because of United States exclusion law has never been able to return to this country. She was, she said, let to shift for the children and herself. She hadn't heard from her husband for the last seven years—but thought he still cared for her. She had been making her living, she asserted, by sewing, crocheting, teaching English to Chinese and taking in lodgers.

Part of her story Flossie didn't tell It wasn't necessary—officers already knew it. In 1929, according to police records, she was arrested on a charge of illegal possession of opium. She was found in a luxuriously furnished apartment, in one wall of which an Oriental shrine of marble had been built, and she appeared in court fashionably dressed and wearing jewels. Officers reported they had found $2000 worth of opium behind a wall of the house and $10,000 worth of the drug and pipes in the cellar. But they could not prove that Mrs. Jung owned the contraband, so she was discharged.

AGAIN in 1934 she was in court on a dope charge—a series of charges, in fact, dealing with the illegal handling of opium. And at that time a strange thing happened. Federal Judge George A. Welsh looked down from his bench at the "Queen of Chinatown" and recognized her as the zealous young missionary worker among the Chinese he had known 30 years before. Back in 1904 Judge Welsh was an assistant in the District Attorney's office and the police were having trouble with Chinatown, where the tongs were often at war. Florence Jung helped Assistant District Attorney Welsh by serving as interpreter between the Chinese and officialdom. In that work in the interest of peace he came to know of this white woman's fondness for her husband's people, of her efforts to Americanize them and of her reputation for smoothing out controversies among them.

Remembering these things, the Judge unhappily pondered the question of how best to deal with the woman she had become. Her guilt in the case before him was established. But she declared, "I became addicted to the use of opium by doing social service work among the Chinese." Finally the Judge said: "Well, I hardly know what to do. I remember you from years back and from what I remember, I don't know that putting you in jail would particularly serve the public."

He sentenced her then to 18 months in jail, but suspended the sentence and put her on probation for five years. She went back to her home in Chinatown.

She has been released on bail, but she is terribly afraid that she will be sent to prison this time. She is terribly afraid to go to prison because she feels sure she wouldn't get any opium there.

"And I'll die of pain," she wails, "without opium."

LIVING on MILK and LIKING IT

Experiments at the University of Wisconsin Tend to Show That Adults Not Only Retain Health on the Diet, but Sometimes Gain Weight.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MADISON, Wisconsin.

THREE University of Wisconsin students have just returned to adult diet after periods of seven weeks to four months in which they subsisted wholly on milk—with essential minerals added — supplemented sparingly by apples and oranges.

They maintained weight, and one of them gained three pounds. They say it wasn't hard. One of them says he wouldn't mind going on with it, though another overate on his first "regular" meal.

It was all part of an experiment conducted by Professor E. G. Hastings of the department of bacteriology and Sigrud Funder, 23 years old, a Norwegian student on fellowship from the University of Oslo, where his father is a faculty member. The experiment had a double objective—the study not only of the efficiency of the diet in providing nourishment, but also of its effect on intestinal flora. The experiment was terminated because of Funder's approaching return to Oslo.

Robert Goodrich, senior agricultural student, stuck to the exclusive milk diet for four months; Emil Petrusek, college senior, and Leonard Marshall, sophomore engineer, for seven weeks.

Goodrich is working his way and has worked for his meals. He might not have paid much attention to the call for volunteers for the experiment if the milk had not been offered free. That was right down his alley. This winter, with food provided in the name of science, he could work for cash.

"It was easy," he says. "I had no craving for meat, though I did crave sweets sometimes in the last month or so. And that went away when I drank some milk.

"Christmas made it tough. I went home for the holidays, too—but I kept up the diet."

Goodrich got three and one-half quarts of milk a day. So long as he got it from the university dairy, which maintains a high butterfat content, his weight held up to his usual 148 pounds. He lost six pounds in two weeks in the infirmary, where milk lower in fats was provided, but promptly regained his weight on returning to the richer milk.

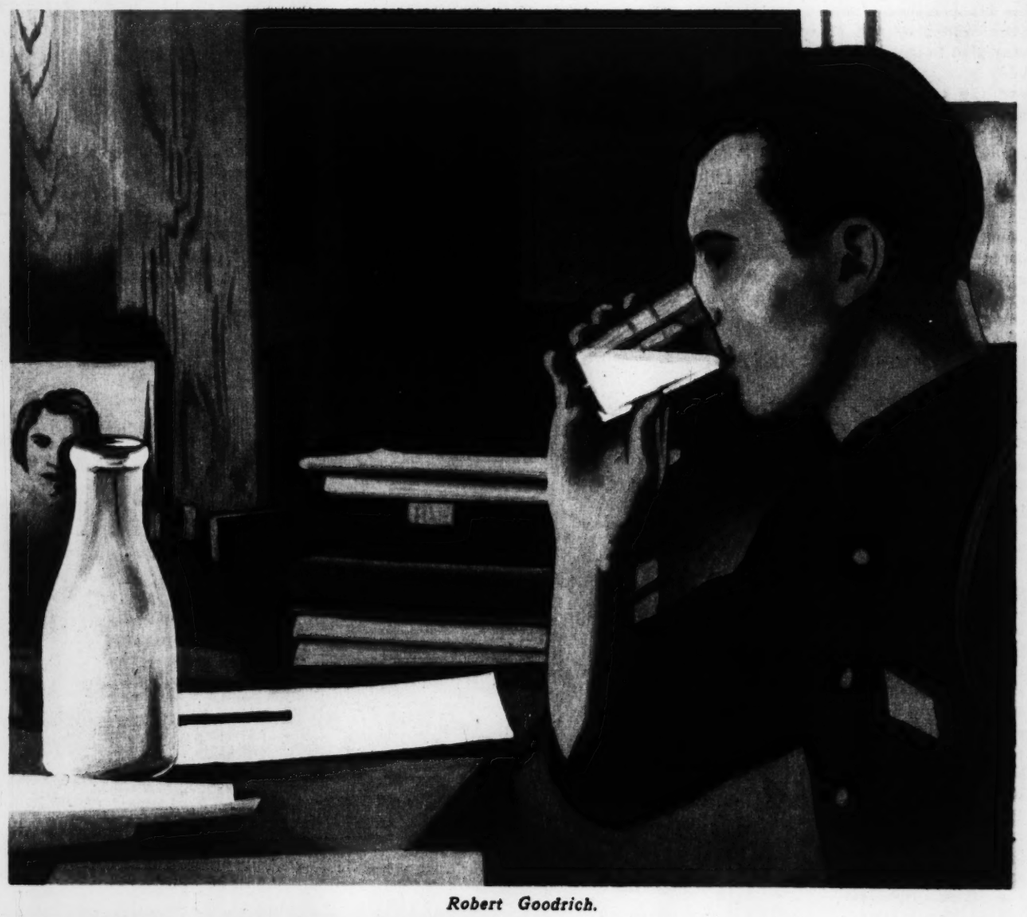
His supplementary diet consisted of two apples and two oranges daily. That was all—not even a candy bar or a yesterday's biscuit. No wonder his first full meal was full, indeed.

"I had some meat balls, potatoes and vegetables—a regular meal," he says. "If I had ill effects, it was from the quantity. I'd have felt the same effect from that meal even if I'd been on ordinary diet for the last four months."

Petrusek, who ate one apple and one orange a day, began with a daily ration of three and one-half quarts of milk, but had to step it up to four. He gained weight, and says he liked the diet so well he "could go for more of it."

Copper and iron were added to the milk, explains Professor Hastings, to supply its deficiencies for adult diet.

"From the viewpoint of bacteriology," he says, "the testing was to find the reaction of bacteria in the intestinal tract. And this experiment was only a beginning, a preliminary survey to determine if it is worth while to go on along these lines."



Robert Goodrich.

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

THAD SNOW

The Philosopher-Farmer of Swamp-East Missouri

CHARLESTON, Missouri.

THAD SNOW has been a Swamp-East Missouri farmer since 1911 and still regards himself "passionately a farmer." It has only been a matter of four years since he began writing letters to the editor of the Post-Dispatch. Only during the last year or two has he come to be recognized as this paper's foremost amateur contributor.

Since 1933 he has fired about three dozen contributions at the "Letters From the People" column. While the vast majority of unsolicited contributions necessarily never find their way into print, virtually every line Thad Snow has turned in has been seized on by the editor of the letter column and rushed into type.

Aside from this Thad Snow's robust earthy and immaculately turned epistles have earned him not only the gratitude and admiration of the editorial writing staff; they have also gained their author his own personal following. He probably enjoys a bigger fan mail per insertion than any other private or professional contributor to the Post-Dispatch, with the exception of Martha Carr. And the word "enjoys" is used advisedly, for Thad Snow has about as voracious an appetite for amusement as any man alive. In one case he wrote a piece for the letter column merely in hopes of getting a reply from the gentleman at whom it was directed.

This sense of fun together with the sun-kissed amiability, the mellow rustic wisdom, boundless independence and sympathy which characterize the letters, prompted the visit on which this sketch is largely based. Snow turned out to be a fairly tall man superficially not dissimilar to the run of prosperous bottoms farmers. His face is tan and pink and, while it bears no strong resemblance to the features of the late Will Rogers, it looks as if it might have been the original of which Will Rogers' face was a caricature. Snow is 55. His hair, cropped short up to the forelock, is iron gray on top and mist gray around the temples. He wears thin white-rimmed glasses that slip comfortably up and down the short firm bridge of his cherry-tipped nose. His intonation is characteristic of the region—totally unlike the Southern drawl that becomes prevalent only a few miles down the river—perfectly Missourian and unknown outside the corner of Missouri where it originates. Like innumerable plain men of the region Thad Snow is gifted with a plenteous eloquence. Unlike any of them, he has a commensurate power of expressing himself in written prose.

"I can't claim to be wholly unsophisticated as regards literary expression," he will say. "I'm a great reader, you know." As a matter of fact Thad Snow came under the influence of letters early in life, being the son of a well-to-do business man in Greenfield, Indiana, and a boon companion of James Whitcomb Riley, who was in his sixties during most of Thad's youth. In addition he was a keen student of philosophy at the University of Michigan and evidently took more than the regular four years' course at Ann Arbor, where a close friend of his on the English faculty tried to force him into a career as a writer. He says now that he never had any such intention. When he left Ann Arbor he had no choice. He had studied himself into a condition of physical collapse and for some time seemed unlikely ever to regain good health. He found it as a pioneer in the swamp country and his gratitude to the land for the peace and well-being it gave him has never ebbed. In spite of which there is a pretty clear indication that Thad Snow has been reluctantly fascinated by the urge to write ever since boyhood. Occasionally in the past he contributed articles to local papers and to the farm journals to which he subscribed. The first writing of his to appear in the Post-Dispatch was reprinted from Capper's Farmer in 1931. Occasionally the autobiographical note, which conversation can extract from him only by use of every reportorial wile and refinement of coercion, creeps into his letters. In his "Notes on Swamp-East Missouri" published last January, he gave such a glimpse into his and his country's past.

"We are still in our youth," he wrote, "and the smoke of the clearing is still familiar to our nostrils. . . . When I came to Swamp-East Missouri, the dredging and clearing were already under headway, but the country was still very much in the rough. As a new settler I was greeted with the usual question, 'What did you do?' The county was then so uninviting that every newcomer was presumed to have left his former abode under a cloud and pursued by the Sheriff. Sometimes the Sheriffs crossed the river and came after us, but usually the riddance was considered good enough . . . which no doubt helps to account for our rapid increase in population." The irony which characterizes this letter is in Thad Snow's best vein. He mentions, for example, that his small county aims to produce at least one murder a month—more murders per unit of population than any other part of the nation.

Occasionally the hyperbole that creeps into his humor and the subtlety of his method gets the writer into trouble. Back in 1920 he read a paper before a meeting of the Southeast Missouri Agricultural Bureau in which he pretended to quote letters and a report from a New York efficiency expert the Executive Committee was supposed to have brought there at $1000 a day. The report was obviously Thad Snow's own keen and faintly acid analysis of the farm situation, but a newspaper editor in the gathering missed the point. He had a stenographer take down every word of the report and printed it verbatim and in full the next day. His subsequent humiliation may be imagined. He wouldn't speak to Thad Snow for 15 years and is just beginning to be civil now.

Thad Snow.

Yet despite his fatal gift for satire, Snow is essentially a lovable and altruistic man, just, independent and honest. He is a successful farmer in every sense. One gets the impression that his thousand acres of rich bottoms land would flourish if the rest of Missouri suddenly became desert. That is pretty nearly what happened last year. In the midst of the drouth he was out inspecting the acres being cultivated by one of his sharecroppers. (The cotton land is farmed by croppers and runs to 300 acres; the rest is filled by "hands.") "How much do you think we'll make on this?" Snow asked. The cropper allowed as he might make 300 pounds to an acre. Thad estimated 400. He was so certain the cropper had underestimated that he made a bargain with the fellow. If he made less than 400 pounds an acre, Thad would pay him for 400. If he made more, he was to pay Thad for the excess. And at the end of the most dreadful drouth in the records, with crops burning up everywhere else, this acreage yielded 650 an acre, 150 pounds better than the "bale-an-acre" yield most planters dream about. Thad secretly turned over the winnings to the cropper's wife, swearing her to secrecy.

Thad is reputed to spend only an hour a day on farming, the rest on reading, writing and studying. He was asked whether this is so, and had to admit it wasn't. He doesn't spend anything like an hour a day at farming he said. "That is one of the immunities of age and experience," he said proudly. And told how he has recently adopted the custom of wandering out to the fields in his old bathrobe, looking around a little, and then going back to bed. While he didn't say so, two factors are probably responsible for this. His management has become so expert that the plantation almost runs itself. And this is owing to the fact that his reputation for justice and generous dealing has won him the most conscientious and adoring workers in the entire district. His is the only place in Mississippi County where Negro and white labor work together in perfect accord. Yet, if one asks Thad Snow whether he thinks it is possible to make money farming under the present economic system, he'll answer blithely: "Sure it is. All you have to do is work plenty of rich bottom land—and pay your workers as little as possible."

THAD SNOW'S old Southern mansion is a tiny shingled cottage not much bigger than his croppers' cabins. It faces down the stem of a T-shape intersection of slab road, down which he can watch the sun dip into hazy fences of distant timber in a nightly valedictory blaze of glory. From this intersection his rich umber soil stretches out a mile down both sides of the highway, a mile north and south and a mile east, behind the cottage. He is planning to build a larger house a little back from the road on a slight rise of ground in the midst of the heavy timber which is now his background.

His family consists of a sympathetic wife, whom Thad used to follow around the house reading bits of Thorstein Veblen to, and several charming daughters. Emily, aged 9, or thereabouts, is his severest critic. When Associated Press men swarmed to her father during the flood, to get information he alone could give, she came to him after their departure and admonished him not to let their attention make him conceited. When she was told that the people in St. Louis wanted to know more about her father, she told the Post-Dispatch that this didn't impress her in the least. And to prove it made a defiant exit.

Thad Snow's observation of the flood and its effect on his neighbors in the fuse-plug area embittered him greatly and may be partly responsible for his decision to move away from the road side. He himself is probably responsible for the fact that his county is so elaborately provided with paved county roads and is very proud of the accomplishment—which took a lot of shrewd fighting. He is also very active in flood control committee work and favors the fuse-plug expedient, despite his disgust with the way it was carried out. But watching the refugees file past his door step this winter was too much. He described the spectacle in one of his finest letters to the Post-Dispatch, one that was printed under the cartoon and reprinted all over the country. It's reportorial excellence was so telling that English professors wrote in to say they were using it as a model. This masterpiece was written while the floodway waters were lapping the top of the setback levee, threatening every minute to bury the Snow plantation under 10 feet of muddy ice water.

The simplicity and lack of affectation that characterize Thad Snow's writing characterize his thinking, too, and his behavior. Seated at Governor Stark's conference table the other day, he noticed a gentleman sitting near the head of the table. He didn't have much to say, but what he said was pointed, and often witty. "Now I like that," Thad Snow says, "so I began to watch his face. It was a right good kind of face—plain and honest, and he smiled easy." So after the meeting, which had something to do with flood control, Snow went up to the Governor and Stark introduced him to the other man. "Governor Horner of Illinois," he said. So Thad Snow told the other man what he had been thinking at the table—told it just as he had thought it. "Well, Mr. Snow," Governor Horner said, "I suppose that when anybody says that kind of nice thing to me I'm supposed to fall back and be embarrassed and blush a little. But as a matter of fact —I like it." And that is how Horner joined the ranks of honest plain-spoken men whom Thad Snow admires and loves. "That's just the kind of thing I could say if somebody liked my writing," he says. "I know I know a little about farming. But if anybody likes the way I write, that tickles me—and I have to admit it."

Among the other great (or near great) men whom Snow admires is Henry Wallace. They met several years ago and spent five days in genial intense discussion. Thad picked Wallace as Secretary of Agriculture years before President Roosevelt did and wholly approves the policies he has initiated and his manner of conducting himself in office. He was among the 4500 farmer pilgrims who went to Washington to thank the administration for the AAA. One of his best letters relates to the pilgrimage, and attacks the textile interests and newspaper writers who declared the whole thing a sham. . . . Characteristically, Snow doesn't remember where it was that he spent those five days talking to Wallace. He doesn't remember how many hands and croppers he has living on his plantation either.

Thad's political convictions are robust, consistent and hard to formulate. He doesn't subscribe to any stated program or philosophy, but is stridently independent in his thinking and says you couldn't label him if you wanted to. In the most vigorous sense of the word, he is a liberal and a progressive. Those aren't exactly tags.

He reads voraciously, but without any attempt to cover many books or authors. If he finds a writer to his taste, he reads everything he has written. Thorstein Veblen is his favorite and Snow started the interest in Veblen which has been editorially promoted by the Post-Dispatch. The fact that he admired both Veblen and the present administration led him to write a long letter attempting to prove that the New Deal was an expression of Veblen's philosophy. Frank McClelland, a noted St. Louis economist, who didn't like the New Deal, answered this by attacking Snow. "It is a little discouraging," McClelland wrote, "To find a student of Veblen—there are too few—missing the whole point of his writings so badly as Mr. Snow has done. . . . Each of Veblen's disciples interprets his doctrine in the light of his own experience."

"WELL I can take it," Thad Snow replied to this robust chastisement. "He challenges me to name a single administrative act that 'smacks of Veblenism.' By George, I'm not going to do it. . . . The thing is for everybody to read Veblen for himself, then each can do his own interpreting." This unprecedented way of parrying a bitter thrust put an end to what promised to be a lively impact of minds.

One might expect Thad Snow to make enemies galore among his prosperous land-owning neighbors and the business men of Charleston. That he doesn't is little short of miraculous, and in some respects it is a miracle. Take the sharecropper problem for an instance. Obviously Thad Snow's sharecroppers are better housed and better treated than most. They are all Negroes, but even though Snow recognizes the inscrutable stubbornness of the race question, he can't see why Negroes should be ipso facto less excellent than his own race. So they come to him in droves asking advice, asking aid, asking friendship. Naturally the Tenant Farmers' Union organizers come, too. Thad simply can't understand why he should be the only landowner in his entire county who doesn't involuntarily yearn to lynch a few of them. "You'd think there would be at least one other," he says plaintively. At any rate he himself takes delight in helping along the organization of tenants and sharecroppers. And when a courageous band of them assembled in Charleston for a demonstration, he was naturally on hand to see what would happen. He took along a Baptist preacher who is a good friend of his. The demonstration came off peaceably enough, though Snow's friend finally felt it necessary to disappear, lest a parishioneer see him there.

And the episode had a sequel. In pure gratitude he later invited the minister to come out to his house for a game of checkers and an afternoon's shooting. As they played, he thought things over and finally he said: "Look here, now. I've come to a point in my life where I want to make a change in my religious habits. For years, you know, I've been staying away from the Methodist Church. But I'm so grateful to you for your interest in these poor Christian croppers that I've decided to make a change. From now on," he concluded, "I'm going to stay away from your church exclusively." The parson roared with glee.

RIGHT now Snow is at his wit's end. His business men friends have come asking him to help them with a contribution for the erection of a shot factory. The $1000 they ask doesn't bother him. They tell him he'll get that back with interest, since the company (a St. Louis firm whose name he forgets) will dock the workers 10 per cent of their wages till the original cost is paid back. The company, which of course, rents its machinery, won't have a cent invested in Charleston. And this scheme, which sounds like a good business move to the town boosters, will lead, inevitably, Thad feels, to bloodshed and horror. He tells them that the whole plan is simply a scheme to avoid paying union wages in St. Louis. Thad is a philosopher on the Justice Holmes order. He thinks people have a right to make their own blunders. The only thing that he isn't certain of is whether capitalists have a right to make blunders they themselves won't have to pay for, and then take it out on the workers.

Such heady problems Thad Snow, who has nothing of the evangelist in him, leaves to reformers. He is willing to go to Washington, St. Louis, Jefferson City, Memphis to work for the good of his county. He even went to Alaska to satisfy his curiosity about the Matanuska Valley colony—which he approved wholly. He hasn't a grain of personal ambition and thanks his stars that he needn't work for a salary.

"The only time I feel better than my fellow man," he once wrote, "is when I am starting out on a hunt. Just when I am starting out I feel that way. After the first point I am no longer conscious of the conventional world and its invidious distinctions."

Occasionally, though, his serenity is shattered by a yearning to know how the other half thinks. This occurred after several months' perusal of the economic generalizations published as advertisements in the daily press by a trust company. Finally Thad Snow could contain his curiosity no longer. Just to get a rise out of the ad writer he wrote the people's column a letter ostensibly praising the advertisements, but concluding with the provocative phrase: "I should like to know if the writer's mind does actually stop at the limits observed in his writing." A friend of his immediately wrote remonstrating: "I know you were only kidding, but lots of people will think you're turning a Tory." Thad explained his mischief to his friend and handed his explanation to the postman. The latter handed him in return a long letter from the banker who had himself written the ads. He read the letter through. Subsequently he met the banker—came to St. Louis just for that purpose. Now Thad Snow doesn't think Tories are quite as obnoxious as they are improbable. He still doesn't think anyone could believe the things that man wrote in his advertisements.

CLIFF DWELLER'S POTTERY JAR

By WALTER DAHLGREN

In our great Southwest lives the Pueblo tribe of Indians—they are descended from the early cliff dwellers. Ages before the coming of the Spaniards (in 1519) the cliff dwellers had developed a comparatively high civilization. Sheltered beneath overhanging cliffs they had built, with stone, homes resembling the baronial castles of the Old World. Not only were these people good builders, but also were they good weavers and potters and designers. The drawing in the lower right-hand corner is of a pottery jar made by the ancient cliff dwellers. Beside it is an Indian "prayer stick" in the form of an ear of corn. By comparing the jar and the prayer stick you may see how the design was developed. The little squares with the dots each represents a grain of corn.

DIRECTIONS ● Mount page upon thin cardboard and cut out the parts. Fold on dotted lines and paste (stars indicate paste). Paste up the base first and then add the top. Insert the tabs on handle into slits "A" and "B" and paste to inside. Now fasten the neck to base by pasting the four tabs on neck to the four white (starred) areas on the top.

HICKORY HOLLOW FOLKS

And the Things They Do

By WALTER QUERMANN

A VERY STRANGE SEED

THE CHARACTERS

BILL BUNNY—A carefree little rabbit.

RIP RACKEY—An industrious old raccoon.

Today as Bill Bunny was hopping from one juicy patch of clover to another, he saw his old friend, Rip Rackey, plowing. Now there is one thing that has always puzzled Bill. That is why anyone should work on such a nice day as this. And being a very curious individual, he hops over to Rip to find the answer to this big puzzle. We see him talking to the old raccoon as

THE PLAY BEGINS

BILL BUNNY—Hello, Rip. I see you're plowing like you always do at this time of year.

RIP RACKEY—Hello, Bill. And I see you're loafing like you always do.

BILL BUNNY—You can call it loafing if you want to—I call it having a good time. Tell me, Rip, what fun do you get out of plowing?

RIP RACKEY — If your memory was as long as your ears, you'd remember that when the snow is deep on the ground you get awful hungry if you can't find something to eat. So I plow and plant corn and store it away so I don't have to worry about getting something to eat when winter comes.

BILL BUNNY—Ha! Ha! Ha! I'm going to have a good time while I can. I'll worry about winter when it gets here. (And Bill, laughing heartily, dances merrily away.) Ha! Ha! Ha! Rip worries to much. After he gets his corn planted he'll worry about not getting enough rain or maybe about getting too much. But no matter what happens he's going to worry. I guess some folks aren't happy unless they're worrying. But as for me, I never worry, and I'm always happy. (Just then something comes screaming down out of the sky and lands with a thud at Bill's feet.)

BILL BUNNY—(Startled.) What was that? (He looks at the spot where it landed.) Gosh, it made an awful deep hole. I wonder what it was? (He digs way down and finally finds a strange looking seed. He holds it in his hand and looks at it.) Why, it's a seed. Where did it come from? It didn't fall out of a tree, because there isn't any tree around here. And no bird dropped it, because there aren't any birds around either. It just dropped out of the sky. I wonder if the man in the moon threw it down here. I'm going to plant it. I wonder what it will be when it grows?

He himself put up the magnificent trophy originally commissioned by Alfonso XIII, ex-King of Spain. He himself put up the magnificent trophy originally commissioned by Alfonso XIII, ex-King of Spain. This enormous cup (His Majesty paid the equivalent of $4000 for it in 1930) had been won by Mellon's Glangesia at Grassland Downs, Tennessee, the year after it was put up. Since Rolling Rock has put it back in circulation the first three horses that race for it have been qualified to represent the United States in the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England.

Probably no rural landscape in America gives more opportunities for fractured collar bones than Rolling Rock. This fact has drawn thither an unusual number of first rate horses, among them Bagatelle, Dan Rock, Massapequa, Melita, Anchors Aweigh, Louis d'Or and Cold Punch.

Betting was officially banned in 1935 and Mellon had 15 State police officers in plain clothes on hand to enforce the edict. The next year six bookies were fined for resuming their trade. There have been occasional other vexatious incidents. Once at the annual hunt the hounds gave tongue for a deer and streamed off over inaccessible territory while 65 irritated followers of the huntsman fidgeted in their saddles. Dick Mellon, the M. F. H., was by no means the least irritated. After two hours he had to call the hunt off.

On another sorry occasion, according to a fairly well authenticated legend, a farmer blew the fox to pieces with his shotgun, but that incident has an element of blasphemy in it so strange and terrible that no one would care to mention it at the Rolling Rock clubhouse. Today shooting a fox is a crime in Pennsylvania and few farmers would have the hardihood to risk it.

Year after year the Ligonier events have become more widely popular and money has tumbled recklessly into the hands of the local merchants—to the tune of about $150,000 a year, it is estimated. Of course the farmers around Rolling Rock have got their share, too. It is customary to pay a fixed sum to property owners for the preservation of the fox and the repair of fences and fields broken up by incompetent followers of the chase or trampled by the great cavalcades who regularly assemble for these gala sporting events.

As indicated above, the farmers don't tend to relish the hunt any better for all this bounty. The hunt takes in such a large area—nearly 87,000 acres—that it interferes seriously with such plainer pastimes as quail shooting. Inevitably it makes occasional inroads on the farmer's privacy and even if it didn't he would tend to resent in some degree the presence of herds of young millionaires well equipped with flasks and formidable thongs. At least that was the impression gathered by those who talked with the natives of Ligonier Hill and Loyalhanna Valley. Mellon himself got a very icy reception at the conference called by the embattled agriculturalists of the region, for presenting the strikers demands.

"Close it up," said Arthur Baum, a rawboned young rustic from Pleasant Valley, when Mellon threatened to close the hunt club, the steeplechase and Rolling Rock's various other enterprises. "Go ahead and close it!" Another farmer at the conference, Oliver Ankney, sat quietly stroking the ears of a tom cat he held in his lap. Finally he drawled slowly, "Well, Mr. Mellon, I got work enough down to my own place. We always got along somehow, before the club was ever there." As the discussion went on the farmers became increasingly obdurate and the ring of anger crept into Dick Mellon's suave voice. The meeting broke up in an atmosphere of rage. It was several weeks later that the business men entered the picture. Their interests, as Mellon knew, were at least superficially akin to the club's.

At the next meeting of the Board of Trade Ed Grombach took the leadership. The members were very pessimistic. Even Grombach had no hope of succeeding in effecting a compromise. But it was on his advice that the Board of Trade decided to wait a little longer, in hopes that the hatreds and passion of the farmers and of Mellon himself should subside.

FINALLY Grombach called on Mellon. He got a very chilly reception indeed. It was as if the lion were saying to the mouse, "What can a puny creature like you do for the monarch of the forest?" But Grombach persevered. The other day he succeeded in forcing the farmers to come down a little in their demands and apparently Mellon eventually balanced his principles against the pleasures he hoped to get out of Rolling Rock in the future—and decided to temporize.

It was a great triumph for Grombach and the boys down at Ligonier. As soon as the 36 farm hands had accepted Mellon's revised offer, their friends agreed to keep their places open for the hunt next fall.

Somehow, now that it's all over everyone seems rather glad that the thing was settled as it was. The farmers have had the satisfaction of showing their rugged independence and freedom from coercion. Mellon has upheld his principle. And the hounds will run again over the fat hills and gentle countryside of the Loyalhanna Valley. Only the foxes have reason to regret the upshot and they, apparently, haven't yet learned the power there is in organization.

The painting, which is 50 by 42 3-8 inches, was sent to the United States for sale by the firm of G. Katz of Dieren, Holland, which purchased it from the two Dutchmen who recently discovered it.

The names of these discoverers have not been disclosed by the new owner.

In the Dutch archives is a statement by Johannes Hellerus, a notary public, dated August 29, 1665, attesting that Rembrandt wanted to pay off Becker otherwise, but that the art patron insisted, "Let Rembrandt finish the Juno first." It would thus appear that Becker, recognizing the great genius of the painter, wanted the Juno much more than he wanted his few guilder.

The statement also reveals that Rembrandt must have been close to abject poverty since he had to pawn various objects with Becker.

The document follows:

"This day of Our Lord, the twenty-ninth of August, 1665; appeared before me, S. JOHANNES HELLERUS, notary public, admitted to the Court of Holland and resident of Amsterdam, Abraham Francen Sen., resident of this city, aged 50 years. By the request of S. Rembrandt Van Ryn Sen., painter, living at the Roosegracht, testified and witnessed thereof that it was the truth that he, the witness, ordered by the defendant, had gone to the residence of Harmen Becker and to Harmen Becker in person, one and a half years ago, not remembering the precise time, to suggest in the name of the defendant that the defendant would be willing to pay the capital plus the interest which he had the right to claim according to two different obligations noted as a deficit on the defendant's part, under the condition, that he, Becker immediately after receiving the sum will have to release and restitute all those objects pawned with him, and presenting to him the handwriting of the aforementioned Harmen Becker as a proof, whereon Becker responded: 'Let Rembrandt finish the Juno first,' moreover he should have liked the defendant to work for him even more, to which request the defendant was not obliged to adhere, wheron Becker still insisting, refused to accept the defendant's payment, which could, if necessary, be attested by an oath on the part of the witness. VOODOO MURDER

First in a Series of True Life Detective Stories

"Gavin saw framed in the window the watery eyes of George Hossey."

By G. R. ALEXANDER

THREE months after William Danz, prosperous Philadelphia business man, was laid in his grave, supposedly the victim of a stomach ailment, his widow appeared at police headquarters and requested his body be exhumed.

She based her request on her maid's discovery that morning of a package of arsenic mysteriously hidden away on the top shelf of the Danz kitchen cabinet, saying she could not account for its presence.

The police were reluctant to act, for it was not uncommon for arsenic to be about as a rat poison in those days.

Still, as long as the widow persisted they went through the motions of exhumation and autopsy, and were more than a little surprised when the examination disclosed arsenic in Danz' vital organs in quantities sufficient to kill a horse.

Detective Austin Gavin was put on the case.

The family was one of prominence. Danz, who had amassed a fortune of several hundred thousand dollars in business, had been a member of practically all the important clubs. His widow, who still lived in their three-story marble and brick residence, was noted for her religious and charitable activities.

Gavin's first move was to attempt to learn who had an opportunity to administer the poison. Inquiries along this line disclosed that the victim had been attended in his last illness by Dr. Sawtelle Rankin and nursed by Mrs. Danz, the housemaid and a nephew just out of college.

The information did not seem of particular value, however, for an examination of the will showed that all three members of the household had benefited handsomely, and Dr. Rankin's reputation would tend to place him beyond reproach.

Gavin next turned to the package of arsenic. Besides being his only tangible clew, it was a distinctive one. The poison had been put up in white papers, folded into two-inch square packages resembling medicine. But not a druggist in the city packaged arsenic in such a fashion.

Finally Gavin sought out Dr. Rankin, hoping the physician could remember some suspicious incident that would set him on the trail. He found the doctor disposed to stand by his original diagnosis of gastritis, but willing to co-operate in any way he could.

The physician told him that Danz' fatal illness had begun more than a year before his death with slight stomach disturbances every time the patient drank beer. He had eliminated beer from Danz' diet, but was not sure that his orders had been carried out.

As for anything unusual, the doctor could recall only one thing. That had occurred a few minutes after Danz' death. Left alone with the victim, the doctor had started over to shut a window when a small dark object on the sill had attracted his attention. It was a black rabbit's foot; and fishing around in a pocket he produced it now.

Gavin studied the object with interest, for he knew a black rabbit's foot was associated with the practice of voodooism. Further, recent assignments from the detective bureau had taught him that its unholy rites had recently become wide-spread in the city.

Taking the rabbit's foot, he simulated a pain in the kidneys, and began a series of calls on every hex doctor, quack and charlatan known to the police. And the most bizarre place he visited was the consultation room of a self-stlyed "Herbist" named George Hossey.

This was located at the end of a long corridor on the first floor of an old brick building. The walls were covered with black silk to which were affixed bleached white bones in tiers.

Hossey, himself, was as freakish as his house. A tall, white mustachioed Negro, benign of expression as the title character in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," he was clothed from head to foot in a crimson robe dotted with black owls and cats.

Something about Hossey, the flash of cunning that lurked in his watery, old eyes, fascinated Gavin, and after receiving a bottle of herb extract to cure his phony pain, the detective made it his business to go back again and again for more. Finally Hossey said to him:

"You tell me my medicine is curing you, but you still look sick."

This was the opening Gavin had worked for. Thinking fast, he replied:

"My back's all right, but I'm in trouble. There's a girl. . . . Do you get me?"

"Sure, sure," said Hossey. "But that ain't nothing to worry about. I got a charm that'll fix things up in jig time. But it'll cost you $200 because this charm don't cure the patient."

"It doesn't cure?" stuttered Gavin, simulating horror.

But Hossey would say no more —not until Gavin produced $200. That the detective did the next day and in return received from Hossey a package of square, folded white papers identical with those found in the murdered Danz' home.

"To use this charm safely you just give a little pinch of it to your girl now and then in a glass of beer," said Hossey. "Every time you give it, it will make your girl sick, but she'll get well again and keep on getting sick and well as you keep on feeding it to her."

"But what good will that do me?" said Gavin.

"YOU want to play it safe, don't you? Well, after your girl gets sick a few times, she'll call a doctor. He'll call it gastritis, and when she keeps getting sick and getting well will decide it's chronic. When the doctor says that, you come to me again and I'll give you the final charm. Then you won't have nothing left to worry about."

Gavin took the papers. Every three or four days he reported back to Hossey. In reality, he was having the packages analyzed. The papers contained arsenic.

Eventually, it came time to administer the final charm. Gavin went to Hossey and received it—a paper containing enough arsenic to kill two people, and a black rabbit's foot. Hossey said to him:

"Get your girl sick and let her call the doctor. Then when he leaves, dump the powder into the doctor's medicine and give it to her. She'll start to scream. When she does throw the rabbit's foot out the window. The rabbit's foot is voodoo; it will keep all suspicion off you."

Elated, Gavin hurried to the North Fourth street house and reported his find to the widow.

"You will arrest Hossey, of course," Mrs. Danz said.

"Well, not right away," replied Gavin. "You see he'd never talk. He'd keep quiet not to save the other fellow's skin, but his own."

"Well, I still think you ought to arrest him," said Mrs. Danz, and put on her hat and left.

Gavin remained in the house. He wanted to have another look at the shelf where the poison had been hidden and ask a few questions of the maid. The maid, Lucy, was as close mouthed as a clam.

In fact, when the queries on her length of service in the household and her relations with Danz and his nephew became pointed, she stalked out of the kitchen and into the front part of the house.

But Gavin was determined not to be put off. Pursuing the maid to the living room, he was just about to renew the grilling when the girl pointed to a front window and cried, "Look! Look! Good Heavens! Look!"

Gavin followed her outstretched arm with his eyes. He saw framed in the window the watery eyes of George Hossey!

For only a fleeting second did the voodoo doctor stare at the detective. Then he was gone. But that fleeting second was enough to tell Gavin that his announced plan for a cat-and-mouse game to catch the actual murderer of William Danz was shot to pieces. The only thing left was to arrest Hossey.

It was nightfall when Gavin finally connected up with his men. Stationing most of them at strategic points around the voodoo doctor's house he led the rest stealthily into the long hall on the first floor. As usual, the interior was pitch dark, but Gavin, by listening intently, was able to discern the voices of two persons raised in argument behind the door at the far end of the hall.

Creeping up to it the detective suddenly signaled his men. Stalwart shoulders hit the door. As it gave, a woman's scream mingled with the crash.

Gavin stumbled into the chamber. Simultaneously, two of the officers he had stationed in the back ripped through the black silk wall covering and charged toward him.

Hossey and a black clad, middle-aged woman were between them, Hossey in a towering rage.

"You ain't got nothin' on me," he shouted. "I didn't sell the charm that killed William Danz. This woman stole it off me. She took it and never paid me for it."

The woman uttered no denial. Perhaps it was her guilty conscience; perhaps the remembrances of what Gavin had said that morning. At any rate she collapsed. For the woman Hossey accused was the widow of William Danz.

Both Mrs. Danz and Hossey stood trial for the murder of the woman's husband and both were convicted and sentenced to hang. Neither did, however, Governor Pennypacker commuting their sentences to life imprisonment.

One of his reasons for doing so was that he could not quite reconcile the evidence of her guilt with the fact that it was Mrs. Danz who asked police to investigate in the first place.

Perhaps he would have understood better had Lucy, the housemaid, told what later was proved to be the case—

That Mrs. Danz did not call in police until Lucy threatened to do so.

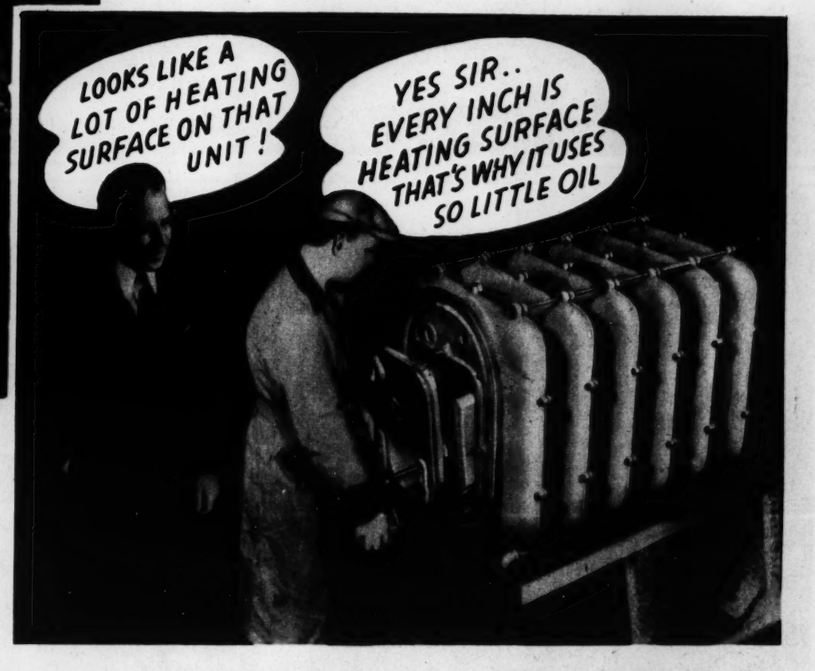
HOLLAND ANNOUNCES AMAZING NEW OIL-FURNACE AIR CONDITIONER!

PRICED NO HIGHER THAN FORCED HEATING ALONE

Yet Combines
WARM AIR FURNACE..AUTOMATIC OIL BURNER and AIR CONDITIONER . . . All Complete in One Compact Unit



AMAZINGLY LOW FIRST COST AND FUEL COST... Yet Insures Perfect Heat in Every Room PLUS Welcome Relief From Discomfort in Hot Summer Months!

TO HOME OWNERS all over America, here's the biggest news in many years. Now you can easily afford the luxury and labor-free comfort of automatic heat and air conditioning in your home. It's actually easier to own the revolutionary new Holland than the lowest priced automobile. Why, then, put up with any less than this sensational new Holland system gives at so little cost?

WINTER AIR CONDITIONING

In winter you have complete air conditioning, without turning a hand. Everything is automatic. And, due to Holland's unique heat-storing construction, there are no "cold 70's," no alternating hot and cold periods. Around the clock, day in and day out, every corner of every room will be heated evenly, continuously and . . . above all—comfortably. The air is periodically withdrawn from your rooms and over 90% of all dust and dirt filtered out. Then, it flows over the revolutionary new Holland Oil Furnace and is warmed the exact degree for which you have set your automatic controls. Finally, the air is thoroughly humidified. Then, it is returned to your rooms—completely conditioned—clean, healthfully moistened, comfortably warmed—effectively circulated — delightfully refreshing and invigorating.

ADDED SUMMER COMFORT

But its benefits are not confined to winter alone. In summer, it will waft gentle currents of clean, filtered air all through your home, to make you feel cool and invigorated. All this is yours—both winter and summer comfort—at costs, for installation and operation, which would be moderate for heating alone!

SILENCE — SAFETY — DEPENDABILITY

The new Holland is amazingly quiet, too. Every moving part is effectively sound-insulated from the rest of the system. There is no audible flame-roar—no popping and banging or expansion and contraction chatter when the burner goes on and off. Noisy "backfiring" has been made impossible by safety construction, eliminating down drafts and gas pockets.

Mechanical dependability is assured by using only equipment proved reliable by the severest of tests and further tested in actual service. Particularly noteworthy is the Automatic Oil Burner designed especially for the NEW Holland Oil Furnace and fully coordinated with it. They operate as a single unit with truly remarkable reliability and efficiency and economy. In short, you have every advantage of using oil, with every conceivable disadvantage gone, including the once prohibitive cost.

TAILOR-MADE SYSTEM

But mechanical efficiency and superior construction alone cannot insure satisfactory results. The way equipment is installed is at least equally important. It is so important, in fact, that Holland will not entrust it to any outside organization. The first step is a thorough analysis of each room's heating and air conditioning needs made by Holland's own trained engineer. Next, he plans a complete system, based on exact scientific knowledge—not a random estimate. Then, to make your satisfaction doubly sure, the local engineer's plan is carefully checked by our factory experts.

The installation is then made by our own skilled mechanics—specialists who do nothing but install Holland Equipment.

Finally, the Holland Furnace Company fully guarantees satisfactory performance of the system as installed. In short, you know you will get what you pay for when you buy from Holland.

EASY TERMS—SMALL PAYMENTS ON LONG TERM PLAN

It is so easy, too—to own this sensational new Holland. You virtually make your own terms and all financing is done by Holland. No delay—no red tape. We handle everything. You deal only with the Holland Furnace Company from start to finish.

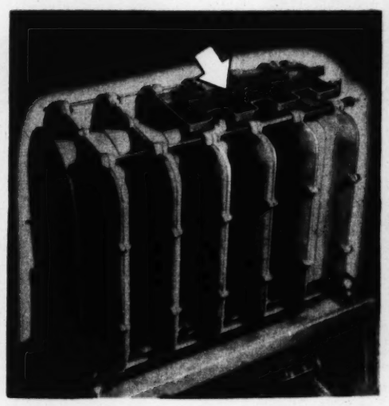
CONSULT THE HOLLAND ENGINEER

Why not at least get all the facts? Ask the local Holland engineer to make a thorough survey of your heating needs and give you an accurate estimate. There is no expense or obligation.

REVOLUTIONARY NEW HEATING UNIT STAYS HOT LONGER..CUTS FUEL COSTS

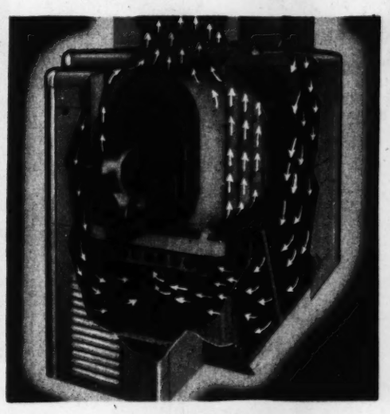
Long life and the utmost in fuel economy is assured by this heating unit of Hollandized cast metal. It takes no longer to heat up than the usual combination of heavy fire brick and light sheet metal. However, this metal literally stores up heat which continues radiating into the air around the unit long after the burner stops. Consequently, the burner does not have to run nearly so often nor so long at a time, which results in a marked reduction of fuel costs.

Although amazingly compact, this unit actually has greater heating surface than many much larger ones and every square inch is active heating surface. Every inch of that surface is intensely heated, too, by Holland's patented fire pot, which spreads the flame evenly to all parts of the combustion chamber. Heating capacity is further increased, by the exclusive Holland heat-retaining sections. Special design, moreover, leaves no place for gases to accumulate, so that noisy backfiring is impossible. Both material and construction tend to muffle sound, making this unit exceedingly quiet.



DEPENDABLE CASCADE HUMIDIFIER

Nothing is more important in winter air conditioning than properly humidifying the air. In the NEW Holland this is accomplished by a clever adaptation of the famous Holland Cascade Humidifier that has proved its dependability by years of service in Holland Coal Burning Furnaces. It automatically supplies more moisture with increased heat to maintain an ideal balance. It is the only type of many which Holland engineers have tested that cannot be put out of operation by lime deposits or by mechanical failure.



HEAT-SAVING—AIR-CIRCULATION

In ordinary practice much air leaks out of the system after being heated because it passes under pressure between the furnace and the casing. Holland eliminates this loss by having two casings instead of one. Air is drawn down between the two under suction so there can be no outward leakage and then passed through filters. It is also preheated in passing the inner casing, so that heat ordinarily lost by radiation or by being absorbed in insulating materials is fully utilized. Lower heat loss means lower fuel costs.

HOLLAND CONVERSION BURNER at Exceptionally Low Price

Makes Any Furnace Burn Oil Automatically

If your present coal-burning heating system is too efficient to consider replacing it you can still have the labor-free convenience of automatic oil-heat at surprisingly low cost. The Holland Conversion Burner is especially designed to transform any furnace or boiler into a completely automatic burning plant.

Being rubber mounted, it is extremely quiet. It is of rugged construction for maximum dependability and is, moreover, provided with all necessary automatic equipment to assure complete safety and reliability at all times. As installed by Holland, this burner will give years of trouble-free service and labor-free comfort with real heating economy. Obtain full information from the Holland Factory Branch near you.

THE ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH BEAUTICIANS in BRAZIL

Makeup that turns encroaching wrinkles into arabesques.

As in more sophisticated nations, the desire to go nature one better doesn't cease with youth.

Facial and body decorations employed by Indian women of Brazil give plenty of play to individuality.

A design that emphasizes the natural facial lineaments—and adds a touch of whimsy.

Urban beauty experts take precautions to avoid hinting at a mustache; they seek to emphasize only the contours of the lips. Brazilian make-up knows no such inhibitions.

As in other countries, women of considerable natural beauty avoid ornate makeup. The lines of this design have a close relationship to the planes of the face.

A Kaduveo woman, camera shy and unwilling to allow herself to be photographed, sketched the two designs shown above and at left. In the upper pattern note the elaborate asymmetrical ornamentation of the lips and the careful disguise of wrinkles on the forehead.

"NO, I CAN'T. YOU TELL HER, MADGE"

"Not me. I bet Doris"

"Why should I? Anne's the one"

JOAN must be told! But who will tell her—and how? No wonder each one of her friends tries to pass the problem on to the next one!

It's a hard, thankless thing to tell a girl that she is personally unpleasant to be with on account of underarm perspiration odor. It seems inexcusable that she should have to be told, these modern days!

It's so unnecessary to offend in this way. For you can be safe all day, every day, in just half a minute. With Mum!

Harmless to clothing. You can use this dainty deodorant cream any time, you know—after dressing, just as well as before. For it's perfectly harmless to clothing. Mum has been awarded the Textile Approval Seal of the American Institute of Laundering as being harmless to fabrics.

Soothing to skin. It's soothing to the skin, too. You can shave your underarms and use Mum at once.

Doesn't prevent natural perspiration. Another important thing—Mum doesn't prevent the natural perspiration itself—just the unpleasant odor of perspiration.

Are you making it uncomfortable for your friends by your own carelessness? Play fair by making Mum a daily habit. Bristol-Myers Co., 630 Fifth Ave., New York.

Now! REAL MAYONNAISE MADE WITH "FRESH-PRESS" SALAD OIL

IT'S THE FRESHEST THERE IS!

"And here's why, ladies! Mayonnaise can never be fresher than the salad oil it's made with. And Hellmann's is made with 'FRESH-PRESS' Salad Oil which we ourselves prepare just as it's needed every day. It goes straight into our double-whipper—fresher by far than any salad oil you could buy. There it is creamed to luscious smoothness with freshly broken whole eggs, our own special blend of vinegars and choicest spices. This makes Hellmann's the finest, creamiest, freshest mayonnaise there is—the only mayonnaise that's made with 'FRESH-PRESS' Salad Oil!"

EVERY SPOONFUL REAL MAYONNAISE!

For really delicious-tasting salads you must have real mayonnaise. Ordinary dressings can't possibly equal the creamy goodness . . . the full, rich flavor of Hellmann's Real Mayonnaise. How could they? Hellmann's is all mayonnaise—not a substitute. It contains no cooked or starchy fillers.

RUSHED FRESH FROM OUR KITCHENS!

Hellmann's Mayonnaise is made fresh every day, sealed in air-tight crystal jars and rushed to your grocer. It's the fastest-selling mayonnaise in America . . . you always get it fresh!

Ask for Hellmann's at your grocer's tomorrow. See for yourself how delicious salads taste when you use this Real Mayonnaise—the only one made with "FRESH-PRESS" Salad Oil!

CURLEY HARPER

AT LAKESPUR

BY LYMAN YOUNG

DON'T LET FROST'S BRAGGING GET YOUR GOAT, HORACE - WHEN HE GETS STARTED JUST LET IT GO INTO ONE EAR AND OUT THE OTHER

THAT'S EASY FOR YOU TO SAY, CURLEY -YOU'VE NEVER HAD THE "PLEASURE" OF LISTENING TO HIS LINE

HI - HORACE - WAIT UP AND I'LL JOIN YOU FOR A WALK

HE WOULD HAVE TO SHOW UP —

DID I EVER TELL YOU ABOUT THE TIME I SPENT WITH A CIRCUS DURING MY SCHOOL VACATION?

I'LL BET YOU WERE A SWELL CLOWN, FROST —

CLOWN, NOTHING, I WENT IN FOR WILD ANIMAL-TRAINING! WAIT! DON'T YOU WANT TO HEAR ABOUT IT?

COME IN SO CURLEY CAN ENJOY IT, TOO -

HI - HARPER, I WANT YOU AND HORACE TO LISTEN TO MY CIRCUS EXPERIENCE

HELLO, FELLOWS

DON'T TELL US YOU DARED ENTER A CAGE OF WILD RABBITS —

WILD RABBITS, NOTHING! IT WAS INTO A CAGE OF FEROCIOUS TIGERS I WENT! THERE WERE SIX SNARLING BEASTS IN FRONT OF ME —

- I HELD A GAT IN ONE HAND AND A CHAIR IN THE OTHER - I HAD THOSE BIG CATS BUFFALOED, HARPER, BUT ONE DAY THEY GANGED UP AND POUNCED ON ME! DID I BACK OUT OF THE CAGE? NOT LITTLE OLD ANGUS FROST! I SIMPLY—

YOU'RE A FINE PAL TO SNEAK OUT AND LEAVE ME LISTENING TO FROST'S LINE —

I HATED TO DO IT, CURLEY, BUT I FIGURED YOU'D LET IT ALL GO INTO ONE EAR AND OUT THE OTHER —!

TIM TYLER'S LUCK

By LYMAN YOUNG

IDGEE AND HIS PIGMY HERD HAVE RUN OFF WITH YOUNG TIM — THE FLIGHT HAS BEEN INTERRUPTED BY THE APPEARANCE OF ZEBRA-RIDING SAVAGES!

THEY'RE SURROUNDING US —

W-WE'RE PRISONERS -GEE

THEY THINK THIS WHITE PIGMY ELEPHANT IS SOME KIND OF A GOD!

WHAT'S THAT IN THE DISTANCE?

DANCING TRIBESMEN! MAYBE THEY CAN TELL ME WHERE TIM IS —

MIOBI! JARO!

WHITE WARRIOR COME!-!

TURN AROUND! DON'T FOLLOW THEM —

LET THEM RUN AWAY -TURN AROUND, ELEPHANT!

THIS WAY FASTER, DOCTORS FIND— MORE COMPLETE RELIEF

IF you don't know the speedy relief Bromo-Seltzer brings to splitting headaches—do try it. Here is what it does:

1. DOCTORS' TESTS recently proved it stops next-morning headaches faster than any other remedy they tested.
2. SETTLES STOMACH—relieves upset stomach, nausea and that "dark brown taste."
3. SOOTHES NERVES—calms overtaxed nervous system. Relieves your sense of strain and fatigue.
4. REDUCES EXCESS LACTIC ACID in the blood caused by overindulgence. Helps restore your normal alkaline reserve.

FOR WASHING CLOTHES CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS IN THE BLUE BOX

HOW CONCENTRATED SUPER SUDS WASHES CLOTHES HOSPITAL-CLEAN!

THIS new laundry soap gives you cleaner, whiter, sweeter-smelling washes; cuts time and work almost in half; and REMOVES DANGEROUS GERMS!

This is important, for doctors know that germs in bed linen, towels, handkerchiefs can spread infection through the family!

Here's how Concentrated Super Suds gets clothes Hospital Clean:

1. SOFTENS WATER INSTANTLY. This new laundry soap gives quick, rich, long-lasting suds even in hard water.
2. SOAKS OUT DIRT without scrubbing. These lively, active suds soak out even stubborn grime and grease. Yet colors are brighter—hands stay lovely.
3. REMOVES GERMS that physicians agree lurk in every family wash. This does not mean sterile, but it does mean that most dangerous germs are removed or killed in the washing process.

Get the new soap, Concentrated Super Suds in the blue box right away—and wash your clothes Hospital-Clean!

DOROTHY HARGREAVES, FAMOUS NEW YORK BEAUTY EXPERT, SAYS:

When women come to me with hands ruined by dishwashing, I recommend Super Suds in the Red Box. For I know this soap is particularly mild. Besides, Super Suds is made in tiny hollow beads which dissolve immediately, completely. So there are no undissolved soap particles left in the water to irritate skin . . to make hands red and rough.

Dorothy Hargreaves

CUTS DISHWASHING TIME IN HALF, TOO!

Super Suds in the Red Box is so mild that it is actually a beauty treatment for the hands! Yet it has no equal for cutting grease. And because its tiny hollow beads dissolve instantly and completely, Super Suds leaves no soap film on your dishes to streak and dull them. A hot rinse . . . they dry sparkling clean without wiping! You're through in half the time!

The Most Sensational Finish under FIRE in GOLFING HISTORY

67 73 69 73

THE TRUE TEST OF A CHAMPION IS HIS ABILITY TO BATTLE AGAINST ODDS AND WIN. TONY MANERO, GEHRIG, DOROTHY POYNTON HILL — ALL CHAMPIONS — TELL YOU THAT HEALTHY NERVES AND GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION ARE THE CHAMPIONS' STAND-BY. THEY SMOKE CAMELS. CAMELS ARE MILDER — BETTER FOR STEADY SMOKERS.

GOLFDOM'S COVETED CUP

How TONY MANERO CAME FROM BEHIND TO TRIUMPH IN THE NATIONAL OPEN...

OF COURSE, TONY, YOU'RE GOING INTO THE NATIONAL OPEN THIS YEAR

OH, I GUESS SO, MISS PETERS. BUT YOU KNOW WHAT I'LL BE UP AGAINST —ALL THE TOP-FLIGHT STARS IN THE GAME! I'M SET TO DO MY BEST THOUGH

SCORES FOR QUALIFYING ROUND

YOU'RE IN, TONY, AND HOW!

CHURNED AS NEVER BEFORE, THE BALTUSROL GOLF CLUB'S COURSE YIELDS TO NO FEWER THAN FOURTEEN PAR SMASHERS. MANERO, IN THE QUALIFYING ROUND, IS RIGHT THERE BEHIND THE LEADERS

THOSE NIBLICK WIELDERS AREN'T SHOWING THAT GOLF COURSE ANY MERCY— BOY, WHAT SCORES!

HEY, JOE, MANERO GOT A 69 FOR HIS SECOND ROUND

WOW! THAT'S 4 UNDER PAR

AT PRESS QUARTERS AFTER THE FIRST 36 HOLES—

STILL STARTING AS A RANK OUTSIDER, TONY TEES OFF LATE IN THE AFTERNOON FOR THE FINAL ROUND. HE HAS NO GALLERY APPLAUDING HIM, WHEN---

IT'S MANERO

HE'S HOT!

LISTEN TO THEM CHEER!!

TONY, BY SMASHING AWAY AT PAR, HAD CAUGHT THE LEADER AT THE 15TH HOLE. THE NEWS OF HIS SENSATIONAL GOLF SPREAD LIKE WILDFIRE OVER THE COURSE AND NOW HE WAS SURROUNDED BY A CHEERING GALLERY

HE'S ON IN TWO — A BIRDIE THREE GIVES HIM THE LEAD

HE PLAYED THAT SHOT LIKE THE CHAMP HE IS

IT STOPPED RIGHT AT THE PIN!

AND THE GREENS ARE PLENTY FAST

THAT TRAP WOULD SCARE ME

WHAT NERVES! WHAT A SHOT!

RIGHT OVER THE TRAP

THE DOTTED LINE INDICATES FLIGHT IF TONY WANTED TO PLAY SAFE— BUT HE WENT FOR THE HOLE INSTEAD, A BEAUTIFUL #3 IRON

I'D GIVE A THOUSAND BUCKS FOR CONTROL LIKE HIS!

HE CAN GIVE THEM ALL LESSONS IN GRIT!

LET'S MOVE TO THE NEXT GREEN AND GET A GOOD VIEW —THIS IS WORTH SEEING—

HE SINKS HIS PUTT FOR A BIRDIE 3 AND THE CROWD GOES WILD. MANERO'S IN FRONT. WILL HE STAND THE STRAIN?

THE SUSPENSE AT THE LAST TWO HOLES IS TERRIFIC. TONY HAS TO WAIT 5 MINUTES WHILE THE COURSE IS BEING CLEARED

COME ON, TONY, HAVE A SMOKE— YOU'RE IN. JUST TAKE IT EASY

THANKS. A CAMEL —THAT'LL SET ME RIGHT

HE GETS HIS PAR ON THE 17TH—

ARE WE SEEING GOLF OR ARE WE SEEING GOLF!

I THOUGHT FOR SURE HE'D CRACK UP ON THE LAST TWO HOLES—INSTEAD, THAT DRIVE WAS AS STRAIGHT AS A STRING

...ON THE HOME GREEN HE FACES A LONG PUTT. IF HE MAKES IT IT WILL GIVE HIM A 67—5 UNDER PAR AND A WORLD'S RECORD SCORE OF 282!

HE SANK IT!

THAT PUTS THE CUP IN TONY'S LAP

PLUNK

Copyright, 1937, R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company

HOW DO YOU MANAGE TO BEAR UP UNDER THE TERRIFIC STRAIN OF WINNING THE NATIONAL OPEN? DOESN'T IT MAKE YOU FEEL ALL TENSE AND UNSETTLED?

I DON'T FEEL THAT WAY AT ALL. AND YOU'RE OFFERING ME THE ANSWER IN THAT PACK OF CAMELS

THAT NIGHT, FETED AT A CELEBRATION

I WENT THROUGH EVERY STAGE OF TENSION AND NERVOUSNESS IN THE LONG GRIND. BUT I COULD COUNT ON MY HEALTHY NERVES AND GOOD DIGESTION! I'M A CAMEL SMOKER—A HEARTY CAMEL SMOKER. 'FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE—SMOKE CAMELS' HITS THE BALL RIGHT ON THE NOSE!

Yours Tony Manero

GOOD PHYSICAL CONDITION COUNTS MORE THAN EVER TODAY

IF YOU FEEL UPSET AT TIMES—DON'T ENJOY YOUR MEALS—DON'T HAVE A SENSE OF WELL-BEING AFTER EATING, FOLLOW THIS SUGGESTION: GET PLENTY OF FRESH AIR, PLENTY OF SLEEP, AND SMOKE CAMELS AT MEALTIMES AND AFTERWARDS—"FOR DIGESTION'S SAKE!" BY STEPPING UP THE FLOW OF DIGESTIVE FLUIDS AND INCREASING ALKALINITY, CAMELS HELP DIGESTION RUN MORE SMOOTHLY. YOU ENJOY EATING ALL THE MORE AND YOU ALSO ENJOY A SENSE OF WELL-BEING AFTER EATING.

CAMELS ARE MADE FROM FINER, MORE EXPENSIVE TOBACCOS—TURKISH AND DOMESTIC—THAN ANY OTHER POPULAR BRAND

JUST TASTE THAT RICHER FLAVOR

from the tender hearts of the corn!

HERE'S the grandest-tasting breakfast treat a family ever had . . . a bowl of Post Toasties with rich milk or cream!

That's because Post Toasties are made from the sweet, tender hearts of the corn, where most of the rich flavor is stored. And each golden-brown flake is toasted double-crisp in order to keep its crunchy goodness longer in milk or cream.

Post Toasties are great for after school, too—or for a bedtime snack.

THEY'RE STILL TALKING

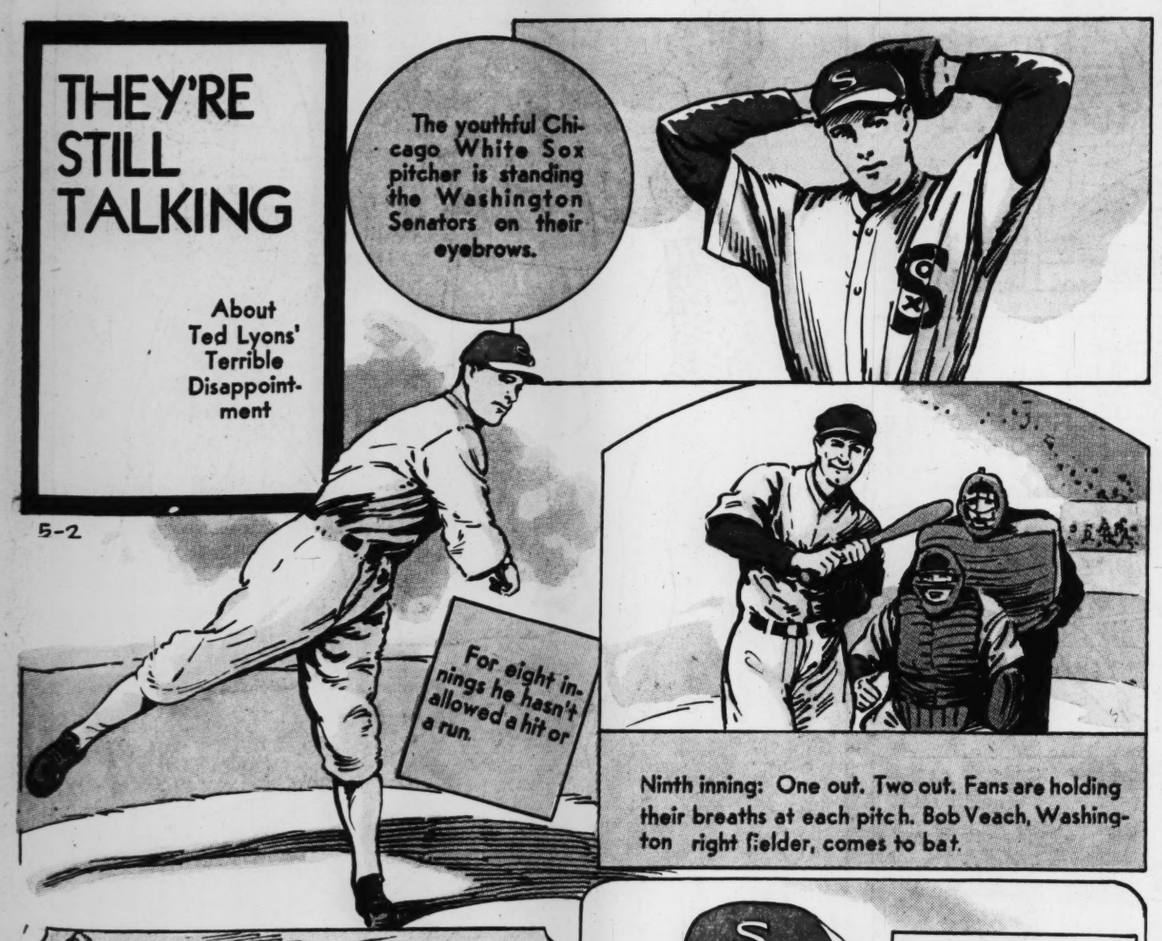
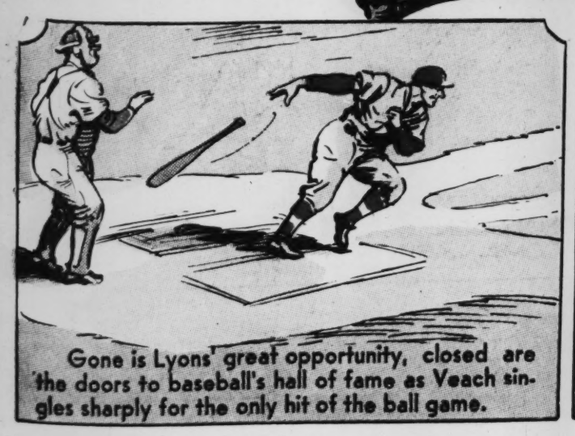
About Ted Lyons' Terrible Disappointment

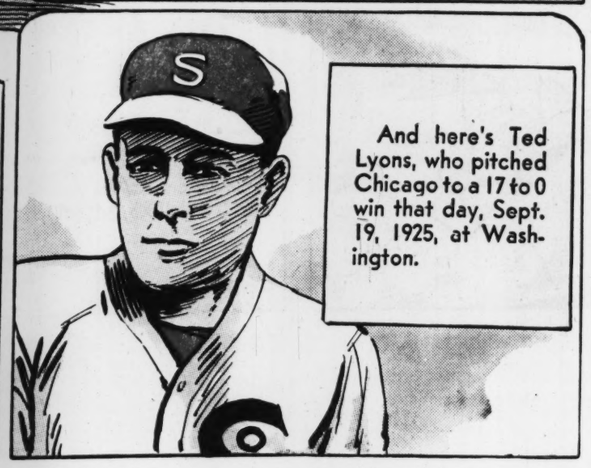
The youthful Chicago White Sox pitcher is standing the Washington Senators on their eyebrows.



Ninth inning: One out. Two out. Fans are holding their breaths at each pitch. Bob Veach, Washington right fielder, comes to bat.



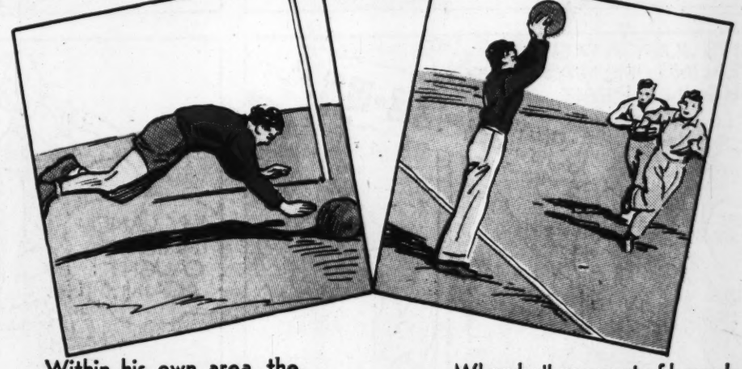
Gone is Lyons' great opportunity, closed are the doors to baseball's hall of fame as Veach singles sharply for the only hit of the ball game.



And here's Ted Lyons, who pitched Chicago to a 17 to 0 win that day, Sept. 19, 1925, at Washington.

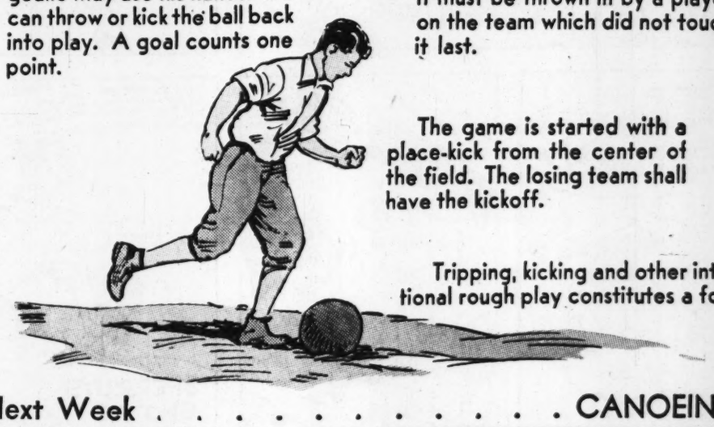
Soccer . . . . . By NED BRANT

More Fundamentals



Within his own area, the goalie may use his hands. He can throw or kick the ball back into play. A goal counts one point.

When ball goes out of bounds it must be thrown in by a player on the team which did not touch it last.



The game is started with a place-kick from the center of the field. The losing team shall have the kickoff.

Tripping, kicking and other intentional rough play constitutes a foul.

HOW COULD LOVE LIKE OURS FADE SO FAST ?

Use Lifebuoy regularly to protect freshness . . . guard your skin beauty

MILLIONS of American women—and men—have learned the real secret of lasting freshness . . , The sure way to end "B. O."... More of them use Lifebuoy for the bath than any other soap . . . 120,000 interviews by eight leading magazines reveal these facts!

Lifebuoy is deservedly an overwhelming favorite... It contains a special purifying ingredient not present in any other well-known toilet soap. Its abundant lather penetrates the pores, removes all impurities — leaves you feeling extra-clean—because you are extra-clean.

Millions of dainty American women swear by Lifebuoy for complexion care, too. Its lather is milder than many so-called "beauty soaps" and "baby soaps" —20% milder by scientific test on all types of skins—dry, oily and medium.

But you try Lifebuoy! "Use it a week and you'll use it always!" That's what any Lifebuoy user will tell you!

Tests prove that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath!

Read how Colgate Dental Cream protects you

TESTS among 2,152 men and women (of all ages and from all walks of life) prove that 76% of all people over the age of 17 have bad breath! Tests also prove that most bad breath comes from improperly cleaned teeth!

Ordinary cleansing methods, which merely polish the exposed surfaces of your teeth, fail to remove the decaying food deposits in hidden crevices between your teeth. And these deposits, tests prove, are the source of most bad breath, dull, dingy teeth, and much tooth decay.

But Colgate Dental Cream has a special penetrating foam which gets into every tiny crevice—emulsifying and washing away those food and acid deposits that cause bad breath. And at the same time, Colgate's soft, safe polishing agent gently yet thoroughly cleans and brightens enamel—makes your teeth sparkle!

So brush your teeth, gums, tongue with Colgate Dental Cream at least twice daily and have cleaner, brighter teeth—sweeter, purer breath. Why not get a tube today!

—"SHE COULDN'T 'PICK UP,' IT SEEMED!" WRITES MRS. H. S. MARTY OF MILWAUKEE, WIS.

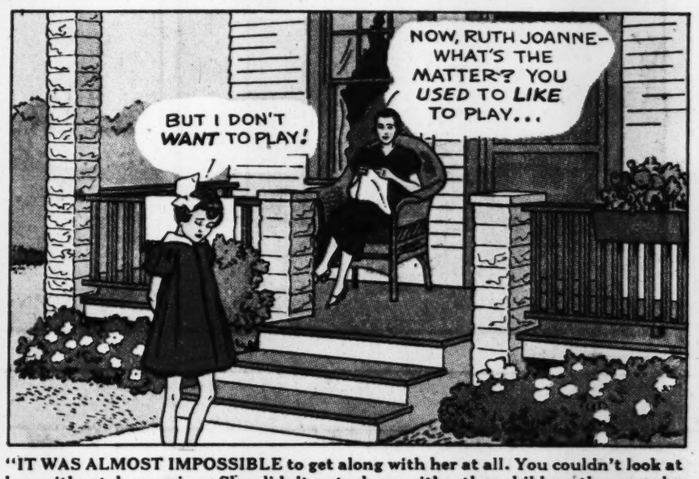
"RUTH JOANNE," writes Mrs. H. S. Marty, "took sick about a year ago. We had gone down in the country to visit some relatives, and during our visit I relaxed somewhat on her diet. She ate more candy than was good for her . . ."

WHATEVER THE CAUSE of her illness, Mrs. Marty adds that Ruth Joanne "was good and sick. We called the doctor, of course. Her stomach was upset. She developed a high fever and vomited everything she ate. I was frightened almost to death. Then, later . . .

"AFTER SHE BEGAN TO FEEL A LITTLE BETTER, we came home. But even at home, she couldn't seem to pick up at all. She just drifted around the house in a languid way . . . had no pep—gave us none of her sweet smiles which we'd been accustomed to . . .



"IT WAS ALMOST IMPOSSIBLE to get along with her at all. You couldn't look at her without her crying. She didn't get along with other children the way she used to, either. She didn't even seem to want to play or to have any friends . . .

"SHE ATE HARDLY any solid food. I tried filling her up on milk, but either that didn t agree with her or didn't give her enough nourishment. She was so finicky.

"I DID EVERYTHING I could but she kept right on losing weight. She was only a shadow of the girl she used to be. I felt like crying myself when I saw her so thin and drawn looking . . .

"AT NIGHT—she slept restlessly, tossing and squirming, and was awake half the night crying. Time after time she woke us up with her nightmares. Then in the morning she looked tired.

"WELL, ONE DAY I read an advertisement for Ovaltine in a magazine . . . We had tried several other treatments without good results. Right then and there I decided . . .

". . . TO TRY OVALTINE. That very afternoon I purchased a can. . . . And did Ruth Joanne like it!

"OVALTINE DID WONDERS for her. It seemed to be just what she needed. She picked up immediately. In a few days looked much brighter. Slept soundly. In the morning she woke up cheerful. Ovaltine gave her an appetite. She won her class record for not missing a day . . . Doctor says, 'I'd give my right arm for a girl as healthy as that.'" Mrs H L Marty

How Ovaltine helps give Children a better appetite— and increase their Weight!

THE WAY Ovaltine helps give children a better appetite is three-fold:

1. It supplies the appetite-stimulating factor, Vitamin B—without which good appetite is impossible.
2. It helps the stomach to digest starches. When food leaves the stomach sooner, hunger comes back sooner.
3. It prevents milk from forming thick, heavy curds—and so aids in milk's digestion. It also makes milk more palatable.

And, in addition, it is extremely nourishing and digestible in itself, and supplies certain "protective" factors the child needs.

Thus Ovaltine is an excellent food-supplement for children. Just mix 2 or 3 teaspoonfuls in a cup of milk (either hot or cold) and give it to your child often. He'll relish its taste.

No one could guarantee that it will help every child. Yet—from the evidence—isn't it worth a trial?

Do try it. For a month at least. See if, at the end of that time, your child hasn't gained—isn't eating his meals better than before.

You can get OVALTINE at all grocery and drug stores. Get a can!

BRITISH TAKE REFUGEES FROM BILBAO INTO FRANCE

Destroyer Faulknor Arrives at St. Jean de Luz With First Fugitives From Beseiged City on Bay of Biscay.

FRENCH VESSEL BRINGS 72 MORE

Gen. Franco Protests to England Against Evacuation—Rebels Push on to Within Eight Miles of Town.

By the Associated Press.

ST. JEAN DE LUZ, French-Spanish Border, May 3.—The British destroyer Faulknor arrived here tonight from Bilbao, with first refugees from that besieged Basque capital.

There were 12 in the group, including the British Consul and Vice-Consul. The French vessel Aisne arrived late with the first large group, a contingent of 72 persons.

British and French warships patrolled the Bay of Biscay today as plans went forward for the evacuation of women and children in Bilbao, which is threatened by the advancing armies of the Spanish insurgent General, Francisco Franco.

The insurgent troops were reported to have reached the edge of Las Arenas, only eight miles from Bilbao and between the city and the sea, after smashing their way through a Government defense line.

From Las Arenas, wide roads run to Bilbao along the Nervion River. Bilbao's only other exit to the sea is along the west bank of the Nervion to Castro Urdiales.

Strictest secrecy surrounded the evacuation plans, following the refusal of Gen. Franco to agree to the removal of women and children from the city on merchant ships now in the harbor, or to guarantee insurgent battleships would not attack the refugee ships going to France.

Franco's Protest to Britain.

Gen. Franco lodged a vigorous protest with Great Britain last night against the evacuation. Diplomatic sources reported the delivery of the insurgent note to the British Embassy in Hendaye.

Gen. Franco charged in it, they said, that evacuation would aid the Basque defense of the seaport in violation of the European "hands-off Spain" accord.

He maintained Bilbao was a military objective and neutral nations had no right to remove the population as this would eliminate a burden from the Basques and permit them to concentrate on fighting.

British Ships to Aid.

Reports indicated nine British freighters had left or would soon leave Bilbao with some 5000 women and children.

With Gen. Emilio Mola's insurgents reported in Las Arenas, there was no surety that more of the populace—swollen to at least 350,000 by the influx of refugees—could be taken to safety.

The British battleship Royal Oak, four British destroyers and a French sloop were at St. Jean de Luz, ready to guard refugee vessels once they have passed outside the Spanish three-mile limit.

The United States destroyer Kane was expected to reach the north coast of Spain Wednesday. William E. Chapman, United States Consul in Bilbao, who has been making his headquarters in St. Jean de Luz, said there were "no continental Americans in Bilbao, only Filipinos and Puerto Ricans." He said he was not planning to return to Bilbao from St. Jean de Luz.

Debarkation in France.

The first of the Bilbao women and children were expected to reach France during the day. Pauillac, on the Gironde River midway between Bordeaux and the sea, was designated by the French Government as the point of debarkation.

Authorities asked for troops to aid in feeding the refugees and in sending them to havens in the interior of France. The refugees were to have medical examinations and vaccination aboard the ships.

Spanish Government sympathizers found hope for the rescue of more of Bilbao's civilians in communiques from the semi-autonomous Basque Government, joined with the Madrid-Valencia administration against the insurgents. The
